West St. John has been busy in a quiet way this summer, with guests at many of the homes, from various parts of the United States. Small affairs have been held just to bring the friends together in social intercourse. Mrs. Harold Ketchum entertained a number of ladies from the West Side last week-end at her country home at Ketepec, and a most enjoyable time was spent, the weather and surroundings being of the very best. Tea was served on the verandah and the time was passed in a quiet social way.

THE MOTHER'S WORK.

Pete, in Toronto Star.

Let mother sit with folded hands and rest so for a spell.
She's toiled all day about the house,
she's done her duty well.
Now let her rest at eventide and sit
a while with you,
Nor further task her willing hands, for
she is weary, too.

You've done your share you feel, no doubt, you're through now for the day.
Has mother, then, not done hers, too?
Not so, I hear you say.
A thousand duties fill her life with chores for you and me,
So, for a while now let her sit, from cares and toils set free.

Ay! let her rest. The years slip by and life is o'er so soon,
The morning dawns, the moments pass
and lo! it now is noon.
With busy tasks fast speed the hours,
the years go flashing by;
A little while and then it seems the eventide draws nigh.

Let mother sit with folded hands. Yes,
let her rest awhile;
Let mother's evening hours be sweet,
her sunset wear a smile,
Let mother fold her hands sometimes before her life is through,
When someone else must do the chores
that mother used to do.

Let mother sit and rest a while before she's called to go Away from you, away from me, who love but tax her so.
Let mother sit with folded hands
beside you now and then,
Night comes when she will fold her hands, nor open them again.

Either Turbans or Brimmed Hats Are Correct for the Fall Season

By ELOISE.

Do you prefer your hats with brims or brimless ? You will be stylish this fall no matter which you wear. The early fall millinery showing points to a greater diversity of shapes for the coming fall, but both the turban and the wide brimmed hats are finding favor. Browns and blacks are good, but silver and metal fabrics and trimmings are far in the lead. The turban will be favored for wear with suits and the larger hats for wear with more formal costumes.

Here are two turbans of novel design. The one at the left is a helmet shape of black satin draped in metal ribbon brocaded in lovely autumn tints. The one at the right is a round, snug-fitting black velvet shape with a unique trimming made of heavy cords or ropes of white taffeta, loosely braided, which encircle the crown.

The drooping brimmed hat is always with us, partly because it is so kind even to the harshest features. The large shape shown in the centre has the most flattering of broad drooping brims. Its only trimming is a spray of uncurled feathers which wreathe the crown and fall gracefully off the right side. The color of the hat is a rich brown shade in panne velvet. Brown in all shades is one of the leading colors this fall not only in millinery but in cloaks and suits as well.

MARRIAGE A LA MODE

Modern ideas regarding the rights of women have never penetrated certain parts of New Guinea. There the women do all the heavy work and wait upon their husbands with abject servility.

An English writer claims many of the inhabitants are cannibals and frequently when they tire of their wives they kill them at will and eat them with relish.

IF YOU ARE WELL BRED

You remeber that while a guest is privileged to leave a dinner party any time after the dinner is concluded it is neither flattering nor gracious to the hostess to hurry away to another engagement immediately after the dinner has been served.

When a dinner begins at seven, the guest usually leaves at ten, though the hour may be much later, depending on the entertainment provided afterward.

PROTECT YOUR HANDS.

Last week I quoted a world-famous palmist on the various types of hands and what they signify. But no palmist has ever talked about the type of hand I think the most interesting of all—the hand where the tragedy of poverty and hard work is written in every line and wrinkle, in every enlarged knuckle and on the hardened yellow palm. The over-worked hand is the most tragic sight I know. All traces of youth and loveliness have disappeared, all characteristics submerged and nothing is left but a record of sacrifice and struggle.

Women with such hands write and ask me what they can do to bring back a little of the good looks that have been worked away. It seems like trivial advice to tell them to protect their hands while they are working and to feed the dried skin with nourishing oils, to give a little attention to the finger nails. And yet it is just this sort of treatment which is effective.

The hands respond to care in the most amazing fashion, even five minutes a day will work wonders. Practical suggestions are to give the hands plenty of oil, to wear gloves while working, to rub vaseline or oil into all the edges of the nails at night.

Another suggestion is keep an orange wood stick and a pair of manicure scissors and a small pointed nail file in the bathroom cupboard. Then when the hands are washed, the nails can be cleaned while they are still damp and easy to do, and loose bits of skin can be clipped off before they have a chance to grow larger and make the fingers sore. The purpose of the orange wood stick is to push back the cuticle around the nail, an attention the very busy woman will always slight, although it would save her hangnails.

LOVELY WRAP FOR SUMMER EVENINGS

By ELOISE.

Late summer often demands a light wrap, particularly for evening wear. This year capes are the vogue and they are to be had in canton crepes, satins and soft duvetyns. All of these materials, however, are too heavy for a real summer night. A wrap which is at once a thing of ornamentation as well as a protection against night breezes is made of heavy georgette.

Here is a georgette cape which, because of its beauty, will undoubtedly be worn whether there is need for a wrap or not. It is made of a very heavy quality of georgette in a taupe shade and it is banded and collared in luxurious silver fox. It is just the wrap for summer wear and will add a note of smartness to the simplest summer organdy or taffeta dancing frocks. Its sheerness makes it much more suitable for formal and evening wear than the more ordinary canton crepes with their colored linings. The large picture hat worn here is of black hemp trimmed with sprays of burnt goose.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

Optimism in political camps has its source in natural gas.

Radio stories are "the newest"—and yet they are just stories.

The mandate plan has carried. And the world thereby wears a new belt.

The Soviets have left The Hague. No doubt wiser men. The allies pointed the way.

A British Columbia astronomer has discovered "twin suns" whirling in the sky. A case of seeing doubles.

The boy hero who saved 300 lives by flagging a train from a danger spot was true to type. He disappeared without waiting for thanks.

Australia refuses "to grease the wheels for German trade." They may find lubricants where they can, save in the island continent.

Fashions And Fads

Varied-colored oxfords have come and almost gone.

Wrappy coats feature wide, embroidered sleeves.

Cretonne dresses are seen at all the smart resorts.

It is almost time for the ostrich in millinery again.

Green has become the favorite color for sports wear.

Pearl or jet beading is used on filmy white georgette.

The irregular hem line is a feature of evening gowns.

With the cotton dress is worn the straw flower-wreath hat.

New ribbon has fluted edges, contrasting with the ground.

Among lingerie trimmings caen lace will be in great demand.

Favorite shades in gloves are a soft pearl and a peachbloom.

The latest of overnight bags holds both a dress and a sports suit.

Ratine is so extraordinarily popular that it is almost sure of a decline.

Dresses of foulard and printed crepe are worn with sheer black hats.

Soutache braid in contrasting colors is used on sports frocks of eponge.

Cut steel buckles are in great favor for holding the side drapery in place.

The petal cape is gaining in favor. One shows very wide petals in triple tier arrangement.

At the seaside resorts one sees printed cottons and linens to the exclusion of crepe dresses.

Novelty ratines in striking designs are used for crepe costumes, sports frocks and skirts.

"Assyrien" is a new crepe morrocain in which the moire effect is shown in a figure design.

Very smart rainy-day coats are those of black-and-white checked cloth with rubber linings.

With the gradual decline of the vogue for bobbed hair, the short-tooth jeweled comb is in demand.

A one-piece frock of beige crepe de chine has floating side panels of lace, dyed to match the dress.

A frock of navy blue canton crepe has collars and cuffs of handkerchief linen in pale yellow.

Cherry-colored pipings and cross-stitch work make a thing of beauty of black taffeta bathing suit.

Bandings of tiny ribbon roses and crystal beads are used on a frock of periwinkle blue crepe georgette.

The most popular bathing suit is that of cretonne and the one ranking next is undoubtedly of black satin.

Blouses of figure or matelasse materials are worn with skirts in plain materials of the same color.

EMBROIDERY IS TO BE USED ON NEW FALL FROCKS

By ELOISE.

Present embroidery has established itself on white summer frocks for sports and afternoon wear and it has become so much a favorite that many of the new fall and winter modes are trying to find a place where it may be used. This American designed dress has succeeded in making excellent use of bands of cross stitch embroidery.

The frock of navy blue poiret twill is trimmed wtih embroidery in three shades of blue. Bands reaching from blouse to hem in both front and back and a square collar of the same relieve the plain lines of the dress. The sleeves which are loose from elbow to wrist, have a band of the embroidery above the elbow instead of at the edge of the sleeve as is most usual. The frock is suitable for day-time wear at home or on the street.

A LUNCHEON DISH

BY BERTHA E. SHAPLEIGH,

Cooking Authority for NEA Service and Columbia University.

Eggs combined with a vegetable often makes a very good and much more satisfying dish than eggs or vegetables alone.

The following recipe calls for tomatoes, but egg plant or peppers are good served in the same way.

Allow one tomato and one egg to a person. This recipe is sufficient for six servings:

6 tomatoes.
6 eggs.
½ cup milk.
3 tablespoons butter.
½ teaspoon salt.
⅛ teaspoon pepper.
6 pieces bacon.

Wash, wipe and cut tomatoes in halves. Roll each half in salted flour, mixed with a teaspoon of sugar. Fry the bacon until crisp. Remove pieces and keep hot.

In the bacon fat remaining in pan cook the tomatoes until soft and nicely browned.

Mix the eggs, milk and seasonings. Melt the butter in a sauce pan and in it scramble the eggs. Remove from the fire when still quite soft as they will cook sufficiently hard after being placed on tomatoes.

On a platter place the pieces of tomato, pour over them the scrambled eggs and garnish with the crisp pieces of bacon. Serve at once.

(Cut this out and paste it in your cook book.)
