

POETRY.

THE SLEEPERS.

By Miss M. A. BROWN.

They are sleeping! Who are sleeping?
Children, wearied with their play;
For the stars of night are peeping,
And the sun hath sunk away.
As the dew upon the blossom,
Bows them on their slender stem,
So, as light as their own bosoms,
Balm sleep hath conquered them.

They are sleeping! Who are sleeping?
Mortals, compassed round with woe,
Eyelids, wearied with weeping,
Close for very weakness now;
And that short relief from sorrow,
Harrassed nature shall sustain,
Till they wake again to-morrow,
Strengthened to contend with pain!

They are sleeping! Who are sleeping?
Captives in their gloomy cells;
Yet sweet dreams are o'er them creeping,
With their many-coloured spells.
All they love—again they clasp them;
Feel again their long-lost joys;
But the haste with which they grasp them
Every fairy form destroys.

They are sleeping! Who are sleeping?
Misers, by their hoarded gold;
And in fancy now are heaping
Genies and pearls of price untold.
Golden chains their limbs encumber,
Diamonds seem before them strown;
But they wake from their slumber,
And the splendid dream is flown.

They are sleeping! Who are sleeping?
Pause a moment, softly tread;
Anxious friends are fondly keeping
Virgin's by the sleeper's bed!
Other hopes are all forsaken,
One remains,—that slumber deep,
Speak not, lest the slumberer wake
From that sweet—that saving sleep.

They are sleeping! Who are sleeping?
Thousands who have passed away,
From a world of woe and weeping,
To the regions of decay!
Safe they rest, the green turf under;
Sighing breeze, or music's breath,
Winter's wind, or summer's thunder,
Cannot break the sleep of death.

From the Winter's Wreath.

'TIS HOME WHERE'ER THE HEART IS.

'Tis home where'er the heart is,
Where'er its loved one dwell,
In cities or in cottages,
Through haunts or mossy cell;
The heart's a rover ever,
And thus on waves or wind,
The maiden with her lover walks,
The mother with her child.

'Tis bright where'er the heart is,
Its fairy spells can bring
Fresh fountains to the wilderness,
And to the desert spring.
There are green isles in each ocean,
O'er which affection glides;
And a haven on each shore,
When Love's the star that guides.

'Tis free where'er the heart is,
No chains nor dungeon dim
May check the mind's aspiring,
The spirit's pealing hymn!
The heart that gives its beauty,
Its glory, and its power,
'Tis sunlight to its rippling stream,
And soft dew to its shower.

MISCELLANY.

AN IRISH SCHOOL.

The following curious account of an Irish School is from the speech of Mr. Gordon, at the late Anniversary of the London Hibernia Society.

"Once, when, literally on a School hunting excursion in the county of Mayo, accompanied by a Clergyman of the district, and on its wildest and most solitary regions in the vicinity of Croagh Patrick, that celebrated resort of superstition, he asked, 'Was there not an Hibernian School in that vicinity?' The reply was in the affirmative; and he was directed to look towards a something that had the appearance of a habitation, but scarcely one fit for residence of human beings. He would endeavour to describe it. One side of the dwelling consisted of a huge granite rock about nine feet high; the other three were mud walls—the roof covered with turf; the whole forming an area within twelve feet square. He approached, and observed the Schoolmaster standing in the doorway; no other aperture was in the hut, nor was there any other possible place for a Master to stand; for within the area, crammed together as compact as bees in a hive, were eighty-seven children of different ages—a few girls among them. It may seem incredible how such a number could be stowed away in the area of twelve feet square; but the fact was, a small shelf or gallery was stuck up round the walls, and on this shelf were seated the little fellows, who, if left alone, could scarcely have escaped suffocation. On my enquiring of the Master whether the Scriptures were read in School, he looked at me as if he thought I was very ignorant of the Hibernia Society's regulations, and said—'To be sure, Sir they are.' 'Call up your Scripture Class,' said I. 'Hallow!' said he, 'You Scripture boys and girls, stand up.' This was accomplished, not without some difficulty, and up stood two-and-thirty of his pupils, who read and gave their answers to the Scripture questions with fluency, and an evident perception of the meaning of the text, and evinced how perseveringly and faithfully the Master had discharged his duty."

Early in December last, a Connecticut paper says, a pumpkin headed "Ichabod Crane" sort of a Jonathan came into our office, for the purpose, as he said, of "seeing us make papers." After edifying himself amazingly for an hour or two, by examining the wonderful apparatus of a printing establishment, he must needs try his skill at handling types. Jonathan accordingly laid his paw upon a short article put in type for insertion, and tumbled "A Dreadful accident" into a heap of pi. "By gosh," says he, "I didn't think the ternal things would squash down so darn'd easy." Now, says the Con. editor, aside from delaying our work, it makes the devil [we don't mean old Nick himself but the one attached to our office] grumble; and we prefer to have people who favour us with their company, keep their hands as well as the capes of their cloaks and great coats, at a proper distance from matter which is put in type; for although it requires some labor to set up types, it is a very easy thing to upset them.

A miser was lately found dead in Paris, on a filthy bed, still grasping the key of his coffers; he had hoarded about 600,000 francs, 100,000 of which were expended in different kitchen utensils.
