OF INTEREST TO WOMEN FOLK

Fine Showing Of Pictures

The annual exhibition of work done by the pupils of Miss Holt, are giving occasion for favorable comment among the art lovers of the city. The pictures may be seen at 10 Germain street, where they may be carefully studied this afternoon, the second day for the exhibit.

The space is limited, only 200 paintings and drawings being hung. The drawings are done in charcoal, and the paintings are in water color, all being declared to be quite up to the usual standard. The lack of facilities to make a good showing have not obscured the worth of the work shown, and St. John has reason to be very appreciative of the fact that such instruction can be given by one of her own daughters, and such results accomplished by those who come under her skilful and artistic direction.

The exhibition is free, and should be largely patronized, as an encouragement to the teacher and pupils, and as a source of real pleasure in the world of art, for a quiet hour.

Piano Recital Proved Pleasing

Three of the advanced pupils of Miss Muriel McIntyre showed great finesse in their rendering of difficult selections from Scarwenka, Godard, Durand Rachmanioff and other of the celebrated composers, in the piano recital given last evening in Queen Square church hall.

A well filled room showed the keen interest of leading musical lovers of the city, and all were warm in their praise of the performers and their faithful teacher, Miss McIntyre.

Those who so excelled themselves were Misses Roberta and Louise Smith, and Miss Jessie Kennedy, who were assisted by Miss Alice A. Vanwart, who read in her usual artistic manner, and was warmly applauded. Miss anwart is a graduate of the Acadia Seminary in Expression, and does great honor to her Alma Mater by her dainty and humorous rendition of selections peculiarly suited to her. She will always be welcomed on any programme where it may be the good fortune to secure her services.

YOUR JOB

By Elizabeth Arnold, Employment Expert

If you have never worked, do a little thinking before you start out to look for a job. What do you want to do? What are you best fitted to do?

Miss Arnold

Can you afford to wait for the ideal opening? If not, or if you do not know what you want to do remember that no one ever learned to swim standing on the shore. Take the best thing that offers. Any work well done, no matter how simple or monotonous, is good experience. It is only work done in a half-hearted way that get you nowhere.

Romance Long Way From Being Dead

Romance is not dead A few days ago a good-looking old fellow from Vermont came to the City and, much to the surprise of the friends, led a lady, who could easily count three-score summers to the altar and afterwards led her home The story is told in a very delightful fashion by several members of the "O.M. Society," who, since the event, have turned out their hope-chests and started to polish their brass trimmings and to calculate what damage the change of fashion has had upon its contents The couple referred to above may still be in the Province, so it will not do to mention their names, or even hint at their identity, but the writer has seen the joy upon their faces and knowing that they had not met for forty-five years, and had not heard from each other in that period, marvelled at the powers of Cupid and the events he was able to bring about in the month of June It appears, according to the story, that the groom, some forty odd years ago, left this Province and found a better-half, or took one with him and then settled in the Rocky State of Vermont. In the course of time his first wife died and his family was grown up, and it is thought he naturally turned to home, or the place he used to call home, and the girls he had left behind him. His present wife was a lassie in pigtails when he departed, but he evidently knew that she had outgrown that stage and probably had bobbed her hair and let it come to maturity again. At any rate he wrote her asking what his chances were, and was delighted to get a reply that he had better come and see. Then, of course, the inevitable happened and the Province was richer by a marriage license fee and the minister was richer by a wedding fee, and the Vermont man has got a splendid housekeeper and a good wife.

Miss Norma Fenton Guest At Dinner

Up to the last available moment, the friends of Miss Norma Fenton are vieing with each other, in showing her evidences of good-will by holding social gatherings in her honor.

Last evening. Mrs. Clifford McAvity was hostess to the bride-to-be at a dinner held at the Riverside Golf and Country Club. Covers were laid for fourteen, and a well-planned menu was served. The usual felicitous expressions, but none the less heartfelt for the new life she will soon enter upon, ended the happy gathering, when all returned to the city by motor.

This Poet Made By Nature's Aid

Matilda Fell, Bumped Her Head Talks Now in Rhyme, So 'Tis Said.

Harrington, June 26—The well-known quotation, "Poets are born, not made," is disproved! Witness the case of Miss Matilda Pinkhammer, of the Georgetown district, town of Harrington.

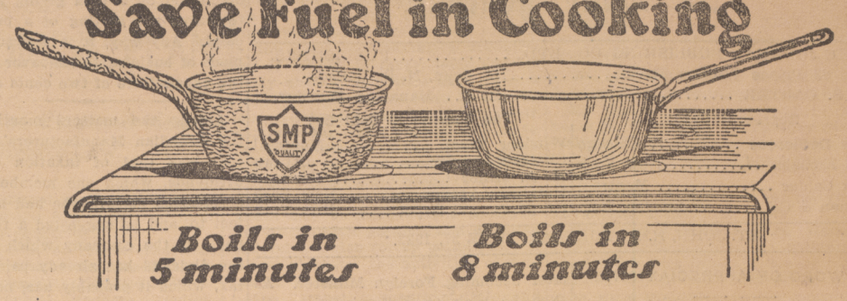

Some time last winter Miss Pinkhammer while bringing in a load of wood from the grove near her house, slipped on a piece of glare ice and fell, striking her head. Since that time all her speeches have been in verse. She speaks seldom, but when she does all her statements are in perfect meter and rhyme.

Miss Pinkhammer is very temperamental and of a retiring nature, but she consented to give her version of the accident, and its result, to be handed down to posterity. It is printed here for the first time:

"I was working here in the house, you know, and the fire kept getting kinder low. I notices this and I says, 'Matilda, go get some wood, the fire to build.' So off I starts and I goes to our grove where we always get the wood for our stove. I get some there that ain't too wet and then back to the house I set. I get started back all fine and nice when I steps on that infernal ice. My feet shoots out from under me and then a lot of stars I see. And ever since that gol-dinged time, everything I say's in rhyme. Folks say they wonder how I do it. But that's my story and I'll stick to it."

Some of the charming ingenuousness of the recital is lost here, but readers of the story cannot help but admire the ease and simplicity of Miss Pinkhammer's verses and wonder at the strange whim which caused Mother Nature to bestow this amazing gift upon an innocent country girl.

Save Fuel in Cooking

YOU don't buy a new cooking pot or pan every day, but you do buy fuel of some sort every day. Every day you are using up a certain amount of coal or wood or gas or electricity for cooking purposes. And fuel costs money these days! To save fuel use

SMP Diamond or Pearl WARE

"A Face of Porcelain and A Heart of Steel"

Diamond and Pearl Ware cooking utensils heat more quickly than utensils made all of metal, such as copper, brass or aluminum.

Try This Test

You can easily prove it. Take a small Diamond or Pearl Ware saucepan. Put in it a pint of cold water, set it on the hot stove—whether it be a coal, wood, oil, gas or electric range—and time how long it takes to come to a boil.

Do the same thing in the same size pan of brass, copper or aluminum. If the water boils in five minutes in the Diamond or Pearl Ware saucepan, it will take eight minutes—three minutes more—in the pan made of brass, copper or aluminum.

SMP "QUALITY" TRADE MARK

Do you know that a Diamond or Pearl Ware pot that sold for $1.50 last year, can be bought now for 90 cents?

Diamond and Pearl Ware Save Fuel

Why waste fuel on all-metal or other ware, when you can buy Diamond or Pearl kitchen utensils at to-day's reasonable prices? Why not try this timing experiment and satisfy yourself?

Diamond Ware is blue and white outside with a pure white lining and three coats of enamel.

Pearl Ware is grey and white with two coats of enamel.

THE DESTRUCTIVE FORCE OF SILENCE

"WE HAVE ADVERTISED a long while," said a manufacturer who wished to stop. "And have good will. That good will will last us for a long while. We don't need to add to it right now."

To some extent that is so. The flywheel goes on turning for a while after the power is shut off. But not for long. And when it stops it takes more power to start it, by six times, than it takes to keep it running.

One might almost as well say:

"We won't buy coal now that is so expensive, we will gradually chop up the plant and burn that in the furnace until coal is cheaper. And then we can rebuild the plant."

Good will is a fine thing to use.

But not a fine thing to use up.

Nothing is ever finished—done. Time is destructive. Stop building up and time starts tearing down. Some things last longer than others. But nothing lasts so very long. You think of your plant, for instance, as built. But it only stays built because you are painting and repairing and gradually but continually replacing it bit by bit.

Think how much more rapid the inevitable loss in a thing so intangible as familiarity — as reputation — as good will.

Out of sight, out of mind—not all in a minute but before so very long.

Advertisers who stop advertising expose the advertising structure, on which they have invested much money for many years, to elements quite as destructive and more rapid in their action than those which attack and disintegrate an unfinished, abandoned building.

In almost every community you will find the ruins of an ambitious but unfinished mansion — generally called Somebody's Folly.

Much money went into the work and then financial reverses stopped it all. And the winds blew and the rains descended and the sun warped the wood and the dampness rotted it, and rust and decay completed its ruin.

Now, an advertising structure, dependent on familiarity and reputation, can never be finished even to the extent that a building can be finished. We venture to say that never, in your most optimistic moments, have you felt that your advertising structure was finished and that it would shelter and protect your established business forever after.

No, you realize, when you stop to think, that the work of building must go on until the end of time.

Good will is a fine thing to use.

But not a fine thing to use up.

FRANCE FIXES ARMY TERM OF SERVICE AT 18 MONTHS

Andre Lefevre Fails to Obtain Sufficient Support for Proposal of Two Years.

Paris, June 26—By 340 votes against 253 the Chamber of Deputies has voted in favor of the paragraphs of the military law which fix at 18 months the duration of compulsory service in the French Army. Andre Lefevre, in a long discourse ,endeavored to rally the Chamber to two hours' service, but the found practically no supporters. Only nine deputies voted with him against 551. This is a significant and sufficient indication of the sentiments of the deputies. It was not the desire to increase the service that has made the Government's project uncertain. The opposition has been rather on the ground that the period should be reduced still further and by many flank attacks the bill has been put in peril.

Mr. Lefebvre was followed with sympathetic interest while speaking and was applauded when he endeavored to show that Germany was dangerous, but while this scheme is received with respect, there are few deputies who will act logically in this sense and place a greater military burden upon the country. The utter rout of the Lefevre proposals, combined with the contradictory encouragements of his alarmist speech, represents well the spirit of Parliament. There is often a great discrepancy between utterances and actions, and much in the attitude of France as depicted abroad is conventionalized.

M. Lefevre's justification for a demand of further sacrifices is that it would be folly to believe Germany crushed, diminished, ruined and disarmed. German banks and commercial houses possess dollars, pounds and francs in excess of their needs. A ship is launched at Hamburg every day. Exportations increase continually. Germany was organizing all kinds of associations which were really military in character. Sometimes they were called police, sometimes sport societies, sometimes brotherhoods of former combatants. He contended that disguised there were military preparations and that skillful camouflage concealed the desire for an eventual revanche.

M. Maginot, the War Minister, rejected theories, declaring that such great efforts could not be demanded of the country. Experts had decided that 18 months sufficed. Finally, the government proposals were accepted as to the period, though the other conditions remain to be discussed.
