Sacred Vocal Music.

FROM an anxiety to encourage persons to acquire a knowledge of SACRED MUSIC, particularly those who imagine the art of "reading Music" and "setting tunes" to be beyond their comprehension, or in other words to be too difficult a task to undertake—the subscriber considers it his duty, for their information, and more particularly for the advancement of Christian worship, thus to pledge himself to the contrary; and to substantiate the same he offers to give instruction in the above art (the art of setting tunes without the help of a Tuning-Fork, Pitch-Pipe, or any other instrument is spoken of, no other of course,) on an improved system which supersedes the tedious and laborious task of acquiring (shall I say) only a very imperfect knowledge of Music by the use of unmeaning syllables.—In the proposed course of Instruction the latter system alluded to will be fully explained without loss of time in the execution of the former, and one very material error pointed out. A further encouragement held out, is, that if the Rudiments of Music absolutely necessary for a correct performance, either Vocal or Instrumental, will not be taught as simply and as fully in the meanwhile as by ANY PERSON heretofore, no pay will be demanded!!

The most satisfactory way to decide on the fulfilment of the above engagements, will be, to have persons who have been instructed in Music come forward at the expiration of the first Quarter, i. e. on the twenty-sixth evening of instruction (which may be made known by the Pupils to their friends or acquaintances as above alluded to, to whom a kind invitation is respectfully given,) and to have the visitors and learners ask questions alternately.

Young Ladies and Gentlemen who may be inclined to learn hereafter to play any instrument whatever, would find this a cheap and expeditious method of proceeding.

Should a sufficient number of Ladies apply, they will be attended to on different evenings from those of the Gentlemen, and at an earlier hour.—No person will be admitted the 1st Quarter who will not apply on or before the 21st instant. Terms and further particulars made known every afternoon (that of Sunday excepted,) by the subscriber at his residence.
