POETRY.

THE FOUR-LEAVED SHAMROCK.

BY S. LOVER, ESQ.

I'll seek a four-leaved shamrock,
In all the fairy dells:
And if I find the charmed leaves,
Oh! how I'll weave my spells!
I would not waste my magic might
On diamond, pearl, or gold,
For treasure tires the weary sense,
Such triumph is but cold;
But I would play th' enchanter's part,
In casting bliss around;
Oh! not a tear, nor aching heart,
Should in the world be found.

To worth I would give honour,
I'd dry the mourner's tears,
And to the pallid lip recall
The smile of happier years:
And hearts that had been long estranged,
And friends that had grown cold,
Should meet again, like parted streams,
And mingle as of old.
Oh! thus I'd play th' enchanter's part,
Thus scatter bliss around;
And not a tear, nor aching heart,
Should in the world be found.

The heart that had been mourning
O'er vanished dreams of love,
Should see them all returning
Like Noah's faithful dove.
And Hope should launch her blessed bark
On Sorrow's dark'ning sea,
And Mis'ry's children have an ark,
And saved from sinking be.
Oh! thus I'd play th' enchanter's part,
Thus scatter bliss around;
And not a tear, nor aching heart,
Should in the world be found.

MISCELLANY.

[From the Novascotian.]

RECOLLECTIONS OF NOVA-SCOTIA—No. 8.

The preacher that wandered from his text.

I guess, said the Clock-maker, we know more of Nova-Scotia than the blue noses themselves do. The Yankees see further ahead than most folks, they can even a most see round tother side of a thing; indeed some on em have hurt their eyes by it, and sometimes I think that's the reason such a sight of them wear spectacles. The first I ever herd tell of Cumberland, was from Mr. Everett, of Congress; he know'd as much about it as if he had lived here all his days, and may be a little grain more. He is a splendid man that, we class him No. 1, letter A. One night I chanced to go into Gen. Peep's tavern at Boston, and who should I see there, but the great Mr. Everett a studying over a map of the Province of Nova-Scotia. Why it ant possible, said I, if that ant Professor Everett, as I am alive, why how do you do Professor? pretty well I give you thanks, said he, but I ant no longer Professor, I gin that up, and also the trade of Preaching, and took to politics—you don't say so, said I, why what on airth is the cause o'that? why, says he, look here Mr. Slick, what is the use of reading the Proverbs of Solomon to our free and enlightened citizens, that are every mite and morsel as wise as he was? That are man undertook to say there was nothing new under the sun, I guess he'd think he spoke a little too fast, if he was to see our steam boats, rail roads, and India rubber shoes, three inventions worth more nor all he knew put in a heap together. Well I don't know, said I, but somehow or another, I guess you'd have found preaching the best speculation in the long run, them are Unitarians pay better than Uncle Sam; (we call, said the Clock-maker, the American public Uncle Sam, as you call the British John Bull.)

That remark seemed to grig him a little, he felt oneasy like, and walked twice across the room, fifty fathoms deep in thought; at last he said, which way are you from, Mr. Slck, this hitch? Why, says I, I've run away up south a speculating in nutmegs.—I hope, says the Professor, they were a good article, the real right down genuine thing. No mistake, says I, no mistake—they were all prime, first chop; but why did you ax that are question? Why, says he, that etarnal scoundrel, that Captain John Allspice of Nahant, he used to trade to Charleston, and he carried a cargo once there of fifty barrels of nutmegs; well, he put half a bushel of good ones into each eend of the barrel, and the rest he filled up with wooden ones, so like the real thing, no soul could tell the difference until he bit one with his teeth, and that he never thought of doing, until he was first bit himself. Well, its been a standing joke with them southerners agin us ever since. It was only tother day at Washington that everlasting duellist, General Duffy, afore a number of senators, at the President's house, said to me, "Well, Everett, says he, you know I was always dead agin your Tariff bill, but I have changed my mind since your able speech on it—I shall vote for it now." Give me your hand, says I, General Duffy—the Boston folks will be dreadful glad when they hear your splendid talents are on our side, I think it will go now, we'll carry it.—Yes, says he, your factories down east beat all natur, they go ahead of the English a long chalk. You may depend I was glad to hear the New Englanders spoken of that way, I felt proud, I tell you—and, says he, there's one manufacture that might stump all Europe to produce the like; what's that, says I, looking as pleased all the time as a gall that's tickled; why, says he, the facture of wooden nutmegs, that's a cap sheef that bangs the bush, its a real Yankee patent invention. With that all the gentlemen set up a laugh, you might have heard away down to Sandy Hook—and the Gineral gig gobbled like a great Turkey cock, the half nigger, half aligator like looking villain. I tell you what, Mr. Slick, said the Professor, I wish with all my heart them are damned nutmegs were in the bottom of the sea. That was the first oath I ever heard him let slip, but he was dreadful ryled, and it made me feel ugly too, for its dreadful to hear a minister swear; and the only match I know for it—is to hear a regular sneezer of a sinner quote scriptnre. Says I, Mr. Everett, the fruit that politics bear, for my part I never seed a graft on it yet, that bore any thing good to eat, or easy to digest.

Well, he stood awhile a looking down on the carpet, with his hands behind him, quite taken up a cyphering in his head, and then he straightened himself up, and he put his hand on his heart, just as he used to do in the pulpit, (he looked pretty I tell you,) and slowly lifting his hand off his breast, he said—'Mr. Slick, our tree of liberty was a beautiful tree, a splendid tree, it was a sight to look at, it was well fenced and well protected, and it grew so stately and so handsome, that strangers came from all parts of the globe to see it. They all allowed it was the most splendid thing in the world. Well, the mobs have broken in and tore down the fences, and snapped off the branches, and scattered all the leaves about, and it looks no better than a gallows tree.' I am afeared, said he, I tremble to think on it, but I am afeared our ways will no longer be ways of pleasantness, nor our paths, paths of peace; I am indeed, I vow, Mr. Slick. He looked so streaked and so chop-fallen, that I felt kinder sorry for him, so, to turn the conversation, says I, Professor, what are great map is that I seed you studyin over when I came in? Says he, its a map of Nova-Scotia—that, says he, is a valuable province, a real clever province, we hant got the like on it, but its most plagily in our way. Well, says I, send for Sam Patch, (that are feller was a great diver, says the Clockmaker, and the last dive he took was off the falls of Niagara, and he was never heerd of agin till totherday, when Captain Enoch Wentworth, of the Susy Ann, Whaler, saw him in the South Sea. Why, says Capt. Enoch to him, why how on airth did you get here? I thought you was drowned at the Canadian lines. Why, says he, I did'nt get on airth here at all, but I came through it. In that Niagara dive, I went so everlasting deep, I thought it was just as short to come up at tother side, so out I came in those parts. If I dont take the shine off the Sea Serpent, when I get back to Boston, then my name's not Sam Patch.)

Well, says I, Professor send for Sam Patch the diver, and let him dive down and stick a torpedo in the bottom of the Province and blow it up—or if that won't do, send for some of our steam tow boats from our great Eastern cities, and tow it out to sea, you know there is nothing our folks can't do, when they once fairly take hold on a thing in airnest. Well that made him laugh, he seemed to forget about the nutmegs, and says he that's a bright scheme, but it won't do; we shall want the Province some day, and I guess we'd buy it of King William; they say he is over head and ears in debt, and owes nine hundred millions of pounds starling—we'll buy it, as we did Florida. In the mean time we must have a canal from Bay Fundy to Bay Verte, right through Cumberland neck, by Shittyack, for our fishing vessels to go to Labradore. I guess you must ax leave first, said I; that's jist what I was cyphering at, says he, when you came in, I believe we wont ax them at all, but jist fall too and do it; its a road of needcessity. I once heard Chief Justice Marshal at Baltimore say; if the people's highway is dangerous—a man may take down a fence—and pass through the fields as a way of needcessity—and we shall do it on that principle; as the way round by Isle Sable is dangerous. I wonder the Novascotians dont do it for their own convenience—it would'nt make a bad speculation that. The critters dont know no better, said he.

Well, says I, the St. John's folks, why don't they, for they are pretty cute chaps them. They remind me, says the Professor, of Jim Billings, you knew Jim Billings, did'nt you Mr. Slick? oh, yes, said I, I knew him, it was him that made such a talk by shipping blankets to the West Indies; the same, says he. Well I went to see him the other day at Mrs. Lecain's boarding house, and says I, Billings, you have a nice location here—a plagy sight too nice, said he. Marm Lecain makes such an etarnal touss about her carpets, that I have to go along that everlasting long entry, and down both staircases, to the street door to spit; and it keeps all the Gentlemen a running with their mouths full all day. I had a real bout with a New Yorker this morning, I run down to the street door, and afore I see'd any body a coming, I let go, and I vow if I did'nt let a chap have it all over his white waistcoat—well, he makes a grab at me, and I shuts the door right too on his rist, and hooks the door chain taught, and leaves him there, and into Marm Lecain's bed room like a shot, and hides behind the curtain—well, he roared like a bull, till black Lucretia, one of the house helps, let him go, and they looked into all the gentlemen's rooms and found nobody, so I got out of that are scrape. So what with Marm Lecain's carpets in the house, and other folks waistcoats in the street, its too nice a location for me, I guess, so I shall up killoch and off tomorrow to the Tree-mont.

Now, says the Professor, the St John's folks are jist like Billings, fifty cents would have bought him a spit box, and saved him all them are journeys to the street door—and a canal at Bay Verte, would save the St. John's folks a voyage all round Nova-Scotia. Why they cant get at their own backside settlements, without a voyage most as long as one to Europe. If we had that are neck of land in Cumberland, we'd have a ship canal there, and a town at each end of it as big as Portland. You may talk of Solomon, said the Professor, but if Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like a lily of the field, neither was he in all his wisdom, equal in knowledge, to a real free American citizen. Well, said I, Professor, we are a most enlightened people, that's certain, but somehow I don't like to hear you run down King Solomon neither; perhaps he warnt quite as wise as Uncle Sam, but then, said I, (drawing close to the Professor, and whispering in his ear, for fear any folks in the bar room might hear me) but then, said I, may be he was every bit and grain as honest.

[From the Boston Evening Gazette.]

MEXICO—TEXAS—&c.—The Republic of Mexico extends from 15 to 42 deg. N. lat. and from 86 to 125 deg. W. lon. forming an area of 1,690,000 square miles. The confederacy is composed of nineteen States and four Territories, comprising a population of 8,000,000, including 4,000,000 Indians, 1,500,000 Creoles—the remainder mixed breeds. Two of the provinces now at war with the existing Government of Mexico, are Texas, and Cohauilla, making an area of 193,600 square miles—population 130,000—of which Monclova is the capital, of 6000 inhabitants. It is believed that there are 30,000 inhabitants (American settlers) in the two districts. The productions are gold and silver, banana, Mainaic, maize, sugar cane, cocoa, indigo, cochineal, tobacco, &c.—besides these, there are vast herds of horses, mules, and horned cattle, which literally cover these grand prairies. The country abounds in most kind of minerals, and it is a fine healthy climate. Twenty-seven emigrants left Mobile recently in the steamboat Watchman, for Texas, who appeared in high spirits, with hearty cheers from a large collection of citizens, who assembled on the wharves on the departure of the boat. The head quarters of the army of Texas is at Gonzales, Austin's settlement.

From Texas.—By the New Orleans Bee, it appears that the Texanians have taken la Bahia with about thirty men, and made prisoner of the collector. A portion of the inhabitants have joined them. It is also stated that Gen. Cos, who was deceived by a forced march, rallied his troops, determined to be amply revenged. Disturbances on an extensive scale had occurred at Puebla, and even in the city of Mexico many persons of influence and talents have combined to establish the Constitution of 1833, or to adhere, at least, to the federal system. The Legislature of the State of Tarmauplipas has refused to hold a session to confirm the late decree of the Supreme Congress, and have sent deputies to Mexico to that effect. Other States, with Guonajuato and Julisco, are likely to follow this example.

We copy the following gratifying paragraphs from the Western papers received by the last mails:—

A large meeting, for the relief of the Texanians, was held at Natchez the 6th inst. The leading citizens took an active part in the proceedings, which breathed a spirit of ethusiasm and stern resolve; there is no doubt, that an efficient company of volunteers will be sent forth from that city.

By the New Orleans papers of the 29th ult, we learn that two hundred volunteers had left that city to join the Texanians.

A vessel left New-York last Wednesday with more than two hundred volunteers for Texas. She goes to New Orleans, which port is to be the rendezvous for four other vessels also with volunteers—immediately after their arrival they will leave in a body for Texas.

The St. Louis papers do not hesitate to say, that if Texas requires aid from the United States, that 20,000 men could be readily enlisted in their cause, from the States bordering on the Mississippi. It is the cause of freedom, and all true Americans would rally to its standard.

On the volunteers leaving Mobile, to aid the colonists in their struggle against Santa Anna, they were greeted with three cheers from an immense multitude. The Mobile Transcript says:—'Our best wishes go with this chivalrous little band, and we hope they may find in the "tented field," the glory they so ardently seek.'

Ex-Governor Houston has been elected Commander-in-Chief of the forces in Texas.

Mr. Newhall—a passenger in the brig Two Sisters, which arrived at Salem on Wednesday last from Maranham, (Brazil) states that the Indians are gradually obtaining possession of the whole province of Maranham. They are spreading themselves over the whole State, and the whites everywhere give way before them.
