POETRY.

THE WORLD IS SO FAIR.

Why stand'st thou, man, with a heavy heart!
The world is all so fair?
The bird, a living song, doth rise
With clear sweet music to the skies
And blithely warbles to the air—
"The world is so fair! the world is so fair!"

The blossom waits the dawn to see
Ere she unfold her sanctuary;
Then breathes from her perfumed chalice there—
"The world is so fair! the world is so fair!"

In the silvery tide of the rivulet bright,
Where wave follows wave in the hurry of flight,
To the banks, which they sprinkle, in sweet tones bear—
"The world is so fair! the world is so fair!"

Why stand'st thou, man! so gloom oppress'd,
And gazest alone thro' thine own dark breast?
Oh! give but a look to the joyance rare,
The mirth that encircles thee everywhere!
"The world is so fair! the world is so fair."

VARIETY.

REMEDY FOR THE POTATO DISEASE.—A paper appeared in the Agricultural Bulletin, from which we learn that a chemist named Eusebius Griss, had been paying great attention to the disease, and has found a direct and radical remedy. This gentleman, guided by analogy, has compared the disease of this vegetable to the chlorosis which attacks the human frame; and the idea suggested itself to him whether the same remedies which improve the vitality of the blood, which restore its energy and its color, might be advantageously resorted to in re-animating the languishing vitality and tone of the discolored leaves. He accordingly had recourse to an application of salts and iron. He watered the plants with a solution of sulphate of iron containing from 10 to 20 grains to a litre of water, and moistened the leaves with a lighter solution containing only about three grains to a litre of water. This last method proved much more immediately the efficacy of the remedy than when it is done by watering the plant; for in the latter case it might be attributed to chemical re-action produced in the interior of the soil. A committee was appointed by the Royal Society to test the result of Mr. Griss's remedy. Experiments were made in various parts, some on an extended, some on a smaller scale; they were very successful in regard to the disease itself, and the committee reported that although some further trials were needed to prove facts, yet it was thought probable that this solution might likewise be found valuable in sandy soils. M. Gaudry, of Paris, was induced to try the remedy on some young chlorotic peach trees; and a fortnight after, when the committee of the Horticultural Society inspected them they had entirely recovered.

A TRANCE-BURYING ALIVE.—A paper was read before the French Academy of Science, in which the following extraordinary instance was adduced as a reason for abolishing the present custom of burying so soon after death.

A young female had been twice pronounced dead when only in a trance, but had recovered in time to prevent being buried alive. A trance came on and, in consequence of what had previously occurred, permission was obtained from the constituted authorities for the body to remain above ground as long as decomposition should not have taken place. A week—ten days passed away—there was still no decomposition, but all the medical men declared that she was dead, and at length she was laid in her coffin. Only a few minutes before the coffin was to be nailed down, and while the bell of the village church was already tolling for her funeral, a female from an adjoining village, who had been the school-fellow of the supposed defunct, came to take a last farewell. She stooped to kiss the lips of her departed friend, and remained in that position for some time, the bystanders attempted to remove her, lest her emotion should be injurious to her. She waved them off with her hand, and remained with her lips upon those of her friend, and breathing, as it turned out afterwards, the warm breath of life into her lungs. At length she exclaimed—"she lives!" and rising from the body pointed out unequivocal signs of life. She stated that as she was kissing her friend she fancied that she felt her breath, and in a few minutes was convinced of the fact. The female who was supposed to be dead was taken out of the coffin and placed in a warm bed, and, in the course of a few hours, fully revived.—She stated that she was, during her trance, fully sensible to all that was passing around her, and that she even heard the death bell toll, but was utterly incapable of speech or sign to show that she was not dead!

THE FIGURE NINE.—However many nines may be added together or by whatever number or numbers it may be multiplied, the line of figures for the sum or product may be added together, and it will consist of one or more nines—For instance, twice 9 18; the 1 and 8 are 9, 4 times 9 are 36; and 3 and 6 are 9. A learner finds some amusement in increasing the amount, as if he expected some variation might be found, but when he gets to 11 times 9, he finds the product is only 99; two nines. And at the next step higher, viz: 12 times 9, he obtains only 108, or one 9.

Then he may be shown the fact that nine digits, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, amounted to a large number of nines; namely, 5 nines are 45; and he may be taught that if, instead of adding a nine up, he will multiply the middle figure by the last figure, namely, 5 times 9 he will find the value of the whole most readily; and this upon a principle of taking averages, to which he will have occasion to resort in higher departments of the science.

He may then be directed to notice the effect of adding together the two lines formed of the nine digits, but in reversed order.—For instance:

  123456789
  987654321
-------------
  1111111110

There is something striking to the eye in such a product, for the wonderful number recurs in nine ones; and it may serve to induce thinking. Or let the one line be substracted from the other in this way:

  987654321
  123456789
-------------
  864197532

In this result the odd and even numbers become curiously arranged; the whole of the nine digits are there, as in the upper line; there is no surplus or repetition; there is only one figure of a kind; of course they amount to five nines.

Would the pupil wish to see a sum in multiplication, the product of which shall contain several figures alike? Tell him to set down all the digits except 8, and if he would like the product to be all ones, let the line be multiplied by one nine.

  12345679
         9
-------------
  111111111

And here again is the faithful number for the product presents nine ones.

If the product of twos would please him, let him multiply the line with two nines or 18, and so on with 27, 36, &c. until by multiplying by 9 or 81, he will have a product of all nines, and nine of them.

  12345679      12345679      12345679
        18            45            81
-------------------------------------------
  98765432      61728395      12345679
  12345679      49382716      98765432
-------------------------------------------
 222222222     555555555     999999999

The pupil may try intermediate numbers to produce threes, fours, sixes, sevens, and eights. There will be found nine of each, and the figures of each product added together will be of equal value to each respective multiplier.

If the number nine be multiplied eight places in a line by two and the other digits, up to nine exclusive, the whole line of results will be ranged alike, from left to right, and from right to left; that is from a to a, reading the figures in either direction.

  9 9 9 9 9 9 9 9
  2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9
-------------------
a18 27 36 45 54 63 72 81a

The first figure in each couple, for either end, is in simple rotation from one to eight.—Ross's Mental Calculator.

A MODEST EDITOR.—We have tasted Dick's bottled Edinburgh ale, sold by Messrs. Tellet and Co., and can pronounce it excellent; a good hearty swig at it this hot weather is worth all the cold water of the Amazons, whatever teetotallers may say. When we have half a-dozen fine long necked bottles sent us, as in this case, for review, we get on with some spirit; and if any one has a house to let, allow us to live in it for a year, rent free, and then we will be able to tell the public whether it is a "desirable residence" or not. The country at large know not what they lose by being stingy with newspaper editors.—Munx Liberal.

The Boston Watchman some time ago, told this tale:—"Father, what does the printer live on?" "Why, child?" "You said you hadn't paid him for two or three years, and yet you have his paper every week!" "Take that child out of the room—what does he know about right and wrong?"
