EARLE SPICER
AT CENTENARY

Wonderful Soloist Thrilled Congregations Yesterday
Morning and Evening—
Leaving Today for Halifax,
Toronto and Europe.

Earle Spicer, who sang at Centenary Hall last Thursday evening and thrilled his audience with the melody and interpretation of such a variety of songs that his versatility seemed almost phenomenal, was the soloist at Centenary church yesterday morning and evening. It was also the anniversary of the church and large crowds were present on both occasions. In the evening the seating capacity of the church was taxed with an overflowing congregation which came to hear the famous baritone of the Maritime Provinces, "The Holy City" was the old favorite that was beautifully rendered in the morning, and "Fear ye not, O' Israel" was sung before the sermon of the pastor, Rev. R. G. Fulton in the evening, and "Beyond the Dawn" at the conclusion of the service. Though suffering from a very severe nasal cold, which restricted his freedom of delivery, somewhat, Mr. Spicer sang with fervor and spiritual interpretation, his voice ringing true and strong, with accompanying sweetness and soft intonation where required.

Mr. Spicer leaves this morning for Halifax, where he will sing and then proceed to Montreal and Toronto for return engagements, after which he will sail for Europe to fill his dates in England and France. He hopes to sing in Norway this trip, and is very enthusiastic over his hopes for a prosperous season among his many friends across the water.

MARRIAGE A LA MODE

The Persians sometimes resort to a queer method to test the state of a woman's feelings before suggesting matrimony.

The suitor will often inflict pain upon himself, such as burning his hand or face, in the presence of the woman he loves.

If she hastens to bind up his wounds with her silken scarf he takes it as a sign that she cares for him and declares his love.

Where shall we shop today?

We have many things to be thankful for today and one is that we can get such pretty afternoon frocks at Daniel's.

I saw a very handsome one there of black Canton. The waist of it is trimmed with pale gray allover Egyptian embroidery that is so in vogue nowadays and the straight, loose, rather short sleeves feature the open shoulder seam. The plain skirt is draped over the left hip and fastens with a cabochon of jet and steel beads with a little bead fringe hanging therefrom.

Then, there is another dress which has just arrived, not quite so elaborate, being made in a sort of tailored style with long tight sleeves. This one is of navy blue Roshanara crepe and is piped so tastefully with the new King's blue. The continuous panels both back and front are piped with it and the cuffs and front are finished with it, eyelet style. A pleasing feature is the new rolled collar which will indeed be welcome to those of you who do not care for the collarless dresses. The belt is narrow and of the same material.

By the way, this firm has lots of pleasant surprises at their big Annual November Drive. You'll find particulars of it in the advertisements.

Many have

ON YOUR HIP

It is said that prohibition brought the hip into prominence. But international fashions have done more. They have made it the smart starting point for drapery, over-paneling and pleats. And in order to draw still further attention to this hip style there is the cabochon. It may be of beads. Or embroidery. It may be a buckle—but serves to emphasize the folds, pleats and tucks that are used in the newswidest styles which give a smart flat effect front and back.

You might not think that this long-waisted style would influence a hem. But it does. Invariably it slips away from the regular straight hemline and does all sorts of delightful Bohemian things. Sometimes it extends to the ground, or when a panel is used bends in points, other times it flares. Whatever course it takes it remains true to smartness.

EXMOUTH CHURCH
MISSIONARY DAY

Programme of Special Services Yesterday—Illustrated Lecture for Children—Short Programme Carried Through in the Sunday School.

A program of special services were conducted in the Exmouth Street Methodist church yesterday. The choir was supplemented by the addition of a chorus of childish voices which added greatly to the beauty of the service. At the morning service the Pastor Rev. H. E. Thomas gave an illustrated lecture for the special benefit of the children. He took as his subject the Seven Cardinal Virtues, illustrating their meaning by means of the seven cardinal colors.

Yesterday was Missionary Day in the Sunday School. There was a short program which included a vocal duet by the Misses Mildred Bustin and Frances Withers, and a reading by Edna Crump. Mr. E. B. Thomas, superintendent of the Sunday School, gave a very interesting talk on the Missions, and the necessity of helping them in every possible way. There was a record attendance of 230 present. The subject for the evening service was "Do we need the Church." The pastor, Rev. H. E. Thomas was the speaker. He explained that the criticism leveled against the church at the present time was nothing new, it was always under fire, but there are many earnest men who realize that the work done by the church could not be accomplished by any other institution.

The answer to the question: Is the church needed? Is yes, for there is no other institution with the mission of the church, namely, of ministering to the soul-life of man. No college or secret society can take the place of the church and the world has been forced to realize that it's progress is dependant on spiritual forces. War did not prevent war and even the League of Nations did not produce peace, now all eyes are turned towards the Church of Christ. It produces love, justice and brotherhood by which alone ideal conditions can be established. The church is a place of common worship, and a field for the expression of a true Christian spirit.

Christ is the head and the church his body with eyes to see the suffering and ears to hear the cries of need. Hands to minister to the world's wants and feet to run on errands of mercy. The church is here to express the social sympathy of its great Head and to carry his battle against all evil.

This is an excellent meat substitute and it is also a very good way to use up cooked hominy. Mash well a cupful and a half of cold cooked hominy and add three-quarter of a cupful of grated cheese, salt and paprika to taste, one cupful of milk and two lightly beaten eggs. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven for 25 minutes.

You can well be glad there is to be no shortage of monkeys when you realize the decorative qualities of their fur, as produced in this chic Parisian costume.

To a bizarre costume of black and gold brocade is added not only cuffs and collar of monkey fur, but a hat profusely and effectively laden with it.

Many designers have tried to bring about the downfall of the straightline costume, but nothing supplants it in the esteem of the well-dressed woman.

Your Scarf

When you launder your wool scarf at home do not hang it on the line to dry, as this often pulls it out of shape. Stretch it out into its natural lines and dry between two towels.

You do not endeavor to create an atmosphere of sophistication by employing many foreign words and phrases in your conversation. This always bespeaks the poseur.
