THERE'S JOY WHEN THE ROSY MORNING.

BY MISS SUSANNA STRICKLAND.

THERE'S joy when the rosy morning floods
The purple east with light;
And the zephyr sweeps from a thousand buds
The pearly tears of night;
There's joy when the lark exulting springs
To pour his matin lay;
From the blossomed thorn when the black-bird sings,
And the merry month is May.

There's joy abroad when the wintry snow
Melts, as it ne'er had been;
When the cowslips bud, and the violets blow,
And the leaves are fresh and green;
There's joy in the swallow's airy flight:
In the Cuckoo's blithsome cry;
When the floating clouds reflect the light
Of evening's glowing sky.

There's joy in April's balmy showers,
'Mid gleams of sunshine shed;
When May brings forth a thousand flowers
To deck the earth's green bed;
There's joy when the pale pale moon comes out
With all her starry train:
When the woods return the reaper's shout,
And echo shouts again.

There's joy in childhood's silvery voice,
When the laugh rings blithe and clear,
And the sounds that bid young hearts rejoice
Are music to the ear.
There's joy in the sweet romance of youth,
Ere care a shadow throws
Across the radiant brow of truth,
To mar the soul's repose.

There's joy in the youthful lover's breast,
When his bride by the altar stands,
When his trembling lips to her's are pressed,
And the priest has joined their hands.
There's joy—deed joy—in the mother's heart
When she clasps her first-born son,
And the tears of holy rapture start
To bless the lovely one.

There's joy! above—around—beneath—
But, 'tis a fleeting ray;
The world's stern strife, the hand of death,
Bid mortal hopes decay;
But there's a deeper joy than earth
With all her charms can give,
Which marks the spirit's second birth,
When man but dies to live!

MISCELLANY.

ANECDOTE OF THE CELEBRATED MR. RALPH ERSKINE,

The Father of the Scottish Secession.

By the author of the "Histories of the Scottish Rebellions," "The Traditions of Edinburgh," &c.

The only amusement in which this celebrated man indulged was playing on the violin. He was so great a proficient on this instrument, and so often beguiled his leisure hours with it, that the people of Dunfermline believed he composed his sermons to its tones, as a poet writes a song to a particular air. They also tell the following traditionary anecdote connected with the subject.—A poor man in one of the neighbouring Parishes, having a child to baptise, resolved not to employ his own clergyman, with whom he was at issue on certain points of doctrine, but to have the office performed by some minister of whose tenets fame gave a better report. With the child in his arms therefore, and attended by the full complement of old and young women who usually minister on such occasions, he proceeded to the Manse of ———, some miles off, (not that of Mr. Erskine) where he inquired if the Clergyman was at home, "He's down the burn fishing. But I can soon cry him in."—"Ye needna gie yourself the trouble," replied the man, quite shocked at this account of the Minister's hebits: "none o' your fishin'Ministers shall bapteese my bairn."—Off he then trudged, followed by his whole train to the residence of another parochial clergyman at the distance of some miles. Here on his inquiry if the minister was at home, the lass answered,—"Deed he's no at hame the day; he's been out since sax i' the morning shooting. Ye needna wait, neither; for he'd be sae made out, (fatigued) when he comes back, that he'll not be able to say bo to a calflet a-be kirsen a wean!"—"Wait, lassie!" cried the man in indigant scorn; "wad I wait d'ye think, to haud up my bairn before a minister that gangs out at six i' the morning to shoot God's creatures? I'll awa down to guide Mr. Erskine at Dunfermline; and he'll be neither out at the fishing nor the shooting, I think." The whole baptismal train then set off for Dunfermline, sure that the father of the Secession, although not now a placed Minister, would at least be engaged in no unclerical sports, to incapaciate him for performing the sacred ordinance in question. On their reaching, however, the house of this clergyman, which they did not do till late in the evening, the man, in rapping at the door, anticipated that he would not be at home any more than his brethren, as he heard the strains of a fiddle proceeding from an upper chamber. "The Minister will no be at hame," he said, with a sly smile, to the girl who came to the door, "or your lad [sweetheart] wad nae be playirg that gate t'ye fiddle."—"The Minister is at hame," quoth the girl, "mair by token it's himsel' that's playing, honest man. He aye takes a tune at night, before gaun to bed. Faith there's nae lad o' mine can play that gate; it wad be something to tell if any o' them could."—"That the Minister playing!" cried the man, in a degree of astonishment and horror far transcending what he had expressed on either of the former occasions. "If he does this, what may the rest not do!—Well, I fairly gie them up a' thegither. I have travelled this whale day in search o' a godly Minister, and never man met wi' mair disappointment in a day's journey.—I'll tell ye what, guide wife," he added, turning to the disconsolate party behind, "we'll just awa' back to our ain Minister after a'! He's no a'thegither sound, it's true; but let him be what he likes in doctrine, deil hae me if ever I kenned him to fish, shoot, or play on the fiddle, a' his days!"—Edinburgh Literary Journal.

Spots on the Sun.—An ingenious individual in Providence, has very recently succeeded by means of a seven feet telescope, constructed by himself on a new principle, in bringing the entire image of the sun into a dark room, upon a white screen, to the size of 8 feet in diameter. He writes us that his astonishment was great, when he perceived that every spot now upon the face of the sun, nine in number, was distinctly transferred to the screen, and was so plain that he could see every movement of them in their various and sudden changes. He says he could plainly discover that those were immense bodies of smoke, apparently issuing from volcanoes; and as they seem occasionally forced upwards from the craters, now forming dense clouds, and now dispersing, considers those phenomena as accounting for the rapid changes of those spots. The escape of such a vast quantity of gass from the interior of the body of the sun, would, he observes, as it surrounds that luminary, produce that bright and dazzling appearance, which is the atmosphere of the sun. This theory may not accord with the opinions of others who have made observations on the subject; but, the writer, at any rate, entertains the strongest belief of its truth.

With the same instrument, which is just finished, he has also examined the moon, and states his conviction that that body is covered with perpetual snow and ice—the dark spots discoverable on its surface being frozen seas, and the lighter spaces, land covered with snow. Those circular places, which have a rising cone in the centre, he thinks, are distinguished volcanoes, as no clouds are perceptible over the moon's face; which being covered with snow and ice, accounts, as he imagines for its clear atmosphere, or for the absence of an atmosphere. This vast accumulation of ice and snow upon the moon's surface, may be explained, the writer conjectures, by nature of the moon's revolutions. He offers to construct instruments of the above description, by which these phenomena may be observed, at $50 to $100; and at the same rate to furnish solar microscopes, on a new principle, with a magnifying power at 12 feet distance, of 5,184,000.—Bos. Bulletin.

CURIOUS TYPOGRAPHICAL ANECDOTE.—It is well known to literary people, that in preparing works for the press, it is usual for the printer, after the proof-sheets have been seen by the author, to go over them again, and clear them of what are called typographical errors, which is wrong spellings, inaccuracies of punctuation, and similar imperfections. In performing this office for a celebrated northern critic and editor, a printer, now dead, was in the habit of introducing a much greater number of commas than it appeared to the author the sense required. The case was provoking, but did not produce a formal remonstrance, and Mr. W—n himself accidentally afforded the learned editor an opportunity of signifying his dissatisfaction with the plethora of punctuation under which his compositions were made to labour. The worthy printer, coming to a passage one day which he did not understand, very naturally took it into his head that it was unintelligible, and transmitted it to his employer, with a remark on the margin, that "there appeared some obscurity in it." The sheet was immediately returned with this reply, which we give verbatim—"Mr. J— sees no obscurity here, except such as arises from the great number of commas, which Mr. W—n seems to keep in a pepper-box beside him, for the purpose of dusting all his proofs with."—EDINBURGH LITERARY JOURNAL.
