THE BLIND GIRL'S LAMENT.

BY CAMILLA TOULMIN.

It is not that I cannot see
The birds and flowers of spring
'Tis not that beauty seems to me
A dreamy unknown thing ;
It is not that I cannot mark
The blue and sparkling sky,
Nor ocean's foam, nor mountain's peak,
That e'er I weep or sigh ;

They tell me that the birds, whose notes
Fall rich and sweet and full,
That these I listen too and love
Are not all beautiful !
They tell me that the gayest flowers
Which sunshine ever brings
Are not the ones I know so well,
But strange and scentless things !

My little brother leads me forth
To where the violets grow ;
His gentle, light, yet careful step,
And tiny hand I know.
My mother's voice is soft and sweet
Like music on my ear ;
The very atmosphere seems love,
When these to me are near.

My father twines his arms around,
And draws me to his breast.
To kiss the poor blind helpless girl
He says he loves the best.
'Tis then I ponder unknown things,
It may be—weep or sigh,
And think how glorious it must be
To meet Affection's eye !

VARIETY.

THE COUSINS.

One of the best stories which we have lately read, is entitled,—"THE COUSINS. A Country Tale." It is from the chaste pen of Miss Mitford. The whole is too long for one paper ; and it is a story which it will not do to divide. The first half of the story, like the bigger portion of the first volume of some of Scott's novels, is merely introductory to what follows. So we will sum up the prefatory part in a few words, and then give the denouement in Miss Mitford's own beautiful language.—Massachusetts Spy.

Lawyer Molesworth was a rich landlord of Cranley, the native town of Miss Mitford. He had two daughters, to whom his pleasant house owed its chief attraction. Agnes was a beautiful woman ; Jessy was a pretty girl. The fond father intended that Jessy should marry a poor relation, one Charles Woodford. Charles had been brought up by his uncle's kindness, and had recently returned into the family from a great office in London.—Charles was to be the immediate partner and eventful successor to the great and flourishing business of his benefactor, whose regard seemed fully justified by the excellent conduct and remarkable talents of the orphan nephew. Agnes, who secretly entertained an affection for Charles, was destined by her father for a young baronet who had lately been much at the house.

But in the affairs of love, as of all others, (says Miss Mitford,) man is born to disappointments.—"L'homme propose, et Dieu dispose," is never truer than in the great matter of matrimony. So found poor Mr. Molesworth, who—Jessy having arrived at the age of eighteen, and Charles at that of two and twenty—offered his pretty daughter, and the lucrative partnership to his penniless relation, and was petrified with astonishment and indignation to find the connection very respectfully, but very firmly, declined. The young man was very much distressed and agitated ; he had the highest respect for Miss Jessy ; but he could not marry her—he loved another ! And then he poured forth a confidence as unexpected as it was undesired by his incensed patron, who left him in undiminished wrath and increased perplexity.

This interview had taken place immediately after breakfast ; and when the conference was ended, the provoked father sought his daughters, who, happily unconscious of all that occurred, were amusing themselves in their splendid conservatory—a scene always as becoming as it is agreeable to youth and beauty. Jessy was flitting about like a butterfly among the fragrant orange trees and bright geraniums ; Agnes was standing under a superb fuschia that hung over a large marble basin—her form and attitude, her white dress, and the classical arrangement of her dark hair, giving her the look of some nymph or naiad, a rare relic of Grecian art. Jessy prattling gaily, as she wandered about, of a concert they had attended the evening before at the county town.

"I hate concerts," said the pretty little flirt. "To sit bolt upright on a hard bench for four hours, between the same four people, without the possibility of moving, or speaking to any body, or anybody's getting to us ! Oh ! how tiresome it is !"

"I saw Sir Edmund trying to slide through the crowd to reach you," said Agnes, a little archly ; "his presence would, perhaps, have mitigated the evil. But the barricade was too complete ; he was forced to retreat, without accomplishing his object."

"Yes, I assure you, he thought it very tiresome ; he told me so when we were coming out. And then the music !" pursued Jessy ; "the noise that they called music !" Sir Edmund says that he likes no music except my guitar, or a flute on the water ; and I like none except your playing on the organ, and singing Handel on a Sunday evening, or Charles Woodford's reading Milton and bits of Hamlet."

"Do you call that music ?" asked Agnes, laughing. "And yet," continued she, "it is most truly so, with his rich Pasta-like voice, and his fine sense of sound ; and to you who do not greatly love poetry for its own sake, it is, doubtless, a pleasure much resembling in kind that of hearing the most thrilling of melodies on the noblest of instruments. I myself have felt such a gratification in hearing that voice recite the verses of Homer or Sophocles in the original Greek. Charles Woodford's reading is music."

"It is a music which you are neither of you likely to hear again," interrupted Mr. Molesworth, advancing suddenly towards them ; "for he has been ungrateful, and I have discarded him."

Agnes stood as if petrified : "Ungrateful ! oh, father !"

"You can't have discarded him, to be sure, papa," said Jessy, always good-natured, "poor Charles ! what can he have done ?"

"Refused your hand, my child," said the angry parent ; "refused to be my partner and son-in-law, and fallen in love with another lady !—What have you to say to him now ?"

"Why, really, papa," replied Jessy, "I'm much more obliged to him for refusing my hand, than to you for offering it. I like Charles well for a cousin, but I should not like such a husband at all ;—so if this refusal be the worst that has happened, there's no great harm done." And off the gipsey ran, declaring that "she must put on her habit, for she had promised to ride with Sir Edmund and his sister, and expected them every minute."

The father and his favourite daughter remained in the conservatory.

"That heart is untouched, however," said Mr. Molesworth, looking after her with a smile.

"Untouched by Charles Woodford, undoubtedly," replied Agnes ; "but has he really refused my sister ?"

"Absolutely."

"And does he love another ?"

"He says so, and I believe him."

"Is he loved again ?"

"That he did not say."

"Did he tell you the name of the lady ?"

"Yes."

"Do you know her ?"

"Yes."

"Is she worthy of him ?"

"Most worthy."

"Has he any hope of gaining her affections ?—Oh ! he must ! he must ! What woman could refuse him ?"

"He is determined not to try. The lady whom he loves is above him in every way ; and much as he has counteracted my wishes, it is an honorable part of Charles Woodford's conduct, that he intends to leave his affection unsuspected by its object."

Here ensued a short pause in the dialogue, during which Agnes appeared trying to occupy herself with collecting the blossoms of a Cape jessamine and watering a favourite geranium ; but it would not do ; the subject was at her heart, and she could not force her mind to indifferent occupations. She returned to her father, who had been anxiously watching her motions and the varying expressions of her countenance, and they resumed conversation.

"Father ! perhaps it is hardly maidenly to avow so much, but although you have never in set words told me your intentions, I have yet seen and know, I cannot tell how, all that your too kind partiality towards me has designed for your children. You have mistaken me, dearest father, doubly mistaken me ; first in thinking me fit to fill a splendid place in society , next, in imagining that I desired such splendor. You meant to give Jessy and the lucrative partnership to Charles Woodford, and designed me and your large possessions to your wealthy and titled neighbour. And with little change of person these arrangements may still for the most part hold good. Sir Edmund may still be your son-in-law and your heir, for he loves Jessy, and Jessy loves him. Charles Woodford may still be your partner and adopted son, for nothing has changed that need diminish your affection or his merit. Marry him to the woman he loves. She must be ambitious indeed, if she be not content with such a destiny. And let me live on with you, dear father ! single and unwedded, with no thought but to contribute to your comfort, and to cheer and brighten your declining years.—Do not let your too great fondness for me stand in the way of their happiness ! Make me not so odious to them and to myself, dear father ! Let me live always with you and for you—always your own poor Agnes ?" And blushing at the earnestness with which she had spoken, she bent her head over the marble basin, whose waters reflected the fair image, as if she had really been the Grecian statue to which, whilst he listened, her fond father's fancy had compared her. "Let me live single with you, and marry Charles to the woman whom he loves."

"Have you heard the name of the lady in question ? Have you formed any guess who she may be ?"

"Not the slightest. I imagined from what you said that she was a stranger to me. Have I ever seen her ?"

"You may see her—at least you may see her reflection in the water at this very moment ; for he has had the infinite presumption, the admirable good taste, to fall in love with his cousin Agnes !"

"Father !"

"And now, mine own sweetest, do you still wish to live single with me ?"

"Oh, father ! father !"

"Or do you desire that I should marry Charles to the woman of his heart ?"

"Father, dear father !"

"Choose, my Agnes ! It shall be as you command. Speak freely. Do not cling so around me, but speak."

"Oh, my dear father ! Cannot we all live together ? I cannot leave you. But poor Charles—surely, father, we may all live together !

And so it was settled. And a very few months proved that love had contrived better for Mr. Molesworth than he had done for himself. Jessy with her prettiness, and her title, and her fopperies, was the very thing to be vain of—the very thing to visit for a day, but Agnes, and the cousin whose noble character and splendid talents so well deserved her, made the pride and happiness of his home.

QUITE ANOTHER PAIR OF SHOES.—A shopkeeper in Drury Lane informs the public, through the medium of an enormous placard over his door, that he had "20,000 pair of shoes for the million." It is evident that nine hundred and eighty thousand of his customers must go without shoes to their feet, for if he supplies the million out of his stock of 20,000, Cocker will tell him they must be the deficiency to which we have alluded.—Punch.

STEAM NAVIGATION.—There is a Government bill in the House of Commons for the regulation of steam navigation, and for requiring sea-going vessels to carry boats. It contains thirty-one provisions, founded on the preamble, which declares it to be expedient to make further provision for regulating the construction of sea-going steam-vessels, and for preventing the occurrence of accidents (as far as may be possible) in steam navigation.—From the 1st of January, sea-going vessels are to carry boats, the tonnage being 200 tons or more, and from that day sea going vessels, the building of which was commenced after the passing of the present measure, are to be divided by transverse water-tight partitions,so that the fore part of the vessel, as well as the after part, may be separated from the engine room. The Board of Trade is to grant certificates of the sufficiency and good condition of steam-vessels, and all accidents are to be reported to the Board, and the department may appoint inspectors to report thereon. It is provided by one of the provisions, that offences on the high seas are to be deemed to have been committed at the place where the offender is found, or into which he may be brought. The bill is not to extend to Her Majesty's ships of war nor to any vessel not being a British registered vessdl.

LAUNCH OF A FLOATING CHAPEL.—On Wednesday week a floating chapel was launched from the building-yard of Messrs. John Reid & Co., Port Glasgow. The hull is constructed of iron, the church itself being of wood ; and the whole draws about 12 or 13 inches water. The dimensions of the hull are as follow :—Length, 78 feet ; breadth, 23 feet ; height, 17 feet. There are two galleries placed on either side of the building, and the whole is capable of containing 700 sitters. It is lighted by three cupolas on the top ; and two sleeping apartments and a vestry are fitted up on board.—It will cost, we understand, about £1400.

EVENTS IN A SINGLE LIFE.—Dr. Harvey, a Baptist clergyman, one hundred and eleven years old, preached on Thursday evening in the Tabernacle. As he sat on the platform, he did not appear so old ; but when he rose, his short and stunted figure, diminished, not enfeebled by age, and the tone of his voice—his hesitancy, broken syllables, and snow-white hair, all testified his extreme old age. He preached on Temperance—said he was an uneducated man—and finally, when requested to give some account of his own life, he observed he could recollect the events of a hundred years ago—that he was a poor boy, working about, and had joined the minute-men during the Revolution, and served under several commanders ; was employed in various services, and had hunted Indians in this State.

What strange events have crowded history in the long life of this venerable man ! He was born three years only after George Washington. George II. was then on the English throne ; Louis XV. on that of France ; Ferdinand VI. son of Philip V. ruled in Spain ; and Frederick the Great had just commenced his reign. The Empress Catherine held sway in Russia, and Poland was a mighty and independent kingdom under Augustus of Saxony. The population of the thirteen Colonies was a little rising two millions ; and from the banks of the Hudson, stretching West to the Mississippi, was an unbroken forest, filled with a savage foe, where the white man dared not venture. France on the North, Spain on the South, owned the largest portion of our Continent, and the existence of Oregon was unknown. New Holland, the Islands in the South Sea and the Indian Archipelago were as yet untrodden by civilized man. Turkey was the terror of the civilized world ; and the gold Spain annually received from her American colonies exceeded the income of any other nation.

And now, what had this old man seen in his single life ? Five sovereigns on the English throne, one of whom reigned sixty years ; the dynasty of France completely changed, after two revolutions. Napoleon had risen like a brilliant meteor, and passed away as quickly ; Poland blotted out of the list of nations, and Spain and Turkey imbecile and weak to the extremest degree. France and Spain no longer own an acre of ground on our continent, and England driven out of her thirteen colonies, where now exist twenty-nine States and twenty millions of people. Steam penetrates to the sources of the Mississippi, and electricity outstrips the wind in its tidings.—This good old clergyman might say in the words of Barzillai, as he gazes round on his native land, blessed in the greatest degree :—"Lord, now let thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation !"—N. Y. Messenger.

CHIMNEYS.—Instead of plastering the inside of chimneys in the usual way, take mortar made with one peck of salt to each bushel of lime adding as much sand and loam as will render it fit to work, and then lay on a thick coat. If the chimney has no offset for the soot to lodge on, it will continue perfectly clean, and free from all danger of taking fire. A trial of three years warrants this assertion.

A MAN SUSPENDED BY THE THUMB.—A correspondent at Kingston furnishes us with the following ;—Mr. Gray, of Providence, one of the painters on the Congregational Meeting House in this place, week before last ascended to the steeple to take off the vane for gilding. The ladders reached the foot of the iron spire on which the vane turned, 12 to 15 feet above. Mr. Gray ascended the iron spire by grasping with his hands and twisting his legs around the bar of iron, which did not exceed two and a half inches in diameter, relying upon the ball, half-way up the spire, to rest his feet on, and from which position he could take the vane off with his right hand. While he was in the very act, the ball on which his feet rested gave way and run down the spire. At this moment, Mr. Gray was raising the vane over the end of the spire, as he did so, the spire growing smaller, made a convenient place for his thumb to keep the balancer in the gudgeon-bore, when the ball gave under his feet and he sunk. The vane falling back with his thumb in the gudgeon-bore, held him fast, with his feet three or four feet above anything to rest upon. He made two or three efforts to extricate his thumb but without success, and after his strength was nearly exhausted he called for help. His life now depended upon the strength of his left hand. The consternation of the beholders was great—some running one way and some the other to obtain something to release the man from his perilous situation, while others turned away unwilling to witness the catastrophe, which they apprehended in a few minutes. Mr. J. H. Clarke, one of the painters, came immediately up the spire, and placing his shoulders under the feet of the suspended man, at once relieved him. The scene was terrible to behold.—Prov. Journal.

CHOLERA MORBUS.—The recent changes in the weather, and consequent changes in clothing, aided and abetted by half-ripe cherries, green currants, gooseberries and cucumbers, have brought on many cases of the usual summer cholera of the country—the common cholera morbus in this city. Care in diet and dress, proper and reasonable attention, will act as a powerful preventive against cholera morbus. Those who throw off their flannels thoughtlessly, wear to-day a suit of summer clothing and to-morrow a suit fitted for November, and who indulge in half-ripened fruits and vegetables, and bolt cholera morbus in the shape of cucumbers, must not wonder nor complain if they are made to pay very dear for their imprudence.—Albany Journal.

CHARITY.—The New-York City Tract Society recently held a meeting, at which it was reported that, within the last six months, there had been distributed in the city, 410,624 Tracts, designed to counteract the flood of dissipating trash. Seventeen city Missionaries had been steadily employed by the Society, aided by 1112 volunteer monthly visitors ; 671 Bibles and 455 Testaments had been given to the destitute ; 2850 volumes had been loaned from the Ward Libraries ; 1317 had been persuaded regularly to attend church ; and 1206 had been added to the Sabbath Schools.

COINCIDENCE.—It is, perhaps, worthy of remark that the Captain of the "William Abrams," which struck Black Rock Ledge, near the Seal Island, on the 2d instant, was first apprized of his "whereabouts" by finding on the shore a part of the materials of the ill fated mail steamer Columbia. Both vessels struck within a few yards of the same spot —on the same day of the month, and at nearly the same hour. It is somewhat singular, that after the lapse of precisely three years, another ship should lay her timbers beside those of the Columbia.—Yarmouth Herald.
