POETRY.

IRELAND AND LORD GREY.

By an Irishman (Moore.)—Written July 1834.

Alas, fated country,—of friends and of foes
Alike doomed the bane and the victim to be;
Even Grey's long, illustrious life, at its close,
Is crossed by the shadow thy destiny throws,
For his last act was binding a fetter on thee.

Oh mournful result of long ages of wrong,
That he, even he, ever glorious before,
Should be turn'd from his bright course, thy breakers among,
Forget the true star he had steered by so long,
And leave thus a wreck of high fame on thy shore!

Yet, no, mighty spirit,—though deep the heart mourns
At this one passing shade o'er a life full of light,
Ev'n this fades forgotten when Memory turns
To the long track of patriot glory that burns,
Half a century through, marking grandly his flight.

Nor shall Europe, when starting, with England for guide,
In that march of Reform he hath foremost led on,
E'er forget, when a new race shall rise, in its pride,
On the ruins of wrong, that her thrall was untied
By the noblest and best of the race who are gone;

By one who will stand in posterity's sight,
When the mists of the moment have fled as a dream,
Like some castle of chivalry, throned on a height,
Where the day, going off, leaves the last of its light,
Where the morn, coming on, brings its earliest beam.

MISCELLANY.

Average Duration of Life.—Amongst 100 individuals of each class in Germany, Dr. Casper finds that those attaining the age of 70 have been as follows:—Theologians 43, Agriculturists 40, Politicians 35, Merchants 35, Military Men 32, Lawyers 29, Artists 28, Professors 27, Practising Physicians 24.—Lancet.

American Heroines.—In the late wars which ensanguined the provinces of Buenos Ayres, the women of that country displayed the greatest courage. Donna Juana Ossunday fought a considerable time by the side of her husband, Gen. Cadilla. At the battle of Laguana this Amazonian lady carried from the Spaniards one of their colours, and the republic, in order to show its gratitude, conferred upon her the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. When the battle of Cochamba took place, the General Commanding, finding himself inferior in force to the opposing party, gave arms to the women of the city and a position to defend. They all perished in the conflict. On the same evening, according to the practice of the French army, an officer at the roll call inquired, "whether all the women of Cochamba were present," and was answered, "No, they are all dead for their country in the field of honour."—Le Camelion.

Sketch of a Patriot by Cobbett.—A certain every day orator did not commence patriot until he had duly qualified for the character, by the requisite inattention to his own private affairs. Your true patriot is a fish that is never to be found but in troubled water.—Cobbett's Porcupine.

Agesilaus was asked: "What ought children to be taught?"

His answer was: "They ought to learn that which it will be proper for them to practice when they reach mature age."

What is this but the most concise and the most excellent description that ever was given of a right education?

"Inform me," said a friend to Agesilaus, "of the means to establish a high reputation."

His answer was: "speak well and act better."

Lady Lucan was heard to say a very neat thing to Mrs. Sheridan:

"You must certainly be a very happy woman, madam, who have the felicity of pleasing the man who pleases all the world."

Agesilaus, being once asked which virtue was superior, fortitude or justice, answered: "Were all men just, there would be no occasion for fortitude."

Mr. Lalande dined one day at the house of Recamier, the banker; he was seated between the celebrated beauty, Madame Recamier, and Madame de Stael, equally distinguished for her wit. Wishing to say something agreeable to the ladies, the Astronomer exclaimed:

"How happy I am to be thus placed between wit and beauty."

"Yes, M. Lalande," sarcastically replied Madame de Stael, "and without possessing either."

A Right Honorable Gentleman who has been recently appointed to one of the highest offices in the State, having been admitted to the Royal presence to receive the seals of office, was observed, on his retirement, to rub his chin in a very contemplative mood.

"I hope," said a friend, "that you met with a gracious reception."

"I don't know what to think of it," replied the new Secretary; "His Majesty, with apparently perfect sincerity expressed a wish that I should follow the example of my late Noble predecessor—which I am afraid, means that nothing would give him so much pleasure as that I should cut my throat."

"According to Order."—Under a regulation that renders clergymen ineligible to a seat in the House of Commons, a motion was made to expel Horne Tooke, who had been recently elected a member, and who had been in orders. It was in vain that he made a solemn asservation that he had neither preached or prayed for thirty years. A decree of expulsion passed the House.

A sailor having a mind for a ride, and being unacquainted with a horse's rigging, as he termed it, was very busy in harnessing his nag, when he happened to place the saddle the contrary way. A person near him observed his mistake, when Jack looking steadfastly at him, and giving his quid a twist or two in his mouth said, "how do you know which way I am a going to ride?"

Licking Good.—We attended a wedding not long since in the western part of the state, at a clergyman's house, and after the ceremony was performed, the bridegroom took from his hat a large apple, and cutting it in two pieces, handed one half of it to the bride, and kept the other to himself. "There, now, Polly," said he, "you eats that are, and I eats this ere!"

A girl from Neilston Parish went into a Shoe shop in the High Street the other day to purchase a pair of shoes. After getting a pair to suit her she opened the mouth of a sack and took out some money she had deposited there. Ye mind me, o' the children o' Isarel langsyne, said the shoemaker, when they went to the land of Egypt, for they had their siller tied in the mouth o' their sack, ye min.—Aweel, said the girl, see an you can do as Joseph did, ye ken he gied them back their siller!

Look out, Gentlemen!—Judge Green (rightly named Egad,) of New Hampshire, has decided that if a gentleman for a considerable length of time pays particular attention to a lady of the same rank and standing in life with himself, such as to visit with her, take her to visit at his father's friends, &c. that from these facts the jury have a right to presume a promise of marriage."

Integrity of Sir Matthew Hale.—So sacred a virtue is justice, and of such vast importance to the public, that it is the great concern of governments to trust the administration thereof to no persons but such as fear God and abhor covetousness.

When Judge Hale was holding a certain assizes in England, a gentleman who was to have a cause tried before him that assize, sent him a buck. The cause being called on, and the judge taken notice of the name, asked if it was not the same person who had made him the present; and finding that was the fact said he could not suffer the trial to go on until be has paid him for his buck. To which the gentleman answered, that he never sold his venison, and that he done no more to him than what he had always done to every judge that came that circuit. But all this would not prevail on Sir Matthew, nor would he suffer the trial to proceed till he had paid him for the venison; whereupon the gentleman withdrew his action.—Christian Penny Magazine.

Boat Safety.—A very ingenious, compact, and simple apparatus has been invented by Lieut. Beaden, R. N. of this neighbourhood, to prevent the upsetting of sailing boats. From the neglect to let the sheet go in time, in squally weather, it is well known that the most fatal results are continually occurring. Lieut. Beadon's apparatus, by a self-adjusting movement, ensures the right position of the boat, so that its safety is independent of any other attention or manual operation. The invention which is protected by a patent, is highly creditable to its author, and will, no doubt, be soon generally adopted. It has been tried and approved of by several experienced nautical men of this town.—Taunton Courier.

Military Experiment.—On Tuesday last a very interesting experiment was made at Chatham, by the Royal Sappers and Miners for the purpose of ascertaining the practicability, within certain limits, of destroying or exposing by mines the galleries, &c. of an enemy's mine. Bellidor, a celebrated French Engineer, asserted nearly a century ago the possibility of carrying approaches even to works of the place, by thus exposing the souterranerns of a fortress. The experiment, as far as it went, verified the deductions of the French engineer, a shaft sunk, and a gallery driven to within a given distance of the mine, containing nearly 149 lbs. of gunpowder, being ruined and exposed by the explosion. We consider the mining establishment at Chatham to be a most useful one, and too much praise cannot be given to Colonel Pasley, of the Royal Engineers, for the efficiency and knowledge now possessed by this department of the British army. The sieges undertaken by us in the Peninsula afforded ample proof of the want of a body of men regularly educated for sapping and mining. The accounts in Napier's History of our sieges prove that an enormous waste of life was occasioned by not having regular sappers and miners. The workmen who had to break ground before Cuidad Rodrigo and Badajos had absolutely to learn the use of their tools, those not being the days of intuition. The experiments and researches of St. Remy, Bellidor, La Valliere, and other French engineers, on the important subject of mines, are well worthy the attention not only of the engineer officers, but of British officers in general. It is remarkable that gunpowder, although used so early as 1346 for discharging balls from cannon, at the battle of Cressy, was not employed for mining until 1487 by the Genoese, at the siege of Serezaneila, a town belonging to the Forenties. In this instance, from the engineer not employing a sufficient quantity, the attempt failed. Peter de Navarre had better success in 1503, at the siege of the citadel of Naples, held by the French against the Spaniards. The Commandant of this fort refusing to surrender, Peter de Navarre blew up the wall of the castle, and carried the place by assault.—United Service Journal.

The China Trade.—Advices were received in London, on Monday, up to the 25th of April, from Sincapore, and their contents are of an interesting nature, as they refer to the commencement of the free trade in tea. The 22d of April being the day on which the East India Company's privileges ceased, permits were issued, the next day at Sincapore. In order to commemorate the opening of the trade, it was determined that the first shipment from Sincapore, under the new system, should be marked, and that the first chest of tea should be conveyed alone, intended for being sent to England, to the barque Troughton, Captain Thomas. The chest was hoisted into the barque, under a salute fired from the different ships in the harbour, and with great cheering. The merchants at Sincapore were on the qui vive in preparing to avail themselves of the benefits arising from the opening of the trade. The demand for European piece goods was more active to meet the exports to China. Between 6,000 and 7,000 chests of tea had been brought by Chinese junks, and a great quantity more was expected in consequence of the free-trade system coming into operation. A great addition to the trade with China proper was also anticipated, the intercourse with which having been before of little importance. A demand for British manufactures and the produce of India would be caused by this circumstance. The Sincapore merchants expected a very active trade, as the settlement would be made a depot for tea, as it was believed the traders would give the preference to buying teas there rather than to proceed to Canton, where the charges on ships were exorbitant. At Sincapore several speculative purchases had been made, on account of export to England, and it is likely, therefore, that a short time will only elapse before teas will arrive in this country under the free-trade system. Nine vessels of the free-trade were at Sincapore, of which eight were destined for England. Thomas Church, Esq., had been appointed acting Governor of the Straits of Malacca, according to the order of the Governor-General.
