The President's health.—Rumour having already spread the news of the indisposition of the President, it is deemed proper to say here, from information which may be relied upon, that he was attacked on Saturday last by a severe pneumonia, which, we are gratified to learn, had, at a late hour last evening, been in a great measure subdued. His attending physician considered him, last evening, decidedly better, and we entertain little doubt of being able, very soon, to relieve the public mind entirely from apprehension of the consequences of this attack.—[*Nat. [ADVERTISEMENT.]

THE Rev. J. G. MACGREGOR, in order to counteract, if possible, the evil consequences of the efforts which are at present making in this community to hurt his usefulness and prospects in life, earnestly invites an attentive perusal of the following testimonials in his favour—two of them from distinguished clergymen of the Church of Scotland, in Edinburgh, and one from a Clergyman of the Church of England, who is justly reckoned one of the best classical scholars in Britain.

"Having been requested to state my opinion of Mr. John G. Macgregor, preacher of the Gospel, I have great pleasure in saying that my opportunities of intercourse with him have led me to form an opinion of his character highly favourable. I am persuaded he has studied with diligence and success, that his sentiments on religious subjects are sound, that his views and feelings of the clerical office are strictly professional, and that, were he in a situation to discharge the duties of the clerical office, it would be his aim to accomplish them with fidelity and usefulness.

WILLIAM MUIR,
Minister, St. Stephen's Church, Edinburgh.
(late Moderator of General Assembly.)
Edinburgh, 2d August, 1837."

"Having for a number of years been personally acquainted with Mr. J. G. Macgregor, both before and since he became a preacher, I am happy to say that I entertain a very favourable opinion of his principles, attainments and character. His literary acquirements are highly respectable, his theological sentiments are sound and evangelical, his feelings and habits are decidedly pious and Christian. He has repeatedly preached for me, and that with much acceptability, his doctrine being that of the Gospel, his illustrations pertinent, and his delivery agreeable and energetic. His manners are courteous and affable, his heart appears to be in his work as a preacher, and I have no doubt that he would prove a conscientious, useful, and faithful Minister to any Christian congregation to which he may be called in the Lord.

DAVID DICKSON,
Minister of St. Cuthbert's.
8th August, 1837."

"This is to certify that I have known Mr. Macgregor for the last ten years, during which period he has been connected with the Edinburgh Academy as the private tutor of many of its pupils, that Mr. Macgregor, both from the necessary superintendence of his pupils' studies and from his own attendance upon the classes while under public tuition, is perfectly and practically acquainted with our system, that many of his pupils have distinguished themselves, and that I consider him admirably qualified in every respect to conduct with success the education of young gentlemen. I need not add that Mr. Macgregor's address is good, and manners excellent, and should his services as a Clergyman be required, I can state from my own knowledge that he is an excellent and impressive preacher.

JOHN WILLIAMS,
Archdeacon of Cardigan,
and Rector of the Edinburgh Academy.
Edinburgh, July 2, 1837."
