POETRY.

(From the Essex Register.)

BEAUTY.

BY J. G. WHITTIER.

Girl of the dark and kindling eye—
Of tinted cheek and fair white brow,
On which the wreathing tresses lie
Like shadows on the driven snow!
Thou of the free and sunny glance,
Whose step is as a Peri's dance,
Whose form is fair as those which keep
Their watch above the Sculptor's sleep,
Or as the visions floating by
The Poet's veiled and dreaming eye!

Ha!—dost thou love the flattering strain?
And does the youthful blood steal up
Thy cheek and forehead, like the stain
Which wanders from the flowret's cup,
And mantles with its own rich dye,
The lovely folds which cluster by?
I marvel not—for thou art one
Whose pathway lingers in the sun—
Life's desert-tract—its midnight gloom—
Its weariness, are yet to come!

And God forbid that I should seek
To cloud the sunshine of thy youth
Or lend unto thy brow and cheek
The coldness of unwelcome truth!
For well I know each boding word
In life's unshadowed morning heard,
Hath power to send the warm blood back
To freeze along a wintry track—
To chill the flow of feeling up,
And dash the Pearl's from Fancy's cup!

But it may not be wrong to say,
That Pleasure's bud is wasted soon;
And, that the sunny smiles of day,
May darken ere the time of noon;
And that the pictured cloud of morn,
Of Earth's white mist and sunshine born—
The gay, glad thing which wanders through
The shoreless infinite of blue,
May gather to its sunset form
The fiery attributes of Storm!

And knowing this—it were not well
For Earth's fair creatures, such as thou—
To trust the brief, unreal spell,
Which maketh green their pathway now;
It were not well to dream alone
Of beauty's wile, and flattery's tone—
Of brave men bending down the knee,
In deep and fond idolatry,
Of love—the sacred love, which hath
No change nor ending save in Death!

The eye will lose its light—the blood
Creep slowly through the frozen vein—
The drooping of Life's summer bud
Revives not by the Autumn rain;—
And pain—disease—and ghastly death,
Will fall upon the wanderer's path,
And more than these—the madness wrought
By cherished love that speaketh not—
The sense of wrong—the blush of shame—
The pang of guilt—the branded name!

Oh, turn thee from thy gladsome hours,
And from the smiles that light thy way;—
The garner of life's fading flowers,
The funeral-torches of Decay!
Oh turn from these, for they will pass
Like dew from off the shaken grass,
Or like the dream that glideth by
The vision of the sleep-sealed eye:
Ay, Hope and Love may pass away,
Before one raven-tress be gray!

But there is hope—and when the heart
By wrong, and guilt, and shame is riven,
It points us to the "better part,"
The pure and blessed light of Heaven!
What though the way of life become
A desert of unbroken gloom,
Still to Contrition's eye of tears,
A ray of promised bliss appears,—
A guiding radiance sent abroad,
To call the pilgrim home to God!

MISCELLANY.

FROSTY WEATHER.

North. What, James, is your favorite weather?

Shepherd. A clear, hard, black frost. Sky without a cloud—sun bright, but almost cold—earth firm aneath your feet as a rock—trees silent, but not asleep wi' their budded branches—ice-edged rivers, amaist mute and motionless, yet wimplin' awee, and murmuring dozingly as in a dream—the air or atmosphere sae rarefied by the mysterious alchemy o' that wonderfu' Wuzurd Wunter, that when you draw in your breath, ye're no sensible o' ha'in ony lungs; wi' sic a celestial coolness does the spirit o' the middle region pervade and permeate the totallity o' ane's hail created existence, sowle and body being but ane essence, the pulses o' ane indistinguishable frae the feelin's o' the ither, materialism and immaterialism just ane and the same thing, without ony perceptible shade o' difference, and the immortality o' the sowle felt in as sure a faith as the NOW of its being, sae that ilka thoct is as pious as a prayer, and the happy habitude o' the entire man an absolute religion. Then, Sir, what a glorious appeteet in a black frost! Corned beef and greens send up in their steam your soul to heaven. The greediest gluttony is satisfied, and becomes a virtue. Eating, for eating's sake, and in oblivion o' its feenal cause, is then the most sacred o' household duties. The sweat-drops that stand on your brow, while you jaws are clunking, is beauttifu' as the dew on the mountain at sunrise—as poetical as the foam-bells on the bosom o' the glitterin' river. The music o' knives and forks is like that o' "flutes and saft recorders," "breathing deliberate valour;" and think, Sir, oh think! hoo the imagination is roosed by the gower o' contrast between the gor-cock lyin' wi' his buttered breast on the braid o' his back upon a bed o' brown toasted breed, and whurrin' awa' in vain doon the wund afore the death shot, and then tapsel-teery heels, on the blue lift, and doon on the greensward or the blooming heather, a battered and bluidy bunch o' plumage, gorgeous and glorious still in the dead-thraws, your only bird o' Paradise!

"Noctes" of Blackwood.

ANECDOTE.—It is well known that his late Majesty George III. was very plain and unassuming, both in his manners and dress. He used frequently to walk out without attendants, and many mistakes have been the consequence. A gentleman once resided for a short time in the neighbourhood of Windsor, who was remarkable for his consequential demeanour to all whom he considered beneath him. This person used very often to ride about the country on horseback, and, regardless of the inconvenience to which he put the plebians, as he termed those who were foot passengers, he rode upon the side parapet appropriated to them. Early one morning, when he was riding in this manner, he was met by an elderly personage, dressed in a plain blue coat and top-boots, who, upon coming within reach of the horse's head, stood still directly before the animal, so as to impede its further progress.—The consequential blade, taking him for some country farmer, called out, "Now, my good man, stand out of the way and let my horse pass." 'What! what!' said the old gentleman; "let your horse pass? No! take your horse into the middle of the road and let ME pass." "Stand aside this instant," said the equestrian: "I fancy, sir, you are ignorant to whom you are speaking. I am 'Squire W——, of B——hall, sir." "And I fancy," said the other, "you are ignorant to whom you are speaking: I am George, King of England." It is needless to add, that the person immediately dismounted, and, uncovering, made way for His Majesty to pass.—Court Journal.

Fagging.—While Lord Byron and Mr. Peel were at Harrow together, a tyrant, some few years older, whose name was ——, claimed a right to fag little Peel; which claim, (whether rightly or wrongly, I know not) Peel resisted. His resistance, however was in vain; —— not only subdued him, but determined to punish the refractory slave, proceeded forthwith to put his determination into practice, by inflicting a kind of bastinado on the inner fleshy side of the boy's arm, which, during the operation was twisted round with some degree of technical skill, to render the pain more acute. While the stripes were succeeding each other and poor Peel writhing under them, Byron saw and felt for the misery of his friend; and although he knew that he was not strong enough to fight —— with any hope of success, and that it was dangerous even to approach him, he advanced to the scene of action, and with a blush of rage, tears in his eyes and a voice trembling between terror and indignation, asked very humbly, if —— would be pleased to tell him, "how many stripes he intended to inflict?" "Why," returned the executioner, you little rascal, "what is that to you?" "Because, if you please," said Byron, holding out his arm, "I would take half!" There is a mixture of simplicity and magnanimity in this little trait which is truly heroic; and, however we may smile at the friendship of boys, it is rarely that the friendship of manhood is capable of any thing half so generous.—Moore's Byron.

Court of requests, London.—Considerable mirth was occasioned by a case, French Rools v. Sealing Wax, in which a Mr. Simeon Lazarus appeared to show cause why an order should not be made upon him for the payment of three shillings and a penny, alleged to be due to Robert McDonald a North Briton, for goods sold and delivered. Mr. McDonald produced his account and said, "There is my beel; I furnished Mr. Seemyon Lazarus with theirty-seven penny French rools per morning before nine o'clock, duly deleevered; and the tottle in money is three shillings and a penny; but, though I have made very ceevil applications to him for the same he neglects to nottice it and terefore if the beesness has taken this unpleasant turn it's na fault o' mine." Mr. Lazarus, in reply, said, "Now, Sare, you half done, and I shall shpeak my shpeak; You say you vash civil! the gentlemen's shall judge; I come to you and I say, "You make rollsh, and I make vaxsh; shall ve deal vaxsh for rollsh? and you say 'ver good;' Vel then, vot then? the pargain was shtruck; rollsh for vaxsh; svob and svob alike;" Mr. Macdonald, "I deny it tothally;" Mr. Lazarus, "You deny it—mine Got!—Didn't I show you the vaxsh in mine hand?" Mr. McDonald, "You showed me the wax, and I told you nobody in my house wanted the article, but that I would conseeder on't;" Mr. Lazarus, "You vould conshidder of it?—ver goot! Now, Sare, if you vould conshidder of it, for vat you send your nashty rollsh to mine housh if you vouldn't haf the vaxsh? hah! hah! Mr. Macdonald, "House! you have no house; you live on a third flat;" Mr. Lazarus, "Hah! never mind for the flat; I vos not so flat as you—[A laugh.] If you vouldn't have vaxsh you shouldn't send rollsh you know: Mr. Macdonald, "That is not the beesness" Mr. Lazarus, "Yes, it ish the beesness:—What dy'e mean, Sir, by mocking my pronounciawtion?" Mr. Lazarus, "See, there now! He mocksh me, and he won't be mock himself! Now, Sares, gentlemens, I shall tell you hish civility: He comsh in mine housh, vere I vash eating mine preakfasht upon his nashty rollsh vit some butter and coffee, and he say, "Hallo! I'm come for my monish for the rollsh;" "No, Sare," I say, "you shall have the vaxsh:" He say, "the vaxsh!" I say, "the rolish!"—And then, s'help mine Got, he call me Jew! [Roars of laughter.] Mr. Macdonald, Aweel, and did na ye call me a Scot!" Mr. Lazarus, "Shkot! vell I did, and a Jew ish more honesht as a Shkot; there now!" Here the court called the parties to order, and under all the circumstances, ordered that Lazarus should pay half the amount in wax and the other half in money.—(Herald.)

Imprisonment for debt.—At the moment of our writing, there are confined in our loathsome jail, upwards of sixty unfortunate beings—and two of them are females—for the crime of debt, and most of them cannot raise sufficient means to enable them to pay jail fees. They are confined to the narrow space of a prison;—are deprived of the society of their families, and are lost to all the useful pursuits of life, and to society. We hope and pray that the subject of imprisonment for debt, will arrest the attention of all good men, and that all will unite in an effort to eradicate an evil, which has too long been a curse and a plague spot to society.—Providence paper.

A Turk's thought on Imprisonment for debt.—A Captain of a trading ship being not long since in the City of Constantinople, lodged in the house of a seafaring Turk. One day he observed to the Mussulman, that in all his walks through the immense city of Constantinople and its suburbs, he had not seen any thing like a jail for imprisonment for debtors. "Christian dog!" said the disciple of Mahomet, "do you suppose that we are so debased as to copy the Nazarine policy? We take care to strip a debtor of all his property, so far as it will go to pay his just debts; but there we leave him, we instantly turn him loose to begin the world again. The believers in our prophet are above shutting up their fellowmen in cages, in order to starve, persecute and torment them. We make a distinction between a man and a rat. I have been in several of the Nazarine (Christian) cities, and never looked at a debtor's prison without horror, as a place where man is degraded to the condition of a rat!"

Sam Patch outdone—by an Ox.—We have been lately informed, by a respectable farmer of this town, of a wonderful leap taken by an ox belonging to a neighbour of his, a short time since, to the truth of which many intelligent witnesses are ready to vouch. It appears that the animal was feeding on the edge of a precipice, about sixty feet in height, when, either by a contest with another, or a faux pas, he was thrown from the summit, and landed at the bottom amid a promiscuous pile of rocks, with but little injury. Soon after this "flight sublime," his oxship was discovered quietly feeding below, apparently well satisfied with one attempt at æronautic excursion; and, probably did he live in the days of Æsop, he could say to all inquirers as Pat did on a similar occasion—"it's aisy enough flying sure, but och! and its hard lighting." The ox, we understand, was under the yoke, soon after its leap, and performs, as ever, to the satisfaction of his owner.—Stonington Telegraph.

ECCLESIASTICAL STATISTICS.—The following notices of the present condition of religious denominations in the United States, have been taken from a very valuable article, published in the last number of the Quarterly Register and Journal of the American Education Society. In many cases, it will be observed, the numbers are stated as estimates; but we believe them to be more accurate, as a whole, than any before published.

1. Orthodox Congregationalists of New-England. (Estimate founded on tolerably adequate data.) Ministers, 800; vacant churches 250; communicants 120,000.

2. Presbyterians. Synods, 19; Presbyteries, 92; ordained Ministers, 1,392; Licentiates 205; Churches 2,070; communicants 162,816.

EXCHANGE COFFEE HOUSE,
RE-OPENED.

THE above commodious and extensive Establishment, so well known as being for many years the principal resort of the mercantile community in this City, having lately undergone a thorough repair, is now open for the reception of the Public generally. The situation of the House being very pleasant, in the centre of business, and immediately fronting the Steam-boat landing, renders it a most desirable abode either for resident or transient Boarders.
In addition to the complete repairs which have been made, the Proprietor has caused the numerous Lodging Rooms to be furnished throughout with appropriate new furniture, combining neatness and taste with comfort and ease.
Strict attention to the convenience of Guests, will be the particular aim of the Proprietor, as well as of those in his service; and he is determined that the accommodations and fare—both solid and fluid—shall be such as, aided by several years experience on his part, will render the Establishment superior to any other in the City, and in every respect worthy the patronage of a generous community.
The Subscriber returns unfeigned acknowledgments to his friends and the public, for the very flattering patronage received by him at his late residence, and trusts that his present exertions will entitle him to a continuance of their favors.
GEORGE SCAMMELL.
St. John, (N. B.) 1st May, 1830.

JOHN MURPHY,
Tailor and Habit Maker,

MOST respectfully begs leave to inform his friends and the public, that he has just received the last number of the London Magazine of Fashions, and that he has made arrangements whereby he will in future receive that publication regularly.
J. M. being thus put in possession of the latest information respecting the fashions, and from his known taste and punctuality in executing orders, trusts still to merit the patronage and support of a discerning public, to whom he returns grateful acknowledgments for favours received during the last ten years. May 1, 1830.

CARD.

R. M'KENZIE, Tailor,

RESPECTFULLY informs the Gentlemen of Saint John, that he has removed to Mr. J. Robertson's premises, King-street, opposite the Market Inn, where he will continue to execute all orders in his superior style of fashion and workmanship. 4 St. John, May 1.

J. B. S. has on hand, Loaf Sugar, Cream of Tartar, Ginger, Ginger Beer Bottles, and Corks.—Also, a few firkins of Cumberland BUTTER, warranted of the first quality—All which he will dispose of at reasonable rates. May 1, 1830.

DANIEL O'BRIEN,
HAIR DRESSER, & ORNAMENTAL HAIR MANUFACTURER,

RETURNS his sincere thanks to the Ladies and Gentlemen of Saint John, and its vicinity for the very liberal encouragement he has received whilst in business in this City.—He has the honor to inform them that he has removed his Establishment to that well known stand, next adjoining the Office of JAS. PETERS, Jr. Esq. South side of the Market-square, where, from his general knowledge and strict attention to business, he hopes to merit a continuance of their patronage.
He respectfully informs them that he has fitted up private apartments for HAIR CUTTING, &c. when every particular attention shall be observed to those who may favour him with their custom. He still continues to manufacture Hair Work of every description, viz:—Curls, Medona Bands, Ringlets, Wigs, Scalps, Crown Pieces, &c. &c. all of the best materials and workmanship.
He expects by the first arrivals from London, an assortment of PERFUMERY, and other articles connected with his business.
