Liverpool, May 26.—The St. John, bound from this port to New-York, with emigrants, put into Cork last week, the cholera having broken out on board, and seven of the crew being dead.

The ship Charlotte, Capt. Vasey, arrived in the Clyde on the 22d of May from New-Orleans, has had a most distressing time from sickness. She left on the 14th of March, the crew all in perfect health. On the 18th four of them died of cholera, next day another, and on the 25th, a sixth died from the same disease. They were all men before the mast, and their names were Thomas Henley, William Black, Charles West, Joseph Wood, William Cotter, and Russell Powell. Several others of the crew were ill, but recovered.

Brig Martha Jane, McWhae, of and from Liverpool, three days out for St. Andrews, (N. B.) got on shore on the Scotch side of the Solway Frith on the 22d instant, near to Saterness light-house, and afterwards drifted into deep water, and sunk on the English side of the Frith—crew saved with difficulty in the vessel's boats. The weather being thick, the captain mistook the lights, and it was supposed the brig was in the North Channel instead of the Solway Frith.
