Practical Welcome

And Mrs. A. L. Fleming have returned to the city, gladly welcomed in deed as well as word by their faithful congregation. A large number gathered at the station to greet their beloved rector and his wife, giving them a pleasant surprise and still further gladdening their hearts when they found a comfortable home, all in order, and a deliciously hot meal to cheer them after their long journey. They arrived on the Valley train yesterday at two o'clock in the afternoon, and were full of interesting anecdotes as to the sights they had viewed in the beautiful islands of Mull, Staffa and Iona, taking in the historical city of Edinburgh and some of the cathedral towns of England. They were in many other places, including the war zone, and there is no doubt a treat in store for the city, when Rev. Mr. Fleming gets his notes together and gives out his first in lecture form. After a happy voyage and safe journeying the pastor of Stone Church returns refreshed to carry on his work of loving service.

Among the numerous automobile parties registered in Fredericton recently, were the following from this city: Dr. and Mrs. A. P. Bagnall,

YOUR HEALTH

Loss of Appetite

There is an old saying that "appetite is the best sauce." When you look forward with pleasure to your meals and digest them without discomfort, you may be confident you are in pretty good condition.

On the contrary, loss of appetite, unless it appears only occasionally, and lasts but a little while, is an evidence of disease.

Doctors give this symptom a special name—"anorexia." This is only a Greek word, meaning "absence of appetite."

There are many causes for anorexia, but it may be put down as a fact that habitual absence of appetite is a sign of poor health. Some of the underlying conditions are trifling, but on the other hand, many of them are extremely serious.

The most common conditions with this symptom have to do with the stomach. Simple gastritis, that is, simple inflammation of the stomach, may have an occasional day when the appetite flags, but there may be many days when there is a normal demand for food.

But if the inflammation becomes chronic there may be constant loss of appetite. This is invariably the case in certain forms of cancer of the stomach. In that rare disease called "cirrhosis of the stomach," where there are hardening and thickening of the walls of the stomach, loss of appetite is a symptom.

Many young girls have anemia and absence of appetite is one of the signs. In tuberculosis at all ages it is noted.

In Bright's disease and in all forms of kidney inflammation it is met very frequently.

Excessive indulgence in tobacco, alcohol, opium and its derivatives and other drug addictions cause loss of desire for food.

There are various nervous conditions, attention must be given to the cause. It is not enough to prescribe a tonic. Of course, there are many useful tonics, but before they are taken the general health should be considered. They are important, but since the anorexia is merely a symptom it would be unscientific to disregard the fundamental cause.

Where loss of appetite follows a nervous disturbance, rest in bed, fresh air and quiet may help to repair the broken nerves and restore the appetite.

Mrs. Charles Miller of Douglas Ave. and Mr. Alfred Harvey, Sr. and Mrs. C. W. McKee, both parties being guests at the Barker House.

Mrs. Benn, of Waterloo Street, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Benn, of Douglasdown, near Chatham.

Mrs. Miller, manager of the Women's Club, Halifax, is the guest of Mrs. Barry, 25 Paddock Street. Mr. Francis Barry, who has been summing at Musquodocuit Harbor with Omar Gasteignay has returned home to resume his studies at High School.

Mr. H. L. McGowan, 92 Waterloo Street, who has recently passed a serious operation, is recovering rapidly, to the delight of his many friends and relations.

The Misses Isabel Dennett, Celestine Goddard, Helen B. Walker, niece of Dr. Thomas Walker, Princess St. and Dr. Dyart arrived from Newfoundland on Sunday evening, en route for the United States. They have been teaching along the west coast of the island, under the auspices of Dr. Grenfell's Mission and are much interested in the work of instructing the children, who they say are eager to take advantage of every opportunity for improvement and hard work. Very often the schools under the Mission are the only ones available for the children in that community. There was much excitement on the trip out, as the party reports a strike at Hikes Bay, the steamship "Home" carried them over, being detained. They left last evening for Boston.

Miss Grace Leavitt, who has been indisposed, on account of her strenuous labors for the work that is so dear to her heart, is slowly recovering and is able to go about as usual. She has been for many years a bulwark of strength in the organizations for women that have been fortunate enough to claim her attention. For years, Miss Leavitt was an officer in the Natural History Society, being secretary, and later President. In the Women's Local Council she has held the highest offices, and is still one of its honored executive members. For a long period this progressive woman actively supported the late Miss Mabel Peeters, when she worked almost single-handed to promote the Playgrounds movement, and though not in the society, Miss Leavitt is always interested in what it is doing and rejoices that the city has awakened to the possibilities that are now becoming thoroughly realized by many, who at one time, saw nothing but disaster in the expense they thought the work entailed. It was regrettable that Miss Leavitt could not be at the Exhibition this year, an active worker as in other years, but there is no cause to fear that she is lost to the endeavor of this city, with her indomitable will, healthy physique and womanly personality that never thinks of defeat.

THE TROUBLE.

"What's the trouble?"
"What happened?"
"Ma kept at him until she got him to teach her to drive the car."
"Well?"
"Now she is insisting on having the car to drive."

The Day Nursery Great Advantage

Helps Wage-Earning Mothers to Keep the Home Together—Substitute for Mothers' Pensions.

The obvious, one might say, the absolute duty of the mothers to care for their children; in the practice of life, it is almost impossible for the average woman to do so. Various reasons arise, making the necessity for wage-earning the only plain course for the mother, who may be widowed, deserted, or whose husband has been laid aside by accident or illness.

In the city of St. John today are mothers, who have high ideals for their little ones, and who are striving to keep homes together, but are forced to leave four or five children alone every day while they go forth to get the wherewithal to feed and clothe them. Some disorder takes place in their neighborhood, and perhaps the children are involved. The result is they are ordered to a Home, so-called and the mother is left broken hearted and discouraged.

Montreal has solved this problem to a certain extent, supplying the Crèche, a glowing example of which has been given during the last week at the Exhibition, through the efforts of the Red Cross. When carried on as a regular institution there is a small fee charged, fifty cents a week for each child, which may be ten days old, or ten years. The children are kept from eight in the morning until seven in the evening, and when they are old enough they are sent to a kindergarten that is nearby. The freed and the children, fed and given eighteen thousand three hundred and eighty-two days' care in 1921, with the very best of attention. Of course this is only a substitute for Mothers' Pensions, but that's another story.

Real Cause For Congratulation

The Misses LeTourneau and Helat Morgan left on Saturday evening for Montreal, where they will resume their respective duties as business women, the former as hostess of a fashionable ladies' club and the latter as agent for the Invictus Shoe Company.

Both young women were very pleased with St. John and those who met them could not but be pleased with their courteous manner and womanly demeanor. They were the leaders in the fashion show of the Exhibition that was under the direction of several of the leading merchants, immediately controlled by Mr. J. F. Nichol, and they have made a precedent that will be followed with eagerness another year, by still others. Nearly a of the best of the gowns, hats, coats and wraps have been sold since the exhibition, some of the merchants being obliged to re-stock in some of the select styles, where duplicate is possible. The accounts that have been in the Journal have attracted much attention, members of the staff being approached on Saturday by several inquirers from out-of-town, some from Nova Scotia, regarding the show, who were much disappointed that they had not arrived too late. The merchants that are receiving congratulations because of their far-seeing venture are: F. W. Daniel and Company, Ltd., Scoville Bros. Ltd., D. Magee's Sons, Ltd., H. Mont Jones, F. S. Thomas, Marr Millinery Co. Ltd., Waterbury and Rising, and F. A. Dykeman and Co., whose manager, Mr. J. F. Nichol was the guiding hand for the scheme, in which all took their share during the show.

RADIUM SILK AND CRÉPE

Of much importance in the development of semi-formal frocks is the contrast between blouse and skirt, though the material of one often trims some part of the other. Here the blouse of radium silk or large patterned design is usually long-waisted and attached to a skirt of charmeuse satin. The satin forms deep bands on the large, full sleeves and binds the slashed front and round neck. Medium size requires 2 1/2 yards 40-inch radium silk and 2 yards 40-inch charmeuse.

Red Cross Busy At Headquarters

Planning for Campaign—Mrs. Kuhring, Organizer, Has Had Most Satisfactory Trip.

The Red Cross, which was represented at the Exhibition by two of its most ardent workers, Miss Ethel Jarvis and Miss Jessie Lawson, is busy at its headquarters, 160 Prince William street, planning for the campaign that is being gradually brought to a successful issue by Mrs. Kuhring. This indefatigable organizer is now in Res- ton, and has just returned from a most satisfactory trip to Albert County, where she held meetings at Hillsboro and Riverside. Miss Jarvis reports that there were a good number of people who applied at their exhibition to find out their weight, and to consult about other matters. Miss Melkito, who is working with Dr. Roberts in the interests of Public Health, is acting also with the Red Cross, which has issued for September a bright little bulletin that is readable from the first letter to the last. This paper is edited by Mrs. H. Lawrence, Miss Jessie Lawson and Miss Ethel Jarvis, and the last number leaves no room for "I don't know," if carefully read. The questionnaire reveals the fact that no phase of suffering is unnoticed by this wonderful organization, and the answer to the last question states concisely what the purpose of the Red Cross is. As the greatest mother of all, the Red Cross, knowing neither race, creed, nor language, urges that for the sake of caring for humanity all will join the society whose motto is: "To serve for those who suffer."

MEETING BRUNSWICK CHAPTER, I. O. D. E.

A splendid meeting of Brunswick Chapter, I. O. D. E., was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Elliott, DeMonts street, West Side, the regent, Mrs. Herbert Wetmore, in the chair.

It was reported that at the closing of the city schools Mrs. Fenton, educational secretary, had presented prizes of books to the two grade eight classes in Albert school, and to grade seven in LaTour school. These were much appreciated by the children and teachers. Magazines had been sent to a soldier's family in the country, during the summer. The chapter are now collecting books for the orphans in the West Side Orphanage. The relief committee reported that several needy families had been assisted during the summer months. The sum of $25 was voted to the St. John Anti-Tuberculosis Society and plans were made for a Halloween tea and sale. The hostesses at the tea were Miss Jennie Clark, Mrs. Champelovier and Mrs. Elliott.

Rare Feast of Ensemble Music

Boston Symphony Orchestra Made Decided Impression With Large Audience at Imperial Theatre.

Harmony in sound, and harmony in color was the first thought of the interested audience that assembled in the Imperial Theatre last evening to assist in the celebration of its tenth birthday, and to enjoy the rare feast of ensemble music that was rendered by one of the most skilled groups of musicians that has ever graced a St. John stage. The Boston Symphony Orchestra needed no introduction after the first theme was introduced in the Overture, "Mignon," with its wonderful shading, its total quality and its sincere interpretation. From the grand Hungarian Rhapsody to the "Little Lead Soldier" there was a real earnestness of purpose, and one could see the humor of the musicians that joined in the simple encore as great men love to participate in the pleasures of childhood. The familiar selections from "Faust," "Sylvia" and "William Tell," gave opportunity for comparative criticism and the applause of the large and representative audience was all that the performers needed to assure them that they were giving a satisfying rendition. The Andante Cantabile by Tschalkowsky was most exquisite in its coloring and opportunity for the many parts to show their powers of solo work. The cello sang the haunting melody of the song and in the interludes of the piano gave a fine opportunity for the genius of the great master to appear. The violins sang their counter refrain and the flute, horn, oboe and all the parts made one grand melody that brought an encore that could not be denied, even when the grand finale the Rhapsody was in prospect. One account cannot do justice to all that was given to the people in the two short hours that Orpheus held his worshippers in thrall.

As is fitting on such an occasion, the place of assembly was in holiday trim, but this was no ordinary decoration that met the eye, filling it with artistic beauty, as the ear was also satisfied. The harmony of color is as marvellously demonstrated in the rose effect, that reached even the
