POETRY.

THE ROCKY DEEP,

BY A. PARK, ESQ.

The following are the words of a song lately written by Andrew Park, Esq. and set to music by Mr. C. H. Purday, of London.

Ah! who shall sing of the rocky deep,
Where a thousand secrets lie;
Where the Nereids brave, in each coral cave,
Rove far from mortal eye?
And the mermaids ride o'er the rolling tide,
As Neptune sweeps along;
And amid the breeze, upturns the seas,
To the tempest's doleful song!

Oh! there is mirth, and love, and light
In the temples far below;
An empire's gold lies bright and cold,
All scattered to and fro.
Though breakers roar from shore to shore,
On Ocean's breast above,
No murmur falls to the pearly halls,
Where sea-nymphs learn to love!

MISCELLANY.

IMPORTANT LETTER

From Dr. Boyle, Roman Catholic Bishop of Kildare and Leighlin, to the Secretary of the New Ross Temperance Society.

Carlow, December 29, 1829.

"My Dear Rev. Sir,—I have received and read all the tracts and papers relative to Temperance Societies, which you had the kindness to send to me. I thank you very much for them, and for your own most acceptable letters which accompanied them. Illness or inability to make up my mind as to what I should say of the 'good cause' in which you are engaged, prevented me till now from writing to you, and even now I am at a loss how to express all I think respecting it.

"Every Christian—indeed, every man endowed with reason; whether he be or be not a christian—must look upon drunkenness and upon excessive drinking, as one of the most debasing and hateful vices which infects the human kind; it stultifies and brutalizes men, and as to women, it reduces their condition far below the condition of the brute. Your medical friends in the tracts you have sent me, prove most fully and satisfactorily how it generates diseases innumerable, of body and mind; consuming like a plague or the parching wind of the desert; but these are effects of it which I can scarcely lament, for I think a drunkard, though unfit to die, is entirely unfit to live; and that, when he will not be reclaimed, his removal from this world, is not only a just judgment of Divine Providence upon himself, but a blessing to his family and to all those whom by its influence or example he had corrupted or scandalized.

"I would be, therefore, glad to heal the drunkard; but, if he were obstinate, and obstinately persevered in his vice, I would feel upon his death, as I would upon the death of a murderer dying on the scaffold, that he had paid the forfeit of his life to the offending justice of heaven and earth. It is not the multiplication of disease, or the waste of human life by drunkennes or excessive drinking, that I chiefly regret—nay, I do not at all regret that these effects follow after so detestable a vice—they are the immoral and impious effects of it which I cannot contemplate without horror.—Rash swearing, profanation of the Lord's-day, blasphemies without number; the poverty, the nakedness, the destitution, the ruin of families; the fraud, the thefts, the robberies; the seduction of innocence; the corruption of virtue; the disobedience of children; the infidelities of servants; the discord and disunion of those whom God united; these, and many others which I do not name, are the effects of drinking and of drunkenness, which I deplore.

"Looking, then, at the vice of drunkenness as I do, with a hatred and abhorrence quite peculiar, should I not, you will say, do every thing in my power to establish and promote Temperance Societies, whose sole object is to unite all persons of sense and virtue in a league, defensive and offensive, against this common enemy of mankind? You reason well in putting such a question; and I am ready to co-operate in the establishment and support of any measure, whose object is to preserve the dominion of reason over passion, and to aid virtue in her warfare against vice: besides that, in seeking to promote temperance by means of a society, I would only be seeking aid to continue in a contest in which I have been engaged incessantly for nearly 20 years. But whilst I would gladly co-operate with any Temperance Society, I am not fitted in any one respect to undertake the formation of one; and, even if I were, I am not prepared to express to others a confidence which I do not feel, that such societies in this country, at this time, and with our present law and social government, can be productive of any great, or extensive, or permanent good: but yet, as some good may be effected by them, they certainly deserve support.

"It cannot have escaped your observation that it is difficult and in some places impossible to blend together, in one society, men of different ranks and conditions; and how small—how very small the moral influence is of those called the upper ranks over those called the lower orders of the people. Gentlemen, therefore, may unite and preach to the people a temperance which they themselves do not always practise, whilst the people, who have not before experienced their friendship and protection, will hear them without attention, or scoff at their advice. Moreover, in towns where the vice of excessive drinking principally prevails, you have opposed to you all the drunkards, all the publicans, all the grocers who retail whisky, all the brewers, all the distillers, with the swabs, and wits, and idlers who appertain to them; all these and many more who hate all innovation—even that innovation which goes to the disturbance of vice—will labour diligently to counteract your labours, and to pull down whatever you endeavour to build. The industry and energy of these classes may be measured by that evangelical rule, which says, that 'the children of darkness are wiser in their generation than the children of light.'

"Whilst distillation is encouraged—whilst the making of malt for beer, and the making of beer itself, is subjected to a heavy taxation—whilst alehouses are suffered to be multiplied without number—whilst magistrates wink at the profanation of the Lord's day by the sale of whisky—whilst policemen are more employed in hunting dogs and impounding pigs than in checking the illegal excesses leading to drunkenness, all our Temperance Societies will, I fear, produce very limited good.

"Withal, even a small good is worth seeking after; and those engaged in procuring it, even should they not be successful, will not lose their reward. If the societies of tradesmen, which are found in almost every town, could be induced to adopt as a rule or regulation, abstinence from ardent spirits, much good would result to themselves therefrom. Great numbers of tradesmen are notoriously addicted to excessive drinking. These now might be comfortable and happy; they are poor and miserable; they might be virtuous and respectable; they are vicious and despised: sobriety would enable them to educate and provide for their children, and to lay up some subsistence for their own helpless age; but drunkenness leaves their children destitute, and sends themselves, through want and misery, to a premature grave; and after a life of drunkenness, who can accompany them, even in thought, to that tribunal which is beyond the grave!

The principle of free trade has been extended by the Legislature to these men; but in the place of being instructed by the law, and governed by its spirit, they have established among themselves an odious monopoly in every trade and in every town, I believe in the kingdom. I am acquainted with many of the rules and usages of those men, for I take an interest in all that relates to them, and I find those rules and usages generally a compound of good sense and egregious folly; but leaving their follies to be corrected by their own experience; I could wish most heartily that they prescribed a total abstinence from ardent spirits, as an indispensable duty to all those to be admitted to, or continued in, their body or bodies, or to become in any way entitled to the privileges and emoluments belonging to the members of their several associations respectively; because they are, in truth, a most valuable portion of the community, and are, at the same time, that portion of it through which excessive drinking, and its attendant vices, possess an almost boundless sway; they are, moreover, a class of people having every where a sort of corporate existence, and will not be reformed unless the reform be spontaneously adopted by themselves. I am unwilling almost to add, that at present thousands of tradesmen, on account of their unjust oaths, and the excesses of all kinds in which they indulge: spend their whole lives as if there was no God, no religion, no future state, or distinction between good and evil.

"Your faithful and humble servant in Christ, "J. DOYLE."

Peter the First, of Portugal, absolutely forbade all his subjects to buy or sell any of their commodities, without immediate payment; and the second commission of such an offence be punished with death!

The New-York Gazette says that the Dutch Church in New street, which was destroyed by fire on Tuesday morning, was the most ancient building in the city, having been erected between the years 1650 and 1660, and none now remains as a memento of the century before last, except the houses Nos 9 and 11 Broadway, opposite Bowling Green, and some three or four others situated between Morris street and Battery Place, the latter having narrowly escaped destruction in the great fire of 1776. All those now standing were built a few years previous to 1700.

A Man of Business.—Mr. Caldwell, of New Orleans, not satisfied with owning all the theatres between the Falls of St. Anthony and the Balize, and managing three or four of them—with being the proprietor of a bank, and the largest bathing establishment in the Union—and with holding contracts for lighting three or four cities with gas, has a new project on foot, it is said; to wit, to the formation of an "Ocean Steam Company," for running a line of steam-boats between New Orleans and Liverpool. While he is thinking about this, he is amusing himself with a scheme for paving the streets of New Orleans with octagonal blocks of stone.—New York Sun.

Remarkable Recovery from Asphyxia.—From the fact that so many of our race are never permitted to see light, through the wanton negligence of accoucheurs, we are induced to notice the following case, which is but one out of a hundred, where similar successful results would not follow similar means, in cases of asphyxia in infants. The child was born dead, to all ordinary appearances. It was immediately placed in a warm bath, with the placentia attached, and its lungs gently inflated with the breath. Brandy was rubbed on the chest, abdomen, head, spine and extremities. The funis was afterwards tied. After immersion an half hour, it was taken out, dried, wrapped in a flannel, and held near the fire. Friction was continued with brandy and whisky, and the lungs inflated as before; when, in three quarters of an hour, it gave a sob, the evidence of returning life. The means were still continued, and the sobs and gasps increased, when the beating of the heart was distinctly perceived. At the end of an hour and a half the little fellow opened his eyes and cried lustily. He lived, and continues to live.—N. Y. paper.

Scene at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre.—The moment I reached them (a group of women) the sacred building had been converted into a scene of the most unholy quarrel between the Armenians and the Greeks. All feelings of solemnity were checked. The Armenians richly dressed (the costume of the Patriarch is magnificent) bearing banners, had just reached the arches that lead from the aisle where the 'stone of unction' is placed, to the centre naive; the Greeks met them for the purpose of resisting their approach to the sepulchre. A violent struggle ensued; blows, and, as far as I could understand, curses, were dealt in plenty about. The Turks flew to restore peace, and with their large sticks inflicted most convincing arguments in behalf of quiet upon the heads of each party. People rushed from all parts to the scene of action; the Turks ranged themselves on the side of the Armenians, and succeeded in beating back the crowd. My old friend of the porch seeing me in a dilemma—for I was too weak to struggle against the stream—seized me by the coat, and placed me by his side in the procession, exhorting me to use my stick without ceremony. I rejected this part of his advice, but continued to follow the Armenians in their tour round the sepulchre, which holy office was performed under an escort of Mahometans! Can Christianity ever be respected in the East? I left them as they knelt on the spot where Christ was stripped by the soldiers; and continuing along the cloisters, as I may call them, found the tombs of Godfrey of Bouillon and Baldwin; and there, quite alone, sat down to think, if possible, after all I had witnessed. that I was at the foot of Calvary.—Major Skinner's Journey.

HEALTH SECURED BY MORISON'S

Vegetable Universal Medicines.

Prepared at the British College of Health, New Road, King's Cross, London; and sold by WILLIAM ANDERSON, Sole General Agent for New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland, in boxes at 1s 6d, 4s, 6s 9d, and 16s; Powders, at 2s per box, at his store in Water street, St. John, N. B.; and in Nova Scotia, in boxes at 1s 8d, 4s 4d, 7s, and 17s.—Powders 2s.

FOUR years having elapsed since the introduction of these Medicines into this country, during which time they have proved that they are the most valuable remedy ever introduced to the public, and from the daily proofs of their efficacy in the removal of all diseases incident to the human frame, William Anderson, Sole General Agent, is again induced to introduce them to the notice of the public as a sure means of securing Health and removing all diseases, whether of long standing or of recent date. Such an assertion would appear inconsistent, if the Hygeist, Mr. Morison, did not consider that all diseases originate from one cause, viz.:—the impurity of the blood; and you remove the cause, the effect must cease. This important object is to be attained only from the use of these invaluable Medicines, which, being composed entirely of vegetable matter, will be found the mildest, or by increasing the dose, the most efficacious Medicines ever discovered. It is to be hoped that the time is not far distant when the use of these Medicines will supersede the noxious drugs and compositions so often prescribed, to the detriment of Health, such as Opium, Prussic Acid, Mercury, Antimony, Corrosive Sublimate, and other Arsenic, Fox Glove, Hemlock, Colchicum, and numerous others, all of which tend to the derangement of Health, and cause painful and incurable disorders.

As W. A. has in several instances detected a spurious composition sold under the name of Morison's Medicine, he begs as a caution to the Public to inform them that none are genuine but what have the Government Stamp affixed, with Morison's Universal Medicines printed on each; he also cautions them from buying from pedlars and others, as none such are allowed to sell them. They can only be obtained genuine at his Store in Water street, Saint John, or of the following agents duly appointed by him:—
