

POETRY.

[FOR THE COURIER.]

TO MARY.

O! blest be the light that has dawn'd on thy soul,
Be it sacred for ever, and pure as our cause—
Through ages to come, may it spur the controul
Of the Despot, who sullied our temples and laws.

To millions unborn, that beam shall yet shine;
I shall glitter on fane's unform'd ray;
And thousands shall own that the ray is divine,
Ere the power of the tyrant has dwindled away.

Weep not for the wrongs, for the woes we endure,
Though our valleys be red, most our children
be free;
And rivers of life blood, unsullied and pure,
Shall roll on unobscured, till lost in the sea.

The gem shall be torn from the brow of the fair,
The wall of the vanquished be heard through our land,
The bones of the mighty no burial shall know,
Till the sceptre is dashed from our conqueror's hand.

Ev'ry day, ev'ry hour of bondage we feel,
Shall but strengthen that vengeance, so dear,
our own;
In secret 'twill burn till the warrior's steel
Has pierced the last prop of your blood-stained throne.

Then, MARY, oh then, shall the harp thou hast played,
'Mid the ranks of the faithful be sounded again,
And the theme of our country's redemption be sung,
Till the world re-echoes the hallowed strain.

Farwell, but forget not the land of thy birth,
Forget not the soil thy feet tread with their tread,
Forget not till life's last pulsation expires,
The field where, tho' vanquished, our countrymen stood.

For me, when I cease to remember thy name,
May the lyre thou hast sent me for ever be still,
And quenched in my bosom that patriot flame,
Which hath cheered me through past years of sorrow and ill.

ON SEEING CHILDREN AT PLAY.

BY N. P. WILLIS.

I love to look on a scene like this,
Of wild and careless play,
And gaze myself that I am not old,
And my looks are not yet gray.

For it stirs the blood in an old man's heart,
And it makes his pulses fly,
To catch the thrill of a happy voice,
And the light of a pleasant eye.

I have walked the world for four-score years,
And they say that I am old,
And my heart is ripe for the reaper, death,
And my years are well nigh told.

It is very true, it is very true,
I'm old, and 't is true my time;
But my heart will leap at a scene like this,
And I half renew my prime.

Play on, play on! I am with you there,
In the midst of your merry ring,
I can feel the thrill of the dancing jump,
And the rush of the breathless swing.

I hide with you in the fragrant hay,
And I whom the world has called old,
And my feet slip up on the scudly door,
And I care not for the fall.

I am willing to die when my time shall come,
And I shall be glad to go;
For the world, at best, is a weary place,
And my pulse is getting low.

But the grave is dark, and the heart will fail
In reaching its gloomy way;
And I wish my heart from its dreariness,
To see the young so gay.

MISCELLANY.

Military Rewards and Punishments.—Lieutenant-General Evans, the commander of the British legion now serving in Spain, has just sent an example, which, if followed by the Horse Guards at home, would do more towards improving the character and discipline of the army than any other means that could be devised. In an order of the day, issued on the 4th instant, after the battle at St. Sebastian, he announces that Sergeant McIntosh, of the grenadiers, has been appointed to an ensigncy on account of his bravery and general good conduct, and says that "it is but one of numerous similar appointments which he knows the generous zeal and courage of the legion will enable him to make." The Lieutenant-General knows no distinction between private, officers, and non-commissioned officers of this legion, excepting in so far as the valour and propriety of conduct of each individual in his respective class shall point out as just to be made. Nor shall even the want of education debar him from advancing natural ability and decided good conduct. The British soldier, whether private, non-commissioned officer, or subaltern, is considered throughout the world to possess the highest and noblest degree of intrepidity. Why then should he be left at the bottom of the scale, or be denied the same objects of hope and ambition which inspire the superior officers? Why should the man who cheerfully goes forward, offering all that he has, his life and strength, on the altar of his duty, be deprived of those proofs of his conduct? Such, at least, should not be the case in the force under the orders of the Lieutenant-General.

Caution to Captains engaging to carry Emigrant Passengers.—On Tuesday last, Capt. Wm. Hoise, of the American ship Pacific, was brought before the sitting Magistrate, the Mayor, and Sir Thomas Branker by special summons, at the instance of the government emigrating agent, to answer the complaint of William Colwell, one of the emigrant passengers, for not putting to sea agreeably to his contract with P. W. Byrne, a passenger agent. The case being a breach of the 14th clause of the new passengers' regulation act, under which emigrant passengers have a right to claim one shilling per diem each, when detained beyond the time agreed upon for the sailing of the vessel, the magistrates decided in favor of the emigrant, and awarded that sum to each of the passengers from the 14th inst. until the ship sailed put to sea. The Pacific has with us, and about 80 passengers on board to whom this allowance must be paid until she sails for America.

Mr. Grant, of Corymphony, the father of the Scottish bar, died last week at Lakefield, Inverness-shire, in his 93d year.

CONSPIRACY.—In the Central Criminal Court, yesterday week, twenty omnibus proprietors were found guilty of a conspiracy to injure a rival proprietor of omnibuses, and drive him off the high road. They were sentenced to various fines, amounting together to £770, which were paid at once by the cheque of one of the defendants.

Copper Mines of Cornwall.—The importance and magnitude of the copper mines of Cornwall alone, may be gathered from the simple statement, that within the past ten years no less a sum than £2,053,263 15s. has been realized by their produce, amounting to 1,346,847 tons of ore; and it is a matter of notoriety, that there are mines now working, which yield from £30,000 to £50,000 per annum profit to the proprietors.

HOES IN HARNESS.—A novelty was seen at St. Albans the other day, which proves that pigs are not of such a dolous material as is admitted of no improvement. A man who holds a small farm near St. Albans, made his entry into the latter place, mounted on a small cart drawn by four large hogs. He entered the town at a brisk trot, amidst the exclamations of hundreds, who were soon drawn together to witness the uncommon spectacle. After making the tour of the market place three or four times, he went into the Woolpack yard, had his swinish cattle unharnessed and taken into a stable together, where they were regaled with a troughful of beans and wash. They remained about two hours, while he made his entry into the market, when they were put to the cart and drove home again, multitudes cheering him. This man, it is said, has only had these animals under training six months. A gentleman on the spot offered him £50 for the concern as it stood, but was indignantly refused.

NATURAL CRITICISM.—I always find much pleasure in the remarks made by country people on the habits of animals. A countryman was shown Gainsborough's celebrated picture of the pigs. "To be sure," said he, "they be daddly like pigs; but there is one fault—nobody ever saw three pigs feeding together, but what one on 'um had a foot in the trough."—Jesse's Nat. History.

The population of St. Petersburg is divided into the following classes: 42,743 nobles, 40,763 citizens, 55,307 military, 11,770 ecclesiastics, 14,400 merchants and traders, 10,084 artisans, 57,691 persons engaged in different professions, 14,665 strangers, 102,936 laborers and domestic servants, and 141,745 peasants, making altogether 490,045, of which number only 140,707 are females.

Masquerade Trick.—At a late masquerade in Malta, given by the lady of the English governor, two British officers appeared in the character of a couple of large bottles of blacking, labelled the one, "Day and Martin," the other, "Warren, 30, Strand." After moving about in great style for some time, they ran against each other and broke all to pieces, when outjumped two harlequins, who amused the company with many ingenious tricks and witty artifices.

At a public meeting in England the weather was warm, and there stood near me a little fat gentleman, who seemed much incommoded by the crowd. There came pressing behind him a tall raw-boned man, holding a memorandum in his hand. "What do you mean, sir," (said the fat gentleman,) "by crowding and jostling in this manner? Who are you, sir?" "Sir, I'm one of the gentlemen connected with the press." "I thought so," (was the ready reply,) "for you have nearly squeezed my ribs in."

—Twenty Years in Retirement.

Beauty of Englishwomen.—Certainly our fair country women do bear away the palm of beauty. Much of this depends on our climate; something on our simple diet; but more, I think, on our language, which requires less movement of the muscles of the face than that of any other European nation. The French, in particular, from the pronunciation of their language, have, after a certain age, the lines about the mouth very strongly defined, which certainly does not add to their beauty. The gentleness of the English is much less than that of foreigners; but whether this arises from the copiousness of our language, which needs no accessories to convey the meaning of the speaker, or from the phlegmatic character of the people, is more than I can pretend to say. This, however, I have observed, that after having been long accustomed to the faces of Englishwomen, the features of the French appear hard, and, vice versa, when in the habit of seeing French countenances, those of my countrymen appear insipid.

GRATIS SYSTEM.—Printers do a great business on the gratis system. They are exposed to more solicitations than any other portion of the community, and the truth is, they get no thanks or praise.

The editor of the Boston Transcript remarks that "the fact is, there are no persons who earn their living by honest industry, who are so much and so often imposed upon, as the newspaper fraternity." The badge of all our tribe is 'sufferance.' We submit to everything; quarrel with nobody; and let every body quarrel with us. We give away gratuitous advertising, in support of liberty, law, and religion; infant schools, lyceums, hospitals, &c. &c. more money annually than could build a church, and yet we are constantly threatened with excommunication from all churches, because we occasionally take the liberty to refuse to do a 'good natured thing,' at the expense of our pocket. But no matter. We are growing wiser every day; and there are some of us who fortunately begin to think that 'giving away,' is not more our duty than our neighbours. Here ends this homily.

A Good Joke.—A correspondent at Charleston informs us of an amusing occurrence, which took place in that town on Saturday. A mechanic had been employed by a sportsman to make him some jecky ducks, which, when finished, were placed on the top of a three-story building in the rear of Main street, for the purpose of drying the paint. Very early in the morning, a citizen discovered them through the fog, and supposing them to be genuine, resolved to have some of them for his dinner. He accordingly borrowed a gun, which he loaded very heavily, and having stationed a friend near by on the ground, with a musket ready cocked to bring down such as escaped on the wing, he went up through the scuttle of an adjoining house, and fired into the midst of them. He was thunderstruck to find that none of them moved, and had killed them all so dead that they could not even flap their wings, whereas a loud and hearty laugh from the bystanders, who had collected to witness and enjoy the joke, informed him that he had made a slight mistake.
