POETRY.

STANZAS.

Deathless as clouds—that, cast by God abroad,
Forever roam—
Are ye, dull deeds, of dull life's beaten road,
And duty's common home.

Are ye not emblems of th' eternal sea,
Things of to-day ?
Yea, ye are harvests of eternity,
And cannot pass away.

Graves rise like bubbles ; while the living weep
Where tears are vain ;
And I, unswept into the ruthless deep,
Storm tried and sad, remain !

Another wave is swallowed by the sea
Of sunless waves !
Another year, thou past eternity,
Hath roll'd o'er new-made graves !

Why am I spar'd ? Surely to wear away,
By useful deeds,
Vile traces, left beneath th' upbraiding spray,
Of empty shells and weeds.

Oh, there are things which time devoureth not !
Thoughts, whose green youth
Flowers o'er the ashes of the unforgot !
And words whose fruit is truth !

MISCELLANY.

[From the Philadelphia Saturday Courier.]

THE TRUE USE OF RICHES.

BY M. M. NOAH.

" Why am I not a rich man ?" said a very intelligent looking person to us, while looking at a splendid equipage which rattled down Broadway. It was the equipage of a man of wealth—a man of yesterday : a parvenu, in the more fashionable phrase, who made a fortune suddenly by buying farms and selling them out in lots, and who was determined, by the splendour of his house, the magnificence of his entertainments, and richness and variety of his liveries, his loud talk, and consequential air to show that he did not belong to the quiet families of some hundred years of distinction and wealth, who never offend by ostentation nor exhibit a heraldry to which they are not entitled.—We gazed at several of similar growth—the riches which sprung up over night like Jonah's gourd : some by speculation, others by succession; some by fortunate marriages, and some more creditably by mechanical labour and ingenuity.—' Why am I not a rich man ?' said my friend. ' I must purchase somewhere in the west—or in the moon—no matter where ; I must plunge in the current of speculation, and swim on to fortune and eminence. I must be rich ; every body tries to be rich, why shall I not be rich ? I am liberal in my disposition, hospitable and free. I should like to have such a coach and pair—a house of corresponding magnificence. I should like to throw it open several times yearly for the gay and fashionable throng ; I should like you to dine twice a week with me, and punish a few bottles of old, very old Madeira. Why am I not rich ? I deserve to be rich : I must be rich,' said he, musing, and at intervals dropping his voice, as he slowly withdrew his eyes from the long cavalcade of coaches and phætons, and whiskered footmen.

" Hundreds, no doubt, thought as he did, hundreds expressed the same feelings and felt the same desires, and all under the delusion that money is wealth—that sheer, palpable gold and silver constitute riches ; and it is under this delusion the thousands of our citizens are racking their brains by night, their thoughts by day, toiling and sweating, and managing, and twisting, and turning out of common, settled and regular order of things, to get gold and silver, under the impression that with their possessions they will be rich. Statesmen, politicians, nay the government itself is inoculated with the same mania, and if all could succeed, we shall be compelled to blacken our own boots, and wait upon ourselves at table. The delusion, however, consists in this—in considering a piece of gold the ONLY representative of wealth, and disregarding what we in ourselves possess, which is an equivalent to wealth. We are for the most part rich, without exactly knowing it. The anvil of the blacksmith is to him, his handicraft, a valuable mighty lump of gold ; he lives by it, and to his mind, habits and wishes, as well as he lives who pays out his eagles and half-eagles in the market.—So with the painter—so with the professional man, the sculptor, the musician, the man of talent ; all who possess the MEANS of acquiring wealth are actually wealthy ; for if temperate and industrious, all their faculties are controvertible materials into wealth ; nay are more valuable, and durable, and available, than the mere man of gold and silver. Let such a man swim to the shore from his shipwrecked vessel, with the mechanic and the man of mind, and see who can succeed in earning that morsel of bread necessary to sustain life. What does the man of princely income do, which gives to him so many supposed advantages, and opens the door to so much mooted happiness ?—He rises late, and turns day into night ; dawdles his time away in trifling finikin employments, drives his horses and dogs ; gives grand dinners for ostentation, and large parties for fashion ; and is at best a poor, discontented, dyspeptic patrician, respected only for his gold and silver, and of no possible use to the community.

" Take the man of moderate means, and he employs life as life ought to be employed : a mixture of employment and recreation, of rational pleasure and discreet hospitality ; go down to what is called the poorer classes, but which we call the substantially rich—the hardy mechanic, and see how he enjoys life. Rising with the sun, his labour does not cease until the sun sinks in the west.—He returns to his little family and snug little tenement at night, and finds an ample board spread by a frugal wife ; the smoking steak, the good cup of coffee, the white bread and butter, and an appetite sharpened by labour. His repast over, he takes his chubby boy upon his knee, pinches his dirty rosy cheeks, and runs his finger through his matted hair, talks with his wife on household affairs ; reads the paper, or converses with his neighbour on the best means of saving the commonwealth : and when the hour of rest arrives, he stretches himself on his hard but healthy bed, and soon his senses are steeped into forgetfulness, and his sleep is sweet and sound, until the shrill clarion of the cock awakens him on the morrow to renewed labour. But then he has no coach. Has he not ? He has only to go into the street and hold up his finger, and a splendid omnibus and four elegant horses drives up to the sidewalk, and he jumps in : it is his coach while he occupies it, and he leaves when and where he pleases. Can the man of gold and silver do more ? It is all an error, a misconception, a delusion. We are all rich when we possess within ourselves the means of acquiring wealth. We have no poor excepting the idler and the drunkard."

According to the New-York Sun, the Sabbath is very little regarded in that city—at least the command to " remember the Sabbath to keep it holy," is but little thought of. The Sun says, that in N. York, among a population of about 270,000, it is believed that only 30,000, upon an average, attend church—while there are more than 150,000 open violators of the Sabbath. Of the remaining 90,000, more than two-thirds are secret violators of the Sabbath, and full one-half the remaining 30,000 though they observe it as a day of rest, do not, in sincerity and truth, ' remember and keep it holy.' This estimate is made by an esteemed and reverend friend, who has preached in this city for more than twenty years. It is indeed, (as he writes us,) painful to dwell upon the subject. In the most thriving city in the Union, where Gospel light is showered in such abundance—the Evil One has a strong hold, and the voices of God's Ministers are scarcely to be heard !—Portland Times.

Rev. Orville Dewey, in his late work entitled " The Old World and the New," makes the following, among other ingenious comparisons :

Eating.—The Americans and the Engish are the greatest eaters in the world—the most voracious devourers of meats, and the most eager for high, hot and stimulating wines. Meat enough is put upon an American dinner table every day, to keep a family of Frenchmen, Italians, or even Germans, a full week, if not a month ; meat too, at that very season of the year—the hot season—when its stimulus is too strong, and when the system demands the relief of vegetable diet. In the south of France, meat is eaten by the peasantry only once a week ; on Sunday, generally. In England the poorer classes, who are far the healthier for it do not have it more than twice a week, and often not even once. The French so mingle their meat with sauces, vegetables, &c., that but very little is eaten, though much may seem to be.

Female Dress.—The Dress of women (among us) is undoubtedly the cause of their bad health—consumption, &c. ; but as they prefer death to wearing thick slippers and warm stockings, and leaving off tight corsets, there is no hope of reforming them.

Bringing Up.—Children in the cities of Europe, are brought up better than ours are. The nurses do not keep them in their chambers, fondling over them all day. The children are made to exercise in the open air. There they stay all of the day, that the time of school or from meals will permit. The consequence is, that they grow up with health, and ruddy physiognomy.

Exercise of Males.—The great cause why the Europeans appear ruddier and healthier than we do, it strikes us, is that they exercise more, and live more in the open air.—Parks in England are every thing. In Italy, and France, and in Germany, the people live much out of doors. Every day their Broadways are not full but their Batteries are. Their Coffee houses are out of doors. Families sit as much as possible in gardens, and in public places. Their windows are all tenanted. Not only every city, but every town has its public park, adorned with trees by the water side, wherever it is possible ; and every thing is done, which can be done to make it comfortable and refreshing, as well as fashionable. The sons of the first families in England are often seen in Switzerland with their packs upon their backs, walking amid the mountains, at the rate of forty miles a day.

An important experiment has been made at Montpelier, Vermont, in a drill hole 800 feet deep from which it appears that for every 80 feet descent, heat increased at the rate of one degree. According to this, the heat not far from the earth's surface is sufficient to hold every substance in a melted state, and its whole interior must be a mass of boiling liquid. This may explain many natural phenomena, hitherto not fully accounted for.

Cure for Polipi.—A small piece of lint, wet with a solution of sulphate of zinc, and applied to the polypus each day, and allowed to remain for a short time, will, in a few days, cure the disease.

To remove stains from paints, and prints, take the clear solution of chloride of lime, diluted with water. First soak the print in clear water until it is smooth, then place it carefully in a dish filled with a solution as above and the stains will no longer be visible ; then soak the print again in clear water to divest it of the chloride of lime, and dry it between two sheets of blotting paper.

It is stated that M. Stalars, a young artist at Lisle, in France, has discovered in some ancient manuscripts, directions for painting on glass, which reveal the secret of this art as practised in ancient times, and so long lost. He has tried the method, with results which it is said are highly satisfactory.

It has been ascertained that the tidal wave at sea, outstrips in velocity the cannon-ball. This wave is known to be propagated from the Cape of Good Hope to the ports along the coasts of Spain in twelve hours. The discovery has awakened great interest among the scientific of England since its announcement by Mr. Russel.

Sir Thomas Moore used to say to his children—" Let virtue be your meat, and amusement your sauce."

In the minds of the best men there is, always has been, and perhaps always will be, much difference of opinion as to what is true, but every body knows and feels what is kind, and truth itself is most likely to be found when it is sought for by tolerance and benevolence.

Courtship.—Sergeant Bunting says that the great secret of success with the women, is to ' ask soon, ask often, and never take a refusal.'

Woman's Confidence.—There is something so beautifully confiding in the natural feelings of a woman's heart, that she will never doubt till she has been taught to do so.

Intemperance drives wit out of the head, money out of the pocket, elbows out of the coat, health out of the body, and moderate drinkers to the Almshouse.

Never fly from difficulties that you can overcome.

An opinion has been recently advanced that the mental alienation which predisposes to suicide is contagious, and many facts have been brought forward in support of the theory.

We only become moral men when we accustom our affections and talent to be directed by reason.—Jou. of Education.

Dishonest worthless people are generally frank, familiar, and degage at first. Your honest men soon buy reserve by experience ; but rogues are communicative and open, because confidence and openness cost them nothing.

Tears of Joy.—A sawyer at Chorley brought home his wages, 30s. the other Saturday night, and laid it before his wife. She was amazed, and said, ' but thou wilt want something out of this.' ' Nay,' replied the husband, ' if I get a penny to be shaved with, I shall be content.' The wife immediately burst into tears, and she said it was the first time for 20 years, that he had brought home the whole of his earnings.

Honesty rewarded.—About the end of harvest a cow-herd, in the neighbourhood of Dundee, in throwing a stone at one of his master's cows in an outfield, unfortunately broke one of her legs.—Scratching his curly head, the rustic began to think seriously about what he should say to his master. After musing for some time, his countenance began to brighten, and he observed loud enough to be heard. ' Fegs, I'll just say she took the rig, and got it jumpin' the style to the stooks.' On farther reflection, however, his conscience began to remonstrate with him on the impropriety of telling a lie, and at last he murmured, ' Weell, I'll tell truth if I should lose my place and fee.' ' Yes callant,' said his master, who had heard the soliloquy, ' that's the best plan, and for your honesty you shall be forgiven.'

Failures.—Addison rose but once to speak in Parliament, when the expectation of the house was so great, that the cries of ' hear him, hear him,' so thundered in his ears that he was intimidated, and sat down. The memory of Lord Shaftsbury, when a Commoner, deserted him, whilst speaking on a bill for allowing counsel in cases of high treason. The great Tillotson thought he could preach a sermon extempore, but was soon obliged to descend from the pulpit, which was mounted immediately by bishop Burnet, who had none of Tillotson's defect in his composition.

AGE—old—an infirmity which nobody knows. Nothing can exceed our early impatience to escape from youth to manhood, and appear older than we are, except our subsequent anxiety to obtain the reputation of being younger than we are.

ANCIENT ORNAMENTS.—Ear-rings in the form of olives or of mulberries; armlets twisted round the arm like brooches or clasps, which, according to Hesiod, were wrought like the handle of a shield, and were fastened with a double tube; rosettes, which were probably stuck on the dress; necklaces or collars; and splendid sandals with very strong soles, which were an indispensable part of every dress worn on the public state occasions, constitute the main ingredients of the state costume, which gave the last grace and dignity to an Homeric princess.

The Royal Printing Office at Paris contains 56 founts of Oriental characters—comprehending all the known Alphabets of Asia, ancient as well as modern. There are 16 alphabets of different European nations who do not employ the Roman characters, and of these latter, the establishment possesses 46 complete founts, of various forms and dimensions. All these founts weigh at least 828,000 pounds. The consumption of paper at the Royal Printing Office, in a single year, amounts, on an average, to from 80,000 to 100,000 reams per day, which are printed for the use of the several public boards.—The number of workmen employed regularly, is from 350 to 460.

HEALTH SECURED BY MORISON'S

Vegetable Universal Medicines.

Prepared at the British College of Health, New Road, King's Cross, London ; and sold by WILLIAM ANDERSON, Sole General Agent for New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland, in boxes at 1s 6d, 4s, 6s 9d, and 16s ; Powders, at 2s per box, at his store in Water street, St. John, N. B. : and in Nova Scotia, in boxes at 1s 8d, 4s 4d, 7s, and 17s,—Powders 2s.

FOUR years having elapsed since the introduction of these Medicines into this country, during which time they have proved that they are the most valuable remedy ever introduced to the public, and from the daily proofs of their efficacy in the removal of all diseases incident to the human frame, WILLIAM ANDERSON, Sole General Agent, is again induced to introduce them to the notice of the public as a sure means of securing Health and removing all diseases, whether of long standing or of recent date. Such an assertion would appear inconsistent, if the Hygeist, Mr. Morison, did not consider that all diseases originate from one cause, viz. :—the impurity of the blood ; and if you remove the cause, the effect must cease.—This important object is to be attained only from the use of these invaluable Medicines, which, being composed entirely of vegetable matter, will be found the mildest, or by increasing the dose, the most efficacious Medicines ever discovered. It is to be hoped that the time is not far distant when the use of these Medicines will supersede the noxious drugs and compositions so often prescribed, to the detriment of Health, such as Opium, Prussic Acid, Mercury, Antimony, Corrosive Sublimate, and even Arsenic, Fox Glove, Hemlock, Colchicum, and numerous others, all of which tend to the detriment of Health, and cause painful and incurable disorders.

As W. A. has in several instances detected a spurious composition sold under the name of Morison's Medicine, he begs as a caution to the Public to inform them that none are genuine but what have the Government Stamp affixed, with Morison's Universal Medicines printed on each : he also cautions them from buying from pedlars and others, as none such are allowed to sell them. They can only be obtained genuine, at his Store in Water street, Saint John, or of the following agents duly appointed by him :—
