POETRY.

"NOW-A-DAYS."

Alas! how every thing has changed
Since I was sweet sixteen,
When all the girls wore home-spun frocks,
And Aprons nice and clean;
With bonnets made of braided straw,
That tied beneath the chin,
And shawls laid neatly on the neck,
And fastened with a pin.

But now-a-days the ladies wear
French gloves and Leghorn hats,
That take up half a yard of sky,
In coal-hod shape or flats,
With gowns that do not fall as low
As such things ought to fall,
With waists that you might break in two,
They are so very small.

I recollect the time when I
Rode father's horse to mill,
Across the meadow, rocky field,
And up and down the hill,
And when our folks were out at work,
As true as I'm a sinner,
I jump'd upon a horse bare back,
And carried them their dinner.

Dear me! young ladies now-a-days
Would almost faint away,
To think of riding one alone,
In wagon, chaise, or sleigh;
And as for giving "pa" his meals,
Or helping "ma" to bake,
Oh! saints 'twould spoil their lily hand,
Though "sometimes they make cake."

When winter came, the maiden's heart
Began to beat and flutter,
Each beau would take his sweetheart out
Sleigh riding in a-cutter;
Or if the storm was bleak and cold,
The girls and beaus together
Would meet, and have most glorious fun,
And never mind the weather.

But now indeed it grieves me much
The circumstance to mention,
However kind a young man's heart,
And honest his intention,
He ne'er can ask a girl to ride,
But such a war is waged,
And if he sees her once a week,
Why surely "they're engaged."

I never thought that I should try
My hand at making rhymes,
But 'tis the way to reprobate
The present evil times;
For should I preach morality,
In common sober prose,
They'd say 'twas older than the hills,
Or else turn up their nose.

MISCELLANY.

QUENCHING THE TORCH.

"Look out for that sea, quartermaster!—Mind your starboard helm!—Ease her, man—ease her."

On it came, rolling as high as the fore-yard, and tumbled it over the bows, green, clear, and unbroken.

It filled the deep waist of the Torch in an instant, and, as I rose half smothered in the midst of a jumble of men, pigs, hencoops, and spare spars, I had nearly lost an eye by a floating boarding-pike that was lanced at me by the jangle of the water. As for the boats on the booms, they had all gone to sea separately, and were bobbing at us in a squadron to the leeward, the launch acting as commodore, with a crew of a dozen sheep, whose bleating as she rose upon the crest of a wave came back upon us, faintly blending with the hoarse roaring of the storm, and seeming to cry, "No more mutton for you, my boys!"

At length the lee ports were forced out—the pumps promptly rigged and manned—buckets slung and at work down the hatchways; and, although we had narrowly escaped being swamped, and it continued to blow hard, with a heavy sea, the men, confident in the qualities of the ship, worked with glee, shaking their feathers, and quizzing each other. But anon a sudden and appalling change came over the sea and sky, that made the stoutest among us quail and draw his breath back. The firmament darkened—the horizon seemed to contract—the sea became black as ink—the wind fell to a dead calm—the teeming clouds descended and filled the murky arch of heaven with their whirling masses, until they appeared to touch our mast-heads, but there was neither lightening nor rain, not one glancing flash, not one refreshing drop—the windows of the sky had been sealed up by Him who had said to the storm, "Peace, be still."

During this deathlike pause, infinitely more awful than the heaviest gale, every sound on board, the voices of the men, even the creaking of the bulkheads, was heard with startling distinctness; and the water-logged brig, having no wind to steady her, labored so heavily in the trough of the sea, that we expected her mast to go overboard every moment.

"Do you see and hear that, sir?" said Lieutenant Treenail to the Captain. We all looked eagerly forth in the direction indicated. There was a white line, in fearful contrast with the clouds and the rest of the ocean, gleaming on the extreme verge of the horizon—it grew broader—a low increasing growl was heard—a thick blinding mist came driving up a-stern of us, whose small drops pierced into the skin like sharp hail—"Is it rain?"—"No, no—salt, salt." And now the fierce Spirit of the Hurricane himself, the sea Azrael, in storm and in darkness, came thundering on with stunning violence, tearing off the snowy scalps of the tortured billows, and with tremendous and sheer force, crushing down beneath his chariot wheels their mountainous and howling ridges into one level plain of foaming water. Our chain-plates, strong fastening, and clenched bolts, drew like pliant wires, shrouds and stays were torn away like the summer gossamer, and our masts and spars, crackling before his fury like dry reeds in autumn, were blown clean out of the ship, over her bows into the sea.

Had we shown a shred of the strongest sail in the vessel, it would have been blown out of the bolt-rope in an instant; we had, therefore, to get her before the wind, by crossing a spar on the stump of the foremast, with four men at the wheel, one watch at the pumps, and the other clearing the wreck. But our spirits were soon dashed, when the old carpenter, one of the coolest and bravest men in the ship, rose through the fore-hatch, pale as a ghost, with his white hairs streaming straight out in the wind. He did not speak to any of us, but clambered aft, towards the capstan, to which the Captain had lashed himself. "The water is rushing in forward like a mill stream, sir; we have either started a butt, or the wreck of the foremast has gone through her bows, for she is fast settling down in the head." "Get the boatswain to fother a sail then, man, and try it over the leak, but dont alarm the people, Mr. Kelson." The brig was, indeed, rapidly losing her buoyancy, and when the next heavy sea rose a-head of us, she gave a drunken, sickening lurch, and pitched right into it, groaning and trembling in every plank, like a guilty and condemned thing in the prospect of impending punishment.

'Stand by to heave the guns overboard.'—Too late, too late—Oh God, that cry!—I was stunned and drowning; a chaos of wreck was beneath me, and around me, and above me, and blue agonized gasping faces, and struggling arms, and colorless clutching hands, and despairing yells for help, where help was impossible; when I felt a sharp bite on the neck, and breathed again. My Newfoundland dog, Sneezer, had snatched at me, and dragged me out of the eddy of the sinking vessel.

For life, for dear life, nearly suffocated amidst the hissing spray, we reached the cutter, the dog and his helpless master.

* * * * * * *

For three miserable days I had been exposed, half naked and bare-headed, in an open boat, without water, or food, or shade.

The third fierce, cloudless West Indian noon was long passed, and once more the dry, burning sun sank in the west, like a red hot shield of iron. In my horrible extremity I imprecated the wrath of heaven on my defenceless head, and shaking my clenched hands against the brazen sky, I called aloud on the Almighty, "Oh, let me never see him rise again!" I glared on the noble dog, as he lay dying at the bottom of the boat; madness seized me; I tore his throat with my teeth, not for food, but that I might drink his hot blood—it flowed, and vampire-like I would have gorged myself, but as he turned his dull, grey, glazing, eye on me, the pulses of my heart stopped, and I fell senseless.

When my recollection returned, I was stretched on some fresh plantain leaves, in a low, smoky hut, with my faithful dog lying beside me, whining and licking my hands and face. On the rude joists that bound the rafters of the roof together, rested a light canoe with its paddles, and over against me, on the wall, hung some Indian fishing implements, and a long-barreled Spanish gun—underneath lay a corpse, wrapped in a boat-sail, on which was clumsily written, with charcoal,—"The body of John Deadeye, Esqr. late Commander of His Britannic Majesty's Sloop Torch."

There was a fire on the floor, at which Lieutenant Splinter, in his shirt and trowsers, drenched, unshorn, and death-like, was roasting a joint of meat, whilst a dwarfish Indian, stark naked, sat opposite to him, squatting on his hams, more like a large bull-frog than a man, and fanning the flame with a palm leaf. In the dark corner of the hut half a dozen miserable sheep shrunk huddled together. Through the open door I saw the stars in the deep blue heaven, and the cold beams of the newly risen moon were dancing in a long, flickering wake of silver light, on the ever heaving bosom of the ocean, whilst the melancholy murmur of the surf breaking on the shore, came booming on the gentle night wind. I had been nourished during my delirium; for the fierceness of my sufferings were assuaged, and I was comparatively strong, when I anxiously inquired of the Lieutenant the fate of our companions.

"All gone down in the old Torch; and had it not been for the launch and our four-footed friends there, I should not have been here to have told it; but raw mutton, with wool on, is not a mess to thrive on, Tom. All that the sharks have left of the captain and five seamen came ashore last night. I have buried the poor fellows on the beach were they lay, as well as I could, with an oar-blade for a shovel, and the bronze ornament there (pointing to the Indian) for an assistant."

Here he looked towards the body; and the honest fellow's voice shook as he continued.

"But seeing you were alive, I thought, if you did recover, it would be gratifying to both of us, after having weathered it so long with him, thro' gale and sunshine, to lay the kind-hearted old man's head on its everlasting pillow as decently as our forlorn condition permitted."

As the Lieutenant spoke, Sneezer seemed to think his watch was up, and drew off towards the fire. Clung and famished, the poor brute could no longer resist the temptation, but making a desperate snatch at the joint, bolted through the door with it, hotly pursued by the Bull-frog.

"Drop the leg of mutton, Sneezer, roared the Lieutenant, "drop the mutton—drop it, sir, drop it, drop it"—

THOMAS CRINGLE.

Meditation on a Brickbat.—Thou friable fragment of indurated mud! Low dost thou lie, and lonely, on the seared sward, parted from thy fellows, and bearing about thee but a frail memorial of thy former companionship, in this thin streak of dried, crumbling lime, adhering still to thy superior end! What wast thou, in by gone times! There's paint upon thy phiz—red paint! Wert placed upon some cottage hearth, and often scrubbed and planished by the rosy dame, who after proudly trod upon thy face; or wert thou jammed within the inglecheek, a thing for walnuts to be cracked upon, or pipes thereon to be unashed, or cider flagons to be knocked adry? Wert stationed in some palace wall, where hadst thou ears, as stonewalls have, much matter of sage import, unrevealed, did wait thy listening—and many silly nothings tired thy quick tympany? Hast thou enjoyed but one condition in thy whole existence—or hast thou been the sport of fate, and tasted all the ills of life, from poverty abject to gorgeous opulence—and which does thou prefer?—Come let's philosophize—Thou art a broken thing;—where is thine other half—where the companion of thy earlier days, the sharer of thy doom, for worse or better? Once, I perceive, thou heldest close alliance with sundry of thy species—did they desert thee when thy fortunes broke—wert thou cast out, thee and thine other parts, because ye filled not longer, elegantly, your allotted space?—thou came hither—here, far in the unpeopled gade—without a wall or chimney in the longest vista? Didst ever brake a villain's head—or wert thou ever bruised thro' contact with some iron hearted Hunk's pate, whereon thou fell in just but disappointed vengeance? Alas! poor outcast! Like him thou art but clay; and unto clay, like him, thou goest—but thou hast thy burning.—Boston Advocate.

We recommend to the especial consideration of our readers, the following extract from Mr. Quincy's Centennial Oration:—"Human happiness has no perfect security but freedom; freedom none but virtue; virtue none but knowledge; and neither freedom, nor virtue, nor knowledge, has any vigor, or immortal hope, except in the principles of the Christian faith, and in the sanctions of the Christian Religion."
