THE MUFFLED DRUM.—By Mrs Hemans

The muffled drum was heard In the Pyrenees by night, With a dull deep rolling sound, Which told the herald round Of a soldier's burial rite.

THE SOLDIER'S GRAVE.—BY L. R. F.

There's a white stone placed upon yonder tomb, Beneath is a soldier lying; The death wound came amid sword and plume, When banner and ball were flying.

MISCELLANY.

THE BERRY BUT.—Can I have a dinner?

"Can I have a dinner?" asked a transient gentleman of the proprietor of a fashionable coffee house in a flourishing country town.

Fortune well told.—A young lady, a native of Martinique and a Creole, was on her voyage to France, with a design of being educated there.

Cure for hard times.—We are too fond of showing out in our families, and in this way our expenses far exceed our income.

Change of climate.—Upon this subject the opinions of the German philosophers would appear to be at variance with those of the other European nations.

Sugar & Molasses.—New landing ex Schr. Brisk, from St. Kitts: 20 HDS. SUGAR; 64 puncheons do MOLASSES;—for sale by RATCHFORD & LUGRIN.

Sailor Horse-breakers.—Rear-Admiral Cockburn had directed me to land on the left bank of the river, to obtain, if possible, a supply of horses for the officers and artillery. I came upon a farm, which the proprietor had abandoned, better stocked than usual with these useful quadrupeds: but all young, and apparently new broken in. They were as wild as deer; but having finally succeeded in driving them into the farm yard, and thence into a stable, by the assistance of gaskets converted into halters, we secured them, but to full of fire and spirit were the animals, that they threatened to overcome our endeavours in embarking them. Finding I was losing time, I adopted a summary mode of rendering them obedient. Much to the delight of the Jacks, I ordered them to mount the unruly nags, and having taken a half hitch with the gasket on the lower jaws of the animals, they vaulted on their backs to the number of twenty. The farm yard gate was then thrown open, and helter skelter went the whole troop, kicking and flinging to get rid of their riders, who balked at their efforts by the tenacity with which they clung, like so many outs, to their naked backs. Jack cracked on all sail, and round and round the large enclosure they whirled at full gallop in an ecstasy of delight. In little less than half an hour they were completely tractable, and without any difficulty I embarked the poor brutes. It is a singular fact, that not one of the riders was unhipped, though I firmly believe it was the first time they had ever bestrode a horse.—Capt. Scott's Recollections of a Naval Life.

TAKING IT EASY.—On the morning after the mutiny broke out on board the T—, in Berbera, the ship's company of the Vengeance (74), who had for some days been in secret and seditious intercourse with the crew of the former, were seen before the time usually allowed for breakfast had expired "coming aft in a body." The Lieutenant and two Midshipmen of the watch were the only officers at the time upon deck; the rest were at breakfast below; but when the Captain, who was reading in his cabin, perceived the men crowding en masse on the quarter-deck, he quickly arose from his seat, and, with book in hand and head uncovered, came out upon deck, and coolly inquired their "business." "Why, Sir," said the captain of the forecastle, who acted on the occasion as spokesman, "we hear as how the ship's ordered abroad—the West Indies, they say—and the ship's company wishes to know whether it is true, or no more or a pally packet; for you see, Sir, in time of peck, they doesn't alter their look upon it as a fair matter 'twixt man and man, to be sent out of the land." "Pon my word," replied the Captain, "this is the first intimation I've had of the matter; but all I know is this, whether East or West Indies, wherever I'm ordered, I go; and wherever I go, you go!—Come, come—down, my lads, your cocoa's cooling," good humouredly added the undaunted Duif, returning into his cabin, without once looking behind to see if the ship's company had dispersed and followed his advice. Pleased with the manly conduct of their Captain, the tars retired with a murmur.—Natal Sketch Book.

Abstract of Mr. O'Connell's Bill to secure the Liberty of the Press.—1. That no ex officio, or other information, at the suit of His Majesty's Attorney-General, or of His Majesty's Coroner and Attorney of the Court of King's Bench, whether with or without the leave of the Court, shall be filed on account of any libel after the passing of this Act. 2. That no indictment shall be prosecuted for any public libel upon any allegation merely of the criminal intentions of the publisher thereof, but that it shall be necessary in every such indictment to allege, and to prove at the trial, that the libel therein set forth was published to aid or abet, or to counsel or advise, or procure, the commission of some crime for which a person may now by law be indicted as an accessory before the fact. 3. It shall not be necessary to write or print a libel, unless the same are actionable when spoken. 6. The truth may be given in evidence to enable the Jury to decide whether criminal or not. 7. Notice to retract to be served on the publisher, and proof of bona fide retraction a defence. 8. If the author file against him, the publisher not to be prosecuted. 9. If the prosecution fail against the author for want of proof, the publisher to be liable to the costs of that prosecution. 10. The prosecutor not entitled to a Special Jury without consent; but the defendant may have a Special Jury. 11. Counsel for the prosecution not to reply, unless evidence be given for the defence; and if such Counsel speak to evidence, defendant's Counsel have the ultimate reply. 12. No attachment against a publication for constructive contempt of Court. 13. Where damages do not exceed £20, the defendant to have his costs; no costs to either party where the damages do not exceed £20. When damages exceed £20, full costs to plaintiff. 14. This act not to extend to any blasphemous libel, or to any libel on Christianity; or to any on the King or Queen; or for obscenity. 15. Privilege of Parliament not to be affected. 16. It shall not be lawful for any Court to sentence any person convicted of a libel, whether public or personal, to any greater length of imprisonment than a term not exceeding six months, nor to any greater fine than a sum not exceeding £100, nor to any other punishment than to imprisonment or to the payment of a fine. 17. This act not to extend to accessories who might be convicted under former laws. 18. And not to extend to prosecution for a misdemeanour. 19. And not to extend to Scotland. 20. Repeat of Statutes 4 Geo. III, cap. 96, sec. 10, Irish; 6 Geo. III, cap. 60; 6 Geo. III, cap. 4, sec. 1 and 3. 21. The defendant to be at liberty to prove the libel made and published without his privy.
