THE BLUENOSE NIGHTINGALE.

"The watchful nightingale, she all night long her am'rous descant sang." MILTON.
"Which ugly and venomous wears yet a precious jewel in its head." SHAKSPEARE.

In lands removed from England's shore, where nothing old is seen,
Save hills and mountains, lakes and streams, and wide-spread forests green;
Where dashing down the rocky cliffs, the little streamlets play,
As jocund and as joyously, as on earth's natal day;
And gurgle by the lichens there, in gladness as they glide
To mingle with the river's flow and swell the ocean's tide;
Where are no sculptur'd monuments to val'rous deeds hath raised,—
Chivalric deeds, in hoary climes, by bards and poets praised.

In this new world—these distant lands, a peaceful realm there lies, [skies,
Beyond the broad Atlantic wave, 'neath genial Western
Where Britain rules, a realm to which unrivall'd things belong,
Lovely and lov'd, unsaid in story, and unsung in song.
And why should'st pass thy little life, with none to tell its tale [ingale?
To stranger ears in this old world, thou Bluenose Night-
To picture forth thy ups and downs, thy simple lowly lot,
By those call'd 'Ornithologists' so shamefully forgot:
Thy deep repose in solitude in winter's lengthen'd night;
Thy home of happy harmony when summer's sun is bright;
Thy playful gambols on the green, or in the purling brook;
Thy homely, harmless habits, and thy meek and modest look;
The queenly care with which thy brood thou sendest out to nurse,
Are subjects all for Poet's pen to celebrate in verse.

When summer's sun has sunk to rest and evening shades prevail, [ingale;
How sweet to listen to thy voice, thou Bluenose Night-
As borne upon the silent air, its echoes float along,
Charming the lovers' moonlight walk, with wild and plaintive song.
When seated on the mossy bank, some tender words they'd say,
The tale's untold, delighted ears await thy am'rous lay;
And when the time (which lovers' watch will never mark as slow,)
Warns home, thy thrilling note strikes up and cheers them as they go.

No vain ambition swells thy breast to soar in air and sing,
Contented by the stagnant pool, or by the bubbling spring,
Or where the bending reeds by swamps, afford a cool retreat
And shelter from the sun's bright rays in noontide's burning heat; [keep,
Or in the meadow's marshy waste, thy merry mood to
Daring all other nightingales to try with thee a leap;
The muse has laid, in Æsop's days, this folly to thy charge,
That thou would'st imitate the ox, and swell thyself as large.
And that, inflamed with lust of power, whence darkest vices spring,
Thou Jove's high majesty implored to give to thee a king.
All fab'lous lies, malicious told, the ignorant to deceive
For none who knows thee ever would the sland'rous tale believe; [claims,
That thou hast riches great, e'en Shakspeare's pen pro-
Tho' he would brand thy mem'ry too, with most unseemly names.
In France, where bleeds the luscious grape to make the gen'rous wine,
The Epicure upon thy flesh invites his friends to dine;—
And Science, thy gratuitous aid, in times late passed must own, [known,
Acknowledging her depth of debt, where'er Galvanic's
And yet 'neath these—of wealth so great, the fame,
"The even tenor of thy way" is still unchanged—the same.

To write of all thy virtues great, my greatest powers would fail, [gale.
These I will leave to other pens, my Bluenose Nightin-
Leave them to paint thy plumage rich, its beauteous gold and green, [seen.
And all those many things unsaid, that in thy life are
Whence come thy steps, from classic lands to lands of snow and ice, [mice;
The Hero's of old Homer's Isle, the Conquerors of the
Or by Saint Patrick's stern command, exiled from Erin's shore, [more.
Made Absentees from joyous scenes, you ne'er can visit
I'll turn my thoughts from this old world to that in which you dwell [well.
To thee and it, I'm grieved at heart, to bid so long fare-

VARIETY.

THE COMPLAINT AGAINST THE BISHOP OF EXETER.—The Archbishop's Reply.—The following is the reply of the Archbishop to the address presented to him by a deputation from Plymouth:—

Gentlemen,—In replying to the memorial which you have presented to me as agreed upon at a recent public meeting, held at Plymouth, I will first allude to that part of it which I have read with great satisfaction. It cannot be otherwise than gratifying to one placed in the situation which I have been called to occupy, when he receives from a numerous, and, I doubt not, influential body of laymen, an assurance of their steadfast adherence to our Church, to her doctrine, and her constitution. Attached, too, as I am, not less by official duty than by private conviction, to the principles of the Reformation, I rejoice to find those principles sincerely professed and manfully upheld. Indeed, among various causes of regret which have arisen of late years, in connection with the Roman Catholic religion, I have always found consolation in perceiving, from undoubted evidence, that the great body of our people are too well acquainted with Scriptural truth, to be ever allured back into errors renounced by their forefathers.

I could have wished to find the same grounds of satisfaction in the general purport of your Memorial. One of the important subjects of which it treats you must allow me to pass over in silence. Official persons acting within the legal bounds of their authority, can only be governed by their own conscientious views of duty, and of the mode in which they think it may be discharged so as best to promote the purposes for which the authority was given.

You complain, however, of the introduction of obsolete forms and ceremonies into the service of the Church, and of an approach among many of the Clergy of your diocese towards practices which appear to savour of Romish superstition.

You have already been informed by your Diocesan which of those practices can be, and which cannot be defended by the letter of the Book of Common Prayer.

I could certainly have wished that the younger Clergy, to whom your remarks are chiefly applicable, had thought themselves at liberty to follow the usage of their predecessors and the example of the great majority of their brethren at the present day; —so as to acquiesce in those slight deviations from the Rubric which custom had sanctioned, and which had not been reproved by competent authority. I could have wished they had considered the Apostle's example applicable to their case, and in non-essential things had yielded to the feelings of the people as he yielded to those of the Jews, for the sake of avoiding offence and gaining confidence. Especially I regret the introduction into our parish Churches of a mode of worship which however proper and suitable in our Cathedrals, appears too artificial and elaborate for simple and general devotion.

But on the other hand I am bound to respect conscientious scruples, even though I cannot participate in them. These Clergy assured me that they consider themselves fettered by directions which, in their judgment, the Church to which they have promised obedience, requires them to observe.

Your memorial alludes to this, and expresses a desire that the attention of the Legislature should be called towards the subject, and a Bill be introduced with the concurrence of the Ecclesiastical Authorities for securing certain specific objects which you consider expedient in the present circumstances of the Church.

The time may possibly arrive when such a change as you contemplate might be effected without occasioning far greater evils than those which we wish to remedy. It must, however, be generally acknowledged, that such a time has not yet come. A season of excitement is not a season for reasonable deliberation. Men judge of these things, not according to their actual value, but according to the value which they themselves attach to them. And, after all, differences of real importance, differences in the tone and spirit of public teaching, can never be prevented by any law, or any form of articles or prayers. If the doctrine were erroneous, it would little signify in what dress it were delivered, or with what form it was accompanied; whilst, on the other hand, if the minister be diligent in his duties and faithful in his instructions, we may readily excuse the addition of a gesture, or the omission of a prayer.

I can scarcely hope that these remarks will prove satisfactory to those who seem to have expected more from my interference than I possess the power or see the possibility of accomplishing. I can only entreat them to unite with me in supplicating the Great Head of the Church, that He may grant to every member of the same, in his vocation and ministry, the spirit of a sound mind and a right judgment, that they may approve things that are really "excellent and pertain to life and godliness," rather than things of "doubtful disputation," ever remembering, that "the end of the commandment is charity," and that "the fruits of righteousness are sown in peace of them that make peace."

Lambeth, Dec. 30*th*, 1848. J. B. CANTUAR.

Dreadful Accident.—We do not remember to have read a more heart-rending occurrence than that published by the Kingston (Ulster county) Journal of Wednesday, and which occurred at Ellenville in that county, on Friday last, at the house of Mr. William Hutchinson.

Mr. H., it appears, was heating upon a stove, a composition for paint, composed of oil and turpentine, when it unexpectedly took fire. With much presence of mind he seized a stick of wood and set the kettle upon the floor, then hastened to an adjoining room to procure a piece of carpet which was in readiness, to throw over the vessel and extinguish the flame But the blaze, reaching almost to the ceiling, and the smoke completely filling the room, alarmed the family that the house would be on fire; and the oldest child, a daughter of nine years, seizing a boy of eighteen months, ran into the hall adjoining, followed by the mother with the remaining child, a daughter of seven years.

Their cries, and the dense smoke, attracted immediate attention, and an individual living on the opposite side of the hall in the same house, seeing the cause of the alarm, regardless of himself, hurried on a pair of leather mittens, entered the room, seized the flaming vessel by its sides, and made for the street. But, on coming into the hall, a strong breeze from the front door drove both the smoke and the blaze directly into his face, burning him severely and preventing him from seeing or knowing anything that was passing about him. In this condition he was obliged to cast the vessel from him, which he did, as far as he was able, towards the front door. But being himself burned, and blinded by the smoke, he could give no direction to it, and shocking to relate, it struck the head of the little girl who had the infant in her arms, and who was at the instant crossing the hall, lacerating her temple, throwing her down, and spilling its boiling and blazing contents over the persons of herself and brother!

This was all the dreadful work of a moment, and when the father reached the hall he saw his children struggling in the flames! Notwithstanding the awful spectacle, his presence of mind did not forsake him. He immediately threw the carpet he had been in quest of, over his children, and wrapping it close about them, at once extinguished the flames. But it was all too late! The little sufferers were already so shockingly burned that they could not long survive! The scalding oil had penetrated so deeply their tender persons, their heads, faces and bosoms, that life could not long continue. The youngest lingered in misery about eighteen hours only, and the eldest has just now expired!

During the first forty-eight hours of her agonizing existence, she frequently manifested signs of rationality, spoke many times, often asking for drink, and inquiring after her little brother and her father, whom the confusion of the disaster led her to think some one was endeavouring to kill. About these she seemed very solicitous, notwithstanding her appearance was such as would indicate an entire suspension of mental action, certainly in relation to any and everything except her own suffering self. Her eyes were nearly or quite destroyed, and her whole countenance so swollen and distorted that she could not have been recognized by her nearest friends.—New-York paper.

Important Discovery.—Messrs. Tyer and Hulme, foremen, and conductors of the extensive Rubber works of Mr. Day in New-Brunswick, New-Jersey, having tried over five hundred different experiments to discover means of rendering the vulcanizing process, one of certainty, and free from damage to the fabrics, and at the same time obtain a substance which would chemically unite with Rubber, and yet free from the injurious and even destroying effect upon the health of the operatives, so certain in the use of Lead; have effectually succeeded in overcoming both these difficulties, and obtained a fabric at once insoluble—almost indestructible—not effected by any degree of cold, and capable of withstanding for a long period of time, heat even as high as 350 deg. The principal agent used is Zinc—no Lead being used in any way in any part of the process. The invention has been used with entire success in almost every class of Rubber goods, and it has been applied to a great variety of purposes. The inventors have been offered several thousand dollars for the patents, which are said to be the most valuable ever issued by the United States for Rubber.

An Italian naturalist has discovered a mode of grafting the cereal grasses, and has thus produced a new variety of rice, which returns an increase nearly a third greater than that of the ordinary kind grown in Lombardy, while it bears drought much better.

Throughout all British America there do not exist twenty miles of railway; in the United States there are 8,000 miles.

An American paper estimates the value of the cigars daily smoked in New York at 10,000 dollars, being an annual outlay for smoking alone of 3,650,000 dollars, or £821,250.

When the last Conway tube was being raised the following colloquy took place between Mr. Stephenson and an other eminent and distinguished engineer:—Mr. Stephenson. Hallo! what is the matter with you, Mr. ———, you seem out of sorts? —Mr. ———: I am quite a martyr to a periodical nervous headache, and I must go up to town to be cupped.—Mr. Stephenson: Cupped! pooh! pooh! nonsense; lessen the supplies—eat less at meals: it is always better to damp the fire, than to blow off steam.

It was one of the laws of Lycurgus that no portions should be given with young women in marriage. When this great lawgiver was called upon to justify this enactment, he observed, 'That, in the choice of a wife, merit only should be considered, and that the law was made to prevent young women being chosen for their riches or neglected for their poverty.'

The following curious statement has been put forth:—The expenditures, per minute, of Washington's administration were 3 dols. 82 cents; Adams, the elder, 2 dols. 53 cents; Jefferson, 9 dols. 95 cents; Madison, 34 dols. 88 cents; Monroe, 25 dols. 18 cents; Adams, the younger, 24 dols. 35 cents; Jackson, 35 dols. 15 cents; Van Buren, 65 dols. 78 cents; Tyler, 43 dols. 95 cents; Polk, 145 dols. 88 cents.

THE KING OF THE ARCTIC OCEAN.

"Oh! the rare old whale, 'mid storm and gale,
In his ocean home will be;
A giant in might, where might is right,
And king of the boundless sea."

Captain Roys, of the Superior, makes a report, which is confirmed by his ship's company, that while cruising in the Arctic Ocean, they discovered a huge whale, which they were confident was too large for them to "cut in" with a vessel of the size of the Superior. All agree in asserting that it was the largest whale they ever saw, and if it had been taken must have yielded more than 300 barrels of oil. It was not through fear for themselves, but the "whaling gear" of the vessel, that they allowed the King of the Arctic Ocean quietly to hold on his way! His kingship may congratulate himself upon his good fortune if he escapes another season!—[Honolulu Friend.]

"A wondrous tale could the rare old whale
Of the mighty deep disclose,
Of the skeleton forms of by-gone storms,
And of the treasures that no one knows;

Oh! the whale is free of the boundless sea,
He lives for a thousand years;
He sinks to rest on the billow's breast,
Nor the roughest tempest fears.

The howling blast as it hurries past,
Is music to lull him to sleep;
And he scatters the spray in his boisterous play,
As he dashes—The King of the Deep!"

ASTONISHING EFFICACY
HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.
THE TESTIMONY OF A CLERGYMAN VOUCHING ELEVEN CASES OF CURES BY THESE WONDERFUL PILLS.
Extract of a Letter from the Rev. George [...] Curate of Meragh, Letter Kenny, Co[...] Ireland, 10th January, 1846.
TO PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.
SIR,—I send you a crude list of some cases, all cured by the use of your Pills [...] not exactly give you a professional name [to the] various complaints, but this I know, [that many of] them baffled the skill of Derry and this C[ounty]. In a previous letter this gentleman states as follows:—Within a short distance of my house [re]sides a small farmer, who for more than [...] years has been in a bad state of health; [Mr.] Prior gave him a box of the Pills, which did so much good that I heard him say, for years past he never ate his food or enjoyed much as since taking your Pills.
(Signed) GEORGE PRI[OR]
_ The above reverend and pious [gentleman] purchased some pounds' worth of the Pills [for the] benefit of his poor parishioners.

EXTRAORDINARY CURES
Holloway's Ointment.
CURE OF A DESPERATE CASE OF ERYSIPELAS.
Copy of a Letter from Mr. Joseph Gilden[...] a Farmer, East Kenal, near Spilsby, Lincoln[shire], 8th April, 1846.
TO PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.
SIR,—I have the gratification to announce [to] you a most wonderful cure wrought upon [me] by the use of your Ointment and Pills. [I had a] severe attack of Erysipelas in my right leg, [which] extended along my ancle, and was attended [with] swelling and inflammation to an alarming [degree] insomuch that I was unable to move without use of crutches. I consulted a very [eminent] Physician, besides other Medical men, [but to no] purpose. At last I tried your Ointment [and Pills,] when, strange to say, in less than two weeks swelling and inflammation gradually [subsided to] such a degree that I was enabled to pursue [my] daily avocation, to the utter surprise [of all who knew] ment of those who were acquainted with [me], seeing that I was cured so quickly. I [and my] family are well known here, as my father [held] his farm under the Rev. J. Spence, Re[ctor of] our Parish. JOSEPH GILD[EN]
Holloway's Ointment will [cure] any cases of Bad Legs, Ulcerous Sores, Breasts, Sore Nipples, Cancers, Tumours, Swellings, Contracted or Stiff Joints, Gout, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Burns, Scalds, Chilblains, Chapped Hands and Lips, Bunions, Soft Corns, Piles, the Bite of Moschetoes, Sand-flies, Chiego-foot, Yaws, Coco-bay, all Skin Diseases common to Europe, or the East and West Indies, or other Tropical climes.
☞ Sold by the Proprietor, 244, Strand, (near Temple Bar,) London; and by S. L. TILLEY, Provincial Agent, No. 2, King Street, Saint John, N. B.; James F. Gale, Fredericton; W. T. Baird, Woodstock; Alexander Lockhart, Quaco; James Beck, Bend of Petitcodiac; G[...] Sayre, Dorchester; John Bell, Shediac; [...] Lewis, Hillsborough; John Curry, Canning; James G. White, Bellisle;—in pots and boxes, at 1s. 9d., 4s. 6d. and 7s. each. There is a considerable saving in taking the larger sizes.

REVIEW OF THE WORK.
Marriage requires the fulfilment of several conditions, in order that it may be really the source of mutual happiness. Could the veil, which covers the origin of domestic wretchedness, be raised, and its true source in every instance disclosed, in how many could it be traced to physical disqualification, and their attendant disappointments. Exercise and are always injurious; the gift, which [...] in moderation is fraught with advantage, becomes, when abused, the prolific source of mischief, and of greater or less injury to the constitutional powers. The particular excesses, the nature and consequences of which this Treatise purposes to dilate, are productive of greater misery to the human frame, than any other to which it is [...]
This Work contains an accurate and [...] account of the Anatomy and Physiology of the Reproductive Organs, in health and disease. Nor are these the sole contents of the work, the means of [...] as well as the nature of the danger, are pointed out in clear and intelligible language. It [...] requires the closest attention and study, [...] subject can be of more importance than [the preser]vation of health, and of the physical capacity which every man should be possessed [of? Unfor]tunately happens, that the unhappy [...] excessive indulgence and vicious habits, acquired in early life, or from the follies of [advan]ced age, while suffering from their [con]sequences, unwisely entertains a fear of [consulting] a qualified physician for relief. [...] dread so frequently but erroneously entertained [...] these complaints are beyond the reach of [medical skill] restrict him, and prevent his seeking [...] where alone it can be procured.
