Dick. I speak of real, and not imaginary evils; and he must be miserably blind and deaf, who is insensible to the grievances which exist upon the Estate. You wish to throw the odium upon the old Establishment: if the Squire's rule has been propitious to the true and lasting interests of the Estate, the old Establishment can claim no participation in the glory and merit; but if, on the other hand, a mistaken policy has produced misrule, the old Domestics disclaim any copartnership with the odium, as they were never consulted. Let those bear the burden of general execration, who have mislead the Squire, and who have occasioned a degree of political confusion in the Estate never before experienced, and which the most foreboding imagination would not have anticipated. Our Household has been divided, and the question of precedence, in case of the Squire's departure, has been respectfully submitted; but even here, mystery characterises the reply, and we are told that the usage on other Estates will determine the succession here, as if we had no Constitution of our own. Is this reply calculated to inspire the Domestics and Tenantry with confidence? If evasion, equivocation, and misrepresentation, are measures of good overseering; we must record our protest. Let us suppose a case,—the death or removal of the Squire to-morrow—are we to send to Ailmore for instructions—for there is no precedent in the Estate, squired by Tommy Jeffery ?—In the mean while, who will usurp authority here? Is it reasonable to imagine, that a question of such moment would have been neglected by those who have altered our Constitution? I cannot suppose it: the inference is obvious;—and in spite of reserve, fastidiousness, equivocation, and mystery, every man of common understanding must believe that the question is already settled and known to the upper servants. Is this Estate to be governed by usages in others? Does Wily Oh'Deil believe it? Would he, if it militated against his schemes, consider himself bound to conform to such usages? "Credat qui vult:" I regret that I am forced to utter sentiments, which involve the question of ingenuous proceedings on the part of the Squire; but a sense of duty impels me. Let us therefore ADDRESS the Master, and lay before him our several grievances; let us proceed fearlessly, constitutionally, and loyally; let us do our duty to our Master, to the Tenantry, and to ourselves—and armed with the majesty of truth, duplicity and intrigue must cower beneath it.

Tommy. I am surprised, Mr. Johnny, at the sentiments and expressions of Dick, who would endeavour to mislead the Domestics, and impress the Tenantry with a belief, that the Squire is influenced by Wily Oh'Diel and myself; for I can take his hints. But every candid person must confess, that promptitude of thought and action, independence of opinion, impartiality of measures, correctness of judgment, and integrity of conduct, have characterised the proceedings of the Squire. It is true, that Wily Oh'Diel, as his Book-keeper, may sometimes act as his Amanuensis; but will any man dare to insinuate that he dictates. I admire, Mr. Johnny, the pretensions of pretensionless Domestics, who forget the dignity which is due to servants of a higher grade, and whose merits are known to their betters.

Dick—(drawing down the angles of his mouth, and manifesting some rubicundity of countenance.) Pretensions!—Mr. Tommy—Betters! I tell you, Sir, I know no underling of office, or Lance-Corporal metamorphosed into a Deputy Squire, to whom I would succumb—I am a native of the Estate, and have inhaled from my birth the freedom of its air: I will cheerfully pay honor to whom honor may be due; but I acknowledge no superiority in Underlings. Mr. Johnny—Let us at once petition the Master, and let us now ascertain who are the Domestics of the Estate, and who are the Hirelings of Intriguers.—I vote for a petition.

Tommy. I vote against it—(aside, who would vote for what must speedily bring him to his end. No-no—"Veritas in puteo."—There let it lay, until I turn the windlass.)

Johnny Fairchild. I vote for the petition.

Jack See-em-in Co.—(Looks towards Tommy, who frowns and shakes his head.) I vote against it.

Dick—(Opens his eyes, looks at Johnny Fairchild, then at Jack, stares round the table, and exclaims)—Ratted!—Ratted!—Ratted!—the Twig is easily bent, and promises an upright Tree!—The Upas has shed its pestiferous poison,—all, who inhale its pestilential atmosphere, fall, as compost, for the deadly tree, which, from their remains, sends up its hateful suckers.

Willy Crow—[Rubs his forehead, and after thinking a little while.] I suppose, Mr. Johnny, I may as well vote for the petition.

Dick—(Aside, THREE.)

Harry. "I have ventured, like little wanton boys who swim on bladders," these several winters, in this Room of Honor—"Vain pomp, and glory" of a Squireship—"I love you"—therefore, my dear Mr. Johnny, I go for the petition.

Dick—(Aside, FOUR.)

DILWORTH—[Looks at Redbreast, then at Tommy, stammers, hesitates, looks round the room to see if strangers are present, catches a wink from Tommy's eye, and says very boldly!] —I vote against it.

Dick. A paw-pure! Bill—[to Willy Crow.]

Willy Crow. What mean you, Dick ? the cats-paw of a party? or a pauper in spirit!

Dick. Either, or both, or more—

Redbreast. Dil, you deserve an alligator for your dinner, and a chair for your seat, stuffed with the quills of a porcupine—you are a rat, Dil, a rat—(looks as if he would give him to the cats.) I vote for the petition, Mr. Johnny, for I was Sergeant-Major to a regiment—truth and honor were our parole and countersign; I have always obeyed their dictates; and have, like the Squire, been employed by my Master, to kill tigers and alligators in the East country. I have done my duty faithfully; and am now ready to use my best efforts in defence of truth and justice.

Dick. [*Aside—Bravo, Sergeant-*MAJOR. I wish you were a General-Cook for rats, and that your larder was daily supplied from the Ganges—that the ratters and ratted might never want a hotch-potch of alligators.——FIVE.]

Geordie Beach. I love good company, Mr. Johnny, so I vote for the petition.

Dick. [Aside—Good—SIX.]

Littlejoe. [Looks at Tommy, adjusts his cravat, rises, is about to make a speech, stammers a little, and says]—I believe, Mr. Johnny, —I mean, I do not believe,—I was going to say, [aside, that I feel like a cat in a strange garret, and if I rat, I may be catted]—that [gets a wink from Tommy] I vote, Sir, without any hesitation, equivocation, or mental reservation, against the petition.

Dick. [Aside—No disappointment—calculated upon.

Allan. Gentlemen; I beg leave to be allowed to consider a little before I decide.

Dick. Mr. Johnny; I rejoice to find that we have a majority, when we meet again, we shall give the matter all the attention which its importance requires. We need not despair,—there is a goodly force in the camp. Do you be our General, and we shall triumph over the Friends of Intrigue and the Enemies of our Estate.

[Omnes exeunt.]

SCENE—A Market-Square.

CIVIS, O. P., and others.

Civis.—Good morning, O. P.; I am told that there is "war in the wigwam," and that "Greek to Greek" is contending the tug of it.

O. P.—It is said that the "Complainer's Lodge" is restoring vision to the wilfully blind among the Workmen—the deputy-assistant parasites feel ill at ease—the Squire-ites, Tommy-ites, and Wily-ites are reduced nearly to their wits End.—Stragglers come in daily from the citadel of Intrigue, and report the weakness of the garrison; its stores of sophistry, evasion, and concealment are exhausted—openings have been made into their hiding places, and their strongholds have been stormed; the Troops of the Estate are rallying—"the Master—the Tenantry—Truth—Honor—and Loyalty," are their watchwords; and nothing will be wanting to ensure success, if our Workmen are determined and persevering.

Civis. The Budget, I am told, has already created some tergiversation.

O. P. It is said that the buttings of the Bell-wether grow weaker and weaker—and that a change of air is contemplated by another as a remedy for a Pulmonary wasting or consumption of the Chest, which has impaired the Constitution.

Civis. The spirit of the Mountain Dew continues its solvent powers upon Last.

O. P. He seems determined to stick to his cause, through thick and thin, but I have heard of more Marplots than one; and that the support of some men materially weakened the cause, which they espoused.

Civis. I believe the Estatists would rather want his advocacy, than be hampered with it.

O. P. I have heard many of them say so.—But what think you, Civis, of the Squire's answer to the Workmen, respecting the "uncertain Taxes" of the Estate.

Civis. He appears to entertain peculiar antipathies against retrospective peepings. Perhaps he is a wag, and knowing that there is nothing to be seen, he is pleased to excite and keep up curiosity.

O. P. I hear that Tommy has advertised his beer and delf," for sale. Surely he cannot mean to quit the Estate, when his "blushing honors" are crowding so thickly upon him.

Civis. He has scarcely recovered from the fatigues of his last trip, before he packs up for another pack off. But let us inquire, if there is any recent report from the wig-wam.

[Exeunt.]

[FOR THE COURIER.]

THE GRIDIRON, AND POLITICAL ANALYZER.

No. 1.

Political essays have latterly become so generally, "the order of the day," as almost to supersede every other species of composition in the public journals of this Province. 'O. P.' 'Mentor,' 'Know-nothing,' 'Censor,' 'A. B. C,' 'Native,' and a hundred other political scribblers have voraciously fastened upon the questions which now agitate the public mind: and turned, twisted, and tortured them into all possible variety of forms; until we can scarcely discern facts from fiction;—ingenuity has been exhausted on one side to persuade us that the Quit Rent tax is unconstitutional, and on the other side no less dexterity has been displayed to assure us that we alone are to derive whatever advantage may be derivable from the tax. One set of writers denounce the public officers, another extol them; one class magnify imprudence into crime, another class extenuate villainy, and dignify it with the name of diplomatic wisdom:—by one writer we are told that the throne is the fountain of all power, as well as of all honour; by another we are informed that the people appointed the King, and by their consent only was he elevated to his exalted station, that his Majesty is but the principal magistrate of the nation, and who is in all respects subject to the laws which have descended to us from our ancestors, or which may in our times have been enacted. By one, the Imperial prerogative is extended beyond all earthly control, by another it is so circumscribed as to be utterly inconsistent with a due exercise of the Royal functions. Both classes have erred, both have promulgated delusive doctrines, both have united in extending the empire of Fiction. To correct these errors,—to dispel these delusions—to overthrow that Empire, is the purpose of the subscriber: by what means he hopes to succeed, will hereafter be declared—suffice it here to avow his resolution to persevere in his design until he shall have accomplished his object. THE GRID-IRON AND POLITICAL ANALYZER is the visible instrument which will be employed in this mighty work of political renovation; it will appear in the Saint John Courier, so often as the author may command leisure and inclination to dress up a dish for the public. The objects of his attention will be various and diversified; the statesman, the fool, the spy, the miser, the tyrant, will each in turn be honoured with a broiling on the Grid Iron; but the cook will be invisible—they shall suffer the torture, but shall not be able to discern the agent by whom the operation is directed.—Virtue will ever be held up for imitation, and vice will be displayed as a beacon to deter men from approaching the precipice of destruction. Neither age, rank, nor talent, will secure men from the fiery trial;—the hoary-headed villain shall not escape; and the youthful advocate of criminal folly shall be honoured with a place on the Grid Iron. Bench, Bar, and Cabinet, shall be roasted according to their respective deserts. Wigs, gowns, cassocks, and epaulettes, shall all be considered fair game; and virtue alone shall be invulnerable. Severity is the last resort in public as well as in private matters—but leniency is an accomplice in the crimes which its supineness had encouraged. The exhortation of the wise man, applies with equal force to the man and to the child. The tree which being deformed and crooked, cannot be again restored to elegance and beauty—must be cut down as a cumberer of the ground, and a disgrace to the field of creation.

To the people of New Brunswick the Grid Iron is addressed—by their humble Servant,

PROCUSTES MINOR.

From my Cave in the Forest.

The Courier.

SATURDAY, MARCH 9, 1833.

The packet ship New-York, at New-York, brings Liverpool dates to the 16th January, and London to the 15th.—The papers (says the Boston Centinel,) contain little news of interest. The Dutch controversy was left apparently as far from a settlement as ever, and we do not deem it expedient to trouble our readers with the details of negociations and counter negociations, in reference to that protracted subject.

It is stated that Parliament will positively proceed to the public business immediately after the 29th of January, the day on which the Writs are returnable.

A destructive fire occurred at Liverpool on the night of the 14th January. It broke out in Bath street and Launcelot's-hey, and destroyed a number of buildings, including the extensive new warehouses of Mr. Molyneux. The loss of property is estimated at £150,000, of which £120,000 was insured. It is stated in private letters that great quantities of cotton were destroyed.

Accounts of numerous outrages by the peasantry in search of arms, in different parts of Ireland, are given in the papers; and an article from Rathangan says, there are many and extensive manufactories of gunpowder throughout the country. An unsuccessful attempt had been made to murder the agent to the Duke of Buckingham.

Detachments of the 1st Royal, the 22d, 71st, 77th, 84th, 88th, and 1st West India regiments, under the command of Major Wetherell, 1st Royals, are under orders for embarkation on board his M's. ship Romney, for Bermuda and Jamaica.

Three squadrons of that fine regiment, the 7th Dragoon Guards, which arrived in Bristol from Dorchester and the adjoining towns, are to embark in steam vessels, for Dublin.—Bristol Jour.

PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURE.—We have excluded nearly the whole of the detail of the doings in the House of Assembly during the past week, (an epitome of which was furnished by our Fredericton correspondent,) to make room for the important discussion on Monday last, on the subject of the Casual Revenue Accounts.—The Bill for Incorporating the "Commercial Bank of New-Brunswick," passed the House, after a lengthy debate, on the the 28th ult.—with liberty to go into operation when £30,000 is paid in, and subject to the following amendments:

"That the Stockholders shall be liable for any loss over the amount of the capital stock at the close of the establishment: each subscriber in proportion to the amount of his stock.

"That the Bank shall loan £5000 yearly to the Province, at four per cent. interest, if required; and shall be subject to a monthly supervision of its affairs, for the information of the House of Assembly."

The Bill for extending the capital and charter of the "Bank of New-Brunswick," has, we understand, also passed the Assembly, similarly "clogged;" and both, it is now confidently rumoured, will be rejected by the Council, in their present shape.

A Resolution to provide for the services of the Inspecting Field Officers of Militia, for the present year, was negatived in Committee of Supply on Saturday last. On a division for the Grant, the Yeas were—Mr. Speaker, Messrs. End, Chandler, Vail, Barlow, Partelow, Slason, Harrison, Wyer, Clinch—10. Nays—Messrs. Hayward, J. Humbert, Weldon, Ward, Connell, Miles, Simonds, Kinnear, S. Humbert, Brown, Hill, Gilbert—12.

CASUAL REVENUE—CROWN LAND ACCOUNTS.—This interesting subject has engrossed the able, manly, independent and patriotic consideration of the true representatives of the people, and has exposed the tide-serving, imbecile, venal and truckling principles of those who would rather secure the fleece than guard the flock. We cannot withhold the expression of approbation due to Messrs. Simonds, Crane, Kinnear, S. Humbert, Partelow, Chandler, Brown, Slason, and Weldon. But we will not at present venture to express the indignation and contempt, which was exerted by the miserable efforts of some to throw a flimsy veil over conduct, which even the sophistry of Mr. End could not conceal. We must congratulate the Province upon the possession of men, who, when impelled by a sense of duty, can recognise in men or measures, no barrier to the honest declaration of their sentiments; and who, when imperatively called upon by circumstances, do not hesitate to question the conduct of a Governor; and we must here express our regret that there appears to be so much cause given by His Excellency, to create dissatisfaction and distrust throughout the Province—we must be candid, and confess the general disappointment, which his proceedings have occasioned. There certainly has been manifested a peculiar reluctance to expose the conduct of a party, which would feel no reluctance to sacrifice His Excellency upon the altar of their own security, and when members do not hesitate to attribute to His Excellency a disposition to screen, and to wink at LUMPING CHARGES for detailed accounts, what will be the impression on the public mind? We answer—the sooner he could be promoted to another government, the better for this province—for public confidence is gone, and his Excellency knowing it and feeling it, cannot feel himself well at ease in New-Brunswick; we deplore the necessity, which demands our feeble efforts to support the honest measures of our patriotic representatives, but we should consider it a dereliction of duty, if, at the present eventful crisis, we did not throw our influence in the scale of our country's rights,—we cannot consent to a silence, which would be culpable; and although we should be sorry to excite any unnecessary sensation, especially against the Representative of his Majesty, we would condemn ourselves if in the hour of trial, we were found wanting in our duty to the land we love—our birth-place and our home: this has claims upon us paramount to any consideration of person, except the person of our beloved Monarch, and when misrule, in the governing, and misconduct in the governed, called for investigation and reprehension, we trust we shall always be found ready to devote the unshackled Liberty of the Press to the cause of truth and justice. We must confess that there does appear to be a disposition on the part of the Governor to misconstrue the spirit of Lord Goderich's despatch respecting the Casual Revenue accounts; our representatives say, it appears that he has been advised: by whom? by Mr. Baillie, the person whose accounts are required and suspected! by his father-in-law, Mr. Odell; by F. P. Robinson, his Auditor! whom Mr. Partelow says, is notoriously incompetent to the office. Are THESE the Governor's ADVISERS—and if his advisers in one question, why not in more?—Are these then virtually the Governors of the Province? When such suspicions are entertained, and they are entertained, can the people repose that confidence in a Governor, which the impartiality of his measures, and his entire freedom from party influence, ought, and if they existed, would inspire? But let us enquire a little farther: If the accounts of the Crown Land office were such as they ought to be; what reluctance should the Commissioner feel to the exposure of them from the first hour of his official responsibility, and upon what principle does His Excellency scruple to order the production of them—if all is right, nothing need be feared; if any thing is wrong, is the representative of his Majesty to screen it?—These very proceedings are calculated to excite suspicion and wound the reputation of the Commissioner—add to them his advertised departure at a time, when he ought to confront his accusers, and put even suspicion to the flight. We would not wish to prejudge; but we must confess that all these things do create unmentionable impressions on our mind, for the nature of the advertisement of his property bespeaks a lengthened absence,—at a time when his seniority in the Baillie Council would induce men of less aspirant natures to remain upon the soil, ready to assume represented sovereignty, whenever occasion offered. To return to the accounts: we admire the application of the term "detailed" to the thumping, lumping items of £2000 and £1900 in an account rendered by the Commissioner; this may be all very 'righteous' in the devotional estimation of Mr. End and his devils, who all appear to have got very out of the way notions of the question, upon which they were talking. But it certainly does not accord with our ideas of that particularity of statement, which was calculated to inform the judgment of members, and authorize them to suggest any other improvement than the entire abolishment of a system which appears to have been conducted in darkness. We must take another opportunity of eulogising upon this subject, as we have not time at present.—We must however direct the attention of our readers to the spirited debates of our representatives upon this important question, and now ask the public throughout the "Province, and especially in this City" if a doubt remains upon their minds as to the urgent necessity and propriety of a public meeting, to express their disapprobation, and we will add, disgust at the governmental measures, and to unite with our spirited representatives in "addressing the Throne"—we therefore wish that some of our leading men, would authorize us to name a day, an hour, and a place, and we will venture to predict a full and respectable attendance.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.—We would direct public attention to the Tables on our last page, giving a statement of the Imports and Exports at the Port of Saint John and its Out-Bays, during the past year—the number of Vessels employed in the Coasting and Fishing trade, from these ports—and comprising a variety of other information, of much importance to persons concerned with the trade and commerce of this Province. The perspicuity of the different returns, bespeak the care and attention which has been devoted to them by the Officers of His Majesty's Customs at this port; to whom we are indebted for a copy of the documents.

New-Brunswick Fire Insurance Company.—The Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of this Company took place, pursuant to notice, on Monday last, when the following Gentlemen were re-elected Directors for the ensuing year:

Charles Simonds,	Esquires.	David Hatfield,
James Hendricks,		R. M. Jarvis,
John Kinnear,		William Jarvis,
John M. Wilmot,		Daniel Ansley,
John Kerr,		Robert F. Hazen,
John Hammond,		John Boyd,
Gilbert T. Ray,

And at a Meeting of the Directors on Wednesday last, Charles Simonds, Esquire, was re-elected President.

His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor has issued a Proclamation, appointing the Town of Woodstock, in the new County of Carleton, a place of Entry, for the entry of Goods from any adjoining Foreign Country.

JOHN GAPE.—We beg leave to comfort his Mourners, by assuring them that Jack's alive, and unchanged in principle and purpose, and that in due time and place he will re-enter on the stage, neither ratted nor poisoned in his ear, like Hamlet's Ghost.

TRIUMPH OF INTRIGUE.—We understand that it is the wish of several spirited Gentlemen in this City to take characters in this Drama, and get it up as a Play, for the Benefit of the Poor. We most heartily approve of it, and give this hint to its author, to persevere in his expositions, which have met with this flattering approval. We have no doubt but a crowded house would inspirit the Performers, and contribute to cheer and warm the gloomy and cold abodes of poverty. We hope O. P. will bear this in mind, and when he has given us the real matter, qualify it with some harmless and amusing fiction for stage effect.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—The suggestion of "A Subscriber," at Cornwallis, will be attended to in a few weeks.—"Tristram Shandy's" advertisement has been received, and although unaccompanied with the Cash, would have been published, as an act of charity, did we think it would procure employment for the Unfortunates, whose characters, from the references that are given, must be unimpeachable. We reserve it for further consideration.—The complaints from "A Subscriber" at the Oromocto, have been preferred to the proper authority here; and redress may therefore be expected.

A poll, for the election of a Member to represent the County of Gloucester in General Assembly, in room of Joseph Cunard, Esquire, who has been called to the Legislative Council, will be opened at the Court House, Newcastle, on Thursday next. The only candidate at present in the field, is J. A. Street, Esq.—Miramichi Gleaner, February 26th.

JAMAICA.—We received Kingston papers by the Orbit, to the 4th inst. We subjoin a few items only, lamenting that they exhibit a most disturbed and alarming state of the Island.—[N. York Albion.

The Parishes of St. Mary, St. Ann, Trelawney, St. James, and Hanover, as represented in Committee of the Colonial Union, have solemnly pledged themselves, at the hazard of their lives, not to permit any Baptist or other sectarian preacher or teacher to preach or teach in any house in towns where the influence of the Colonial Union extends. This resolution is accompanied by others expressive of the warmest attachment and loyalty to His Majesty, and of attachment to the Established Religion.

A report was current that Commodore Farquhar would proceed to the North side of the Island, in His Majesty's ship Blanche, for the purpose of affording protection to the Baptist preachers.

A riot had taken place amongst the colonised population of the Island on the house of Mr. Manden, a Colonial Unionist, Mr. M. having hissed the Governor. The Proclamation of the King against all Colonial Unions is published in all the papers forbidding their meetings for illegal purposes, which was disregarded by the Unionists.
