LATE EUROPEAN NEWS.

From Liverpool Papers to the 15th March.

PARLIAMENTARY SUMMARY.

In the House of Peers, on Friday evening, Earl Grey, in moving the second reading of two bills relating to convict discipline, took the opportunity to explain the whole plan of government with reference to secondary punishments. It is proposed to abolish totally from henceforth the punishment of transportation to Australasia, or any other British settlement more distant than Bermuda or Gibraltar, where the hulk system, as it exists at Woolwich, is already in operation. Offenders would in future be placed under a system of imprisonment similar to that now applied at Pentonville; the period of this imprisonment not to exceed eighteen months at the longest. When discharged from this preparatory state, they would be employed on the public works; the duration of this compulsory labour to be dependent on the conduct of the convict, who might, by good behaviour, abridge it as much as one-half, and might have wages accumulated for him till the time of his release should arrive. When released, he might go to Australia as a free emigrant, having his passage and the passage of his family paid for; or he might at his own expense retire to any foreign country; but he would not be permitted to remain in the United Kingdom. Lord Brougham thought that while it might be well to abolish the punishment of transportation generally, it still should be retained in the cases of prisoners above the lower ranks for whom it had great terrors. Lord Stanley objected to the new system on the ground that it would interfere with the demand for labour of the honest and deserving population, and throw the whole of the government employment on public works into the hands of the convicts. Lord Denman approved highly of the breaking up of the Norfolk Island establishment; but he could not contemplate without dismay the prospect of the total abolition of transportation.—The Duke of Richmond urged the Government to reconsider the plan. The bills were read a second time.

In the Commons, the order of the day was a committee of supply for the consideration of the ordnance estimates and the remaining navy estimates, which led to several preliminary discussions. Colonel Lindsay moved for a committee on the canteen system of the army, which betrays the soldier into habits of drunkenness. Mr. Fox Maule averred that the canteen system is convenient, perfectly under control of commanding officers, and capable of administrative improvement. After a smart discussion the motion was withdrawn. Mr. J. O'Connell brought forward a project by which the people now on the public works in Ireland should be employed under Government in the tillage of the land. He estimated the additional cost at two or three millions sterling; but declared that outlay to be absolutely necessary, and productive of returns, which the public works are not; and he suggested that it might be provided for by making the absentee landlords contribute. He also suggested a strong resolution calling on the landed proprietors to return to Ireland, at least for this year. Mr. Labouchere showed that the proposal would be impracticable. Government is employing 700 000 persons on public works; a measure has just passed to provide food for the people, and thus labour would be set free; but nothing could be more mischievous than government's undertaking to cultivate the soil. The project did not obtain much support. It was emphatically opposed by Mr. Shaw and Mr. Bellow. Lord John Russell, without arguing the matter, thought it necessary to declare, in the most explicit terms, that the Government was determined not to adopt either of the propositions of Mr. John O'Connell. No motion was made, and the conversation dropped. The House having gone into committee, Colonel Anson brought forward the ordnance estimates. The amount for the current year is £2,697,127; being and increase of £135,558. Among the details, the principal facts stated were, that an addition of 1,200 men will be made to the artillery corps; and that of the sum voted for fortifications and defensive works, £205,000, the greatest portion will be devoted, this year, not to the colonies, but to this country. The several votes proposed were passed; and also some portion of the estimates.

In the Commons, on Monday, Lord Palmerston in reply to Mr. Hume, stated that the Government will not propose any repeal of the Act of 1845, relative to the Slave Trade, until the Brazilian government shall conclude a treaty which shall be a substitute for that Act. On the order of the day for going into Committee on the Landed Property (Ireland) Bill, Mr. Roebuck, in one of his characteristic, pointed and telling, though fretful and abusive, speeches, moved a resolution to the effect that any plans of relief for the distress of the Irish people by means of loans to the owners of property in Ireland, would be unjust and impolitic unless accompanied by a system of taxation, which would subject such proprietors already imposed on all property throughout Great Britain. Mr. Labouchere thought that, however just it might be as a general principle that Ireland should be taxed equally with this country, yet it would be a singular resolution to come to, at this juncture, when the distress in Ireland is unexampled. Both Sir Robert Peel and Lord John Russell, expressed opinions substantially the same with Labouchere. Lord George Bentinck also opposed Mr. Roebuck's proposition. After several hon. members had made observations, the House divided, when there appeared, for going into committee, 121; against it, 26—the amendment was therefore rejected by a majority of 95. The bill then passed through committee, with some amendments and additions.

In the House of Commons on the 9th March, Mr. Ewart brought forward his motion for the total repeal of the punishment of death. After taking a review of the various mitigations of our criminal code which had been made of late years, and after quoting a great mass of statistical returns to prove that crime had decreased as the severity of punishment had diminished, he inferred therefrom that the infliction of death was no longer necessary as a safeguard against crime. It also created a sympathy for the criminal instead of an abhorrence for his crime. It was not even useful as an example, for it was not invested with the pomp of a solemn ceremony, but was inflicted at an early hour in the morning, as if to withdraw it from publicity. He therefore called on the house to sacrifice old prejudices on the altar of civilization and of Christianity, and to give him leave to bring in a bill for the total abolition of capital punishment. Dr. Bowring seconded the motion in a short speech, in which he further enforced the arguments of Mr. Ewart. Sir G. Grey observed, that he could not assent to the sweeping measure recommended by Mr. Ewart, inasmuch as he proposed to abolish the punishment of death, not only in the most aggravated cases of murder, but also in cases of high treason, where life to an indefinite extent might be sacrificed by the guilty attempts of those who committed it. It was true, that since the year 1841 there were certain classes of crime on which capital punishment had not been inflicted; but it was also true, that since that time no case of murder had taken place in which the execution of the murderer had not followed. There had been, in consequence, a decrease in the number of murders committed of late years; and he attributed that result to the certainty with which extreme punishment followed the commission of the crime. He concluded by giving a direct negative to the motion. The motion was supported by Mr. Hume, Mr. Aglionby, and Mr. Brotherton, and the negative by Sir R. Inglis.—On a division the motion was lost by a majority of 40, the numbers being, for the motion, 41; against it, 81.

On the 12th, Mr. Baillie said that he wished to put a question to the noble lord, relative to the state of the corn markets. The noble lord was probably aware that the Ministry of Belgium had prohibited for some time past the exportation of corn from that country, that both French and Belgian agents had been in England making very large purchases of corn, and that it was anticipated, if these purchases continued to be made, prices would be very much enhanced, and scarcity would ensue. What he wished to know from the noble lord was, would her Majesty's Government feel themselves called upon in self-defence to prohibit the exportation of corn from our ports? Lord J. Russell: The hon. gentleman has asked me a question on this very important subject without giving me any notice that he had such intention.—(Hear, hear!) I will, however, at once tell him what is the general intention of the Government on this subject. We are perfectly aware that there is a great demand for corn in France and Belgium and that prices are rising and are likely to continue to rise in those countries; but we are of opinion, generally speaking, that to prohibit the export of corn is a direct mode of preventing corn being brought into this country.—(Cheers.) We think that, in the case of an importing merchant, if he have a security that he can import his corn here, either for consumption here, or, if he should think proper to take it afterwards to another market, he will have every inducement to bring it here (Hear, hear!) We consider, on the other hand, that if he is told if it once comes here it cannot be taken away again, we shall drive him to avoid a market where his corn would be thus locked up, to go on some other calculation, and to import it to some other market. (Cheers.)

GENERAL SUMMARY.

The statement of the Morning Post of a dissolution of Parliament in June is not at all likely to prove correct. Whatever may have been the desire to bring the labours of the session to an early termination, and to obtain the assistance of a new Parliament before the harvest, we believe that the state of public business affords no probability of such an arrangement.—Observer.

THE STEAM-SHIP GREAT WESTERN.—The Great Western was offered for sale by auction, on Thursday, at the company's offices, Bristol. But, although she was stated to have cost £63,000, and to have been surveyed by Lloyd's and found in as good condition as at the first day, after having made ninety successive voyages, yet only £20,000 was offered for her, and she was withdrawn, as was understood, at the reserve of £25,000.

Trade is reviving in Paisley—so much so that the relief-committee expect to be able to cut off 200 portions per day of soup kitchen supplies.

A drawback of the duty is allowed on timber and brick used in building churches of the Establishment—but not for erecting any chapel or meeting-house of other religious persuasions in Great Britain. Timber required for mines is admitted free—but not for building any manufactory or other commercial edifice.

JUNCTION OF THE RED SEA AND MEDITERRANEAN.—A letter from Alexandria states that Mr. Stephenson, M. Talabot, and M. Negrelli, the English, French, and Austrian engineers now in conference with the council of the Pontset-Chausees, at Paris, on the plan sent over by Linant Bey for cutting through the Isthmus of Suez, are expected at Cairo with a view to that project; and that a joint-stock company will be formed, immediately, on their return, for carrying the plan into execution.

IRELAND.—The most deplorable accounts from all quarters of starvation, famine, and death continue to be published. In some parts emigration is going on extensively. Landlords are compounding with insolvent tenants for the surrender of the lands, and facilitating their removal, while large bodies of independent farmers are seeking the improvement of their fortunes.

STATE OF THE COUNTRY.—The Mayo Constitution records nine cases of death by starvation, which inquests were held before J. Atkinson, Esq. Coroner, and says—"Mr. Atkinson very pertinently puts the following query: 'How is it that large sums of money are coming as relief, and yet the people are starving? There must be some mismanagement in some place.'—At a meeting of the Galway Relief Committee, the other day, several deaths from starvation were reported, and Mr. Blakeny, the Coroner, said the deaths were so numerous it would be impossible for him to procure juries: besides, the cause of death in all cases was too evident to need the incurring of expense on the public with a view of authenticating it.—The Roscommon Journal says—"Deaths by famine are now so prevalent in this part of the country that whole families who retire to rest at night are corpses in the morning, and frequently left unburied for days, for want of a coffin. The state of our poor is awful; the average number of deaths daily, from fever alone, is eighteen. There are upwards of 1100 inmates, of whom 600 are in typhus fever. The rural districts are in an awful way."—The Sligo Champion says—"The people are dying by hundreds of starvation, and those who do not die of absolute want are carried off by fever and dysentery, chiefly diseases which have been engendered by the scarcity of provisions. Coroners' inquests cannot now be looked upon as affording a correct account of the deaths from starvation."—The Tuam Herald says—"Not a day passes over us but the most afflicting and horrifying occurrences take place in our neighbourhood. Various inquests have been held for the last few days by the coroners. The most thrilling records of suffering were recorded in the evidence of the witnesses, and the verdict returned by the jury in the majority of instances was 'Death from starvation.' But what are these to the hundreds that are daily pining away, and of whom no notice can be taken?"—Mr. A. O'Driscoll, in a letter to the Cork Reporter, says that in Crookhaven, "Twenty-five on an average die every day from want of food."—The Longford Journal says—"The ravages that disease and famine are making amongst our population may be gleaned from the fact that 292 persons died in our workhouse and the fever hospital attached, from the 1st of January to the 28th of February, inclusive.—The following is an extract of a letter, dated Dublin, March 8—"The most harrowing accounts have been received to-day from Sligo, Cork, Kerry, Leitrim, Longford, and other counties. The deaths from starvation are increasing to a most frightful extent, and fever and dysentery are spreading in all directions. I have seen a letter from a district in a southern county, which states that the board guardians now only admit to the workhouse persons suffering under fever and dysentery! Only think what a pest-house it must be! There appears to be a most lamentable deficiency of hospital accommodation, and the most direful consequences must follow, for it cannot be expected that pestilence will long be confined to the destitute classes."

Lord de Vesci, at his own expense, has sent out several families, numbering in all about eighty persons, to America, from the neighbourhood of Abbeyleix. His Lordship proposes sending many more as soon as the necessary arrangements are completed.

In Bandon workhouse on Saturday, the women, thinking, we suppose, that they were entitled to live like ladies, and that the public ought to be proud of supporting them, refused to assist in sweeping and cleaning the house.

Antrim is the only county in Ireland which has not touched a farthing of the government money. On the contrary, besides meeting their own wants by their own exertions, the inhabitants have contributed largely in aid of the sufferers elsewhere, from funds collected by subscriptions, by ladies' committees, bazaars, and through other charitable devices.

HORRIBLE MURDER IN CORK.—On Friday, a poor woman left her house in care of two children to go on some business. During her absence, a man entered and took a cake and a little meal, the only food in the hut, to allay his hunger. One of the children threatened to tell her mother, when he took a knife or razor, with which he severed her head from her body. The other child raised the alarm, when she was despatched in the same manner. On her return the mother found her two children dead. The perpetrator of the crime has been arrested.

To which are to be added 58 vessels lost in a single gale at Havana and Matanzas, making 490 in all.

The number of lives known to have been lost is 535. Twenty seven vessels are still missing.

LIGHT HOUSES, &c.—Appropriations have been made by the United States Congress for the following purposes:

In Maine.—For building a light house at Little River, in the town of Cutler, $5,000.—For re-building a light-house at Mount Desert Rock, $15,000.—For building a light-house at Prospect Harbour, in the town of Gouldsborough, $5 000.—For a spindle on the South Breaker, near White Head Light, $300.—For placing buoys on Trundy's Reef and Broad Cove Rock, in Muscle Ridge Channel, to wit, one at each of the following places: Hay Island Ledge, Hurricane Ledge, Shroves, Ledge, Spence's Head Island Ledge, Long Ledge, and Muscle Ledge, $2,000.

In New Hampshire.—For re-building the light-house on a rock called the Whale's Back, $25,000, inclusive of a former appropriation for a breakwater to protect that light-house.

In Massachusetts.—For such a beacon as may be deemed necessary by the Secretary of the Treasury, on a rock called the "Londoner," near Thatcher's Island, $6,000.—For a light-house on Minot's Rock, in Boston Harbor, $20 000.—For three spar buoys in Wellfleet harbor, four spar buoys at the mouth of Westport harbor, and for nine buoys and a beacon in Buzzard's Bay, $2,000.—For a light boat to be stationed near a reef of rocks at the entrance of the Vineyard Sound, called the Sow and Pigs, $10,000; or for permanent light-house on said reef, as the Secretary of the Treasury may deem best.—For buoys on Halset's Rock, Milk Rock, and three buoys on the spit, in and near the harbor of Edgartown; for a buoy at Rockport; for a buoy off Brant Point, Nantucket; for beacons or buoys on Harbor Rock, Clam Rock, Elisha's Ledge, Fort Point, and Black Rock, in the harbor of Gloucester, $2,000; for a buoy on Ben Shoal, off Monamoy Point, $80; for a buoy boat on the East end of Tuckermuck Shoal, and one on the end of Great or Sandy Point Rip, $800.—For repairs to the causeway between the light-house and shore at Edgartown, $5,000.

DREADFUL MORTALITY.—The ship Thomas W. Sears, arrived at Boston on the 2d April, from Liverpool, after a passage of 60 days. When she sailed from Liverpol, she had 141 steerage passengers, but twenty-four of them died on the passage, of ship fever and dysentery. Dr. Smith, the Port Physician, boarded the ship, and found it to be in such a state of filth as to oblige him to forbid its being hauled up to the wharf until purified. He found about twenty of the passengers sick with the fever, who will have to be removed to the Alms-house forthwith, where a number of them, will, without doubt, die. And those who are now well, are in such a state of destitution as to render it probable that a number of them will get lodged in the same institution. As soon as Mr. Baillie, the Superintendent of passengers, boarded the vessel, the passengers commenced begging of him, and though many of them were interrogated, not one was found who possessed a copper! Six children were born in the vessel on her passage from Liverpool.—Tra.

More Emigrants.—The ship Sunbeam, arrived at Boston on Monday from Liverpool, with a large number of steerage passengers. She had on board 323 when she sailed, of whom sixteen died.

ETHER APPLIED TO VETERINARY SCIENCE.—The vapour of sulphuric ether has, we hear, been employed at the Royal Veterinary College, Camden-town, on a sheep and a horse, with the most decided success. The first-named animal was affected, and had been for many months, with an incurable disease of the hock-joint. On being brought into the theatre, she was caused to inhale the ether through a tube. The leg was amputated by Mr. Simonds without the slightest indication of pain whatever. The operation occupied about six minutes, and within twenty minutes from the commencement the animal was removed from the theatre restored to sensation and consciousness. The horse was labouring under a chronic affection of the near fore foot, commonly known by the name of the "navicular disease," for which the operation of "unnerving" is generally resorted to as a remedy. This is a very painful operation, and oftentimes the operator has to contend against the violent struggles of the animal, particularly at the instant the division of the nerve is effected. In this case, the ether was inhaled for about thirteen minutes, when the horse fell forwards, and the nerve on each side of the leg was divided by Mr. Spooner without the least manifestation of pain; a slight convulsive action of the limb, similar to that which takes place when a nerve of a recently killed animal is cut through, alone giving indication of sensation. Within twenty-three minutes this animal also had perfectly recovered from the effects of the ether. No restraint whatever was resorted to to keep the animals in the required position for these operations, and the inhaler employed was one invented for the purpose, but an apparatus temporarily adjusted by Mr. Morton, until a more perfect one was obtained.

GALVANISM A PROTECTOR OF TREES.—A German journal states that the application of galvanism has been made in Austria for preserving trees and plants from the ravages of insects. The process is very simple; consisting only in placing two rings, one of copper the other of zinc, attached together, around the tree or plant. Any insect that touches the copper receives an electric shock, which kills it or causes it to fall to the ground.—Galignani.

Several Russian physicians are at present occupied in Egypt in investigations relating to the plague. They have everywhere found fellahs ready, for a trifling remuneration, to submit to operations, in order to test the long-disputed questions of the contagion and inoculation of the malady.

A Belgian gentleman is said to have discovered a simple means of distinguishing real from apparent death. It consists in establishing a burn of the second degree. If life remains a blister always rises, even in the absence of all sensibility; but if death has taken place, the burn produces no effect.
