Who Can Reform Flappers? "I Can!" Says California Co-ed

Flapper prevention—that's the latest thing in reforms. Its object is to promote safe and sane freshmen for our colleges and universities. It is based on the theory you can't cure flapperism, once a victim has become inoculated with the germ, but you can prevent inoculation, if you work fast.

The campaign is not run by the typical reformer—aged and intolerant—But rather by Youth. By a club of girls at the University of California, headed by Lois Hatch.

"Name them while they are freshmen" is the slogan of the new reform party. So Miss Hatch and her co-workers are hatching up a scheme whereby flapperism will be made exceedingly unpopular at the university next year.

Each co-ed will be presented with a set of rules, warranted to be 100 per cent anti-flapper. Any hazing that is permitted will be turned in the direction of the flapper.

"We must educate it out of them," Miss Hatch points out. "Flapperism is absolutely opposed to good scholarship, good sportsmanship and to college ideals."

Which seems to indicate the flapper who contemplates attending the University of California will have to leave her pocket flask at home, beneath her collection of claret paraphernalia to her younger sister, put her hair up under a net, and pass up for a time the petting party—or her latest indulgence, the adventure party.

The adventure party, the flapper's latest contribution to social life, consists in dividing up any merry little party into couples who go forth in search of adventure.

This may mean they playfully rob a house or jauntily hold up a pedestrian or they may seek thrills in any manner that the locality suggests.

This new type of entertainment is hard on the hostess, for she may never be sure when some irrepressible guest may dynamite the place.

After this sort of thing it seems only fair to warn the reformers of the University of California that a nice quiet evening with Levy or even Horace and a bottle of milk and into bed by 10:30 does sound a little—well, tame.

However, the reformers have not overlooked this and they are planning a social programme for the year that will insure a good time for all, and the flapper type of entertainment will not be missed.

Work butter and sugar together until creamy. Add well beaten eggs, and beat thoroughly. Sift the flour with the baking powder; add to the butter and sugar mixture alternately with the milk—first a little milk, then a little flour, until all are used. Bake in well-buttered muffin or patty tins 20 minutes in a moderate oven. Will make 18 or 20.

A good rule to follow for baking is this: During the first quarter of the time the mixture should rise but not brown; the second quarter of time the mixture should continue to rise and begin to brown. The remainder of time the cake finishes baking.

This last half of the time allowed is the most critical. Up to that time the cake may be turned or moved without danger of falling. (Cut this out and paste it in your cook book.)

BEADS AND EMBROIDERY MIXED ON NEW FRENCH IMPORTS

Beads and embroidery used together decorate a great many of the French imports for summer. Evening and afternoon gowns alike show elaborate patterns. Although embroidery is seen without beads the reverse is never true.

Lingerie frocks are also trimmed with embroidery. One of the most charming dresses seen in the shops was of chiffon voile in rose color, embroidered in bright colors in a darning stitch pattern.

White, embroidered with bright-colored peasant motifs, seems to be especially popular and hats, embroidered, are shown to match the dresses.

pleasant visit in her former home in Westport, Pictou County, N. S. Mrs. Hicks will spend several weeks in the city, a guest of her daughter.

S., for the best essay by a grade 5 pupil on "Patriotism and Citizenship." A Windsor paper says the essay was particularly good, indicating thought and study, and best of all loyalty. The little lady also led the school in marks.

UNUSUAL FOLK

MARRIAGE A LA MODE

Women in America fight for equal political rights, but Misscovite women would be glad for equal rights to live.

In their country, among the barbarous tribes, the man may administer whatever correction he thinks his wife needs, however brutal it may be.

He may even torture her to death without being subject to punishment for murder.

These wonderful little adventurers are conducted by Mrs. Olive Roberts Barton, who has led them through strange places in many parts of the world.

Starting today, you will find Nancy and Nick every day in The Daily Journal, under the title of "Adventures of the Twins."

Playgrounds For Children Opened
Weather Unpleasant, But Where a Room Was Provided Plans Were Set in Motion.

Playgrounds for the children were opened formally yesterday, the general superintendent, Miss Emma I. Heffer, making a supervisory tour.

The weather made the afternoon very unpleasant, but where there was a room provided, plans for handicraft were set in motion, and all were glad to know that a few days would give the opportunity for all the joys of the swings, giant strides, sand piles, teeter-totters and the many games that will be introduced by the very efficient play leaders who are some of them under-graduates of schools of physical instruction, or of the larger colleges, such as McGill, U. N. B., where these courses are now a part of the curriculum, brought about through the urgency of the Committee for National Recreation, of the National Council of Women, of Canada.

West Side Largest
The West Side is generally the one with the largest attendance throughout the summer. The facilities for play being well provided for, so far as outdoor apparatus is concerned, and this year it will again have the use of a room in the City Hall, which will give better opportunities for the carrying on of the handicraft, which has been greatly enhanced, by the introduction of millinery, which will be a leading feature of that part of the summer's work.

Capt. A. J. Mulcahy is as interested as ever in overseeing the doings of the children, and visions of candy treats, earned by running races, and many other happy experiences, loomed before the young folks who will be introduced by the very efficient play leaders who are some of them under-graduates of schools of physical instruction, or of the larger colleges, such as McGill, U. N. B., where these courses are now a part of the curriculum, brought about through the urgency of the Committee for National Recreation, of the National Council of Women, of Canada.

The apparatus is not in order, on any of the grounds, but will be all set up in a few days. If the weather permits, several repairs have to be made to slides and other apparatus, and some renewals will be necessary. It might be well to state that the East End ground will be used instead of the school ground of the Aberdeen, as the equipment is far better on the new site, and the rest house there makes it possible for the children to carry on their handicraft and store their materials, as was not possible, heretofore. Miss Heffer deserves great credit for the improvement she has brought about in the work of all the activities of the Playgrounds Association, and for the unifying of the work as a whole, which has given it a strength and prestige it could never have attained, without the co-operation she has made possible between play leaders and children. Eight hundred children attended altogether in all the grounds.

Among the motor parties arriving in the city yesterday was one from Sydney, and included Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Dobson, Miss Ruth Richardson, C. D. Dobson, H. R. Dobson and R. Longin. The party registered at the Victoria.

WHILE OTHERS SEEK HIS HAND SHE TEACHES THE PRINCE BILLIARDS

Has Lady Rocksavage, sister of Sir Philip Sassoon, unintentionally won the heart of the much sought Prince of Wales while generously serving as his instructor in billiards and tennis? Leaders in the titled social circles of Great Britain are wondering. While almost dozens of other titled misses have been brought into the society of the prince in the hope that they might win his eye, Lady Rocksavage, noted as a brilliant billiardist, tennis expert and crack shot, has spent much time in the prince's company.

HOSTESS TO HOME NURSING CLASS

Miss Alicia Heales, Wright Street, was hostess to the Home Nursing Class last week at her home, when several hours were spent in the practice of bandaging, preparatory to the examination, which was held the following evening, and which was so successful to a class of the candidates out of a class of eighteen. Miss Agnes Warner of the St. John Ambulance Association was in charge, and on the evening at Miss Neales' home was assisted by Miss Nellie Burdette in the bandaging contest, to give the candidates their final trial.

Delicious refreshments were served by the gracious hostess, and the guests were very appreciative of the hospitality, which gave the privilege of such useful entertainment.

FAIRVILLE NOTES
Considerable repair work is being done on the streets in Fairville. Some were in rather bad condition, but under the supervision of Thomas Chittick, who is employing quite a number of men, the streets are rapidly being put in good shape.

J. Stout, who recently lost his store in Main street, through a fire, is rebuilding on the same site. Although the value of the property and merchandise was only partly covered by insurance, and Mr. Stout's loss was heavy, his building a larger and better equipped store than that destroyed, Mr. Perry Kelly, of Fairville, is the contractor. Mr. Stout intends occupying the building as soon as completed and will carry on his old business.

WOULD YOU WED YOUR FIANCE IF HE WERE MAIMED?

BY GENE COHN.
San Francisco, July 2.—Her husband-to-be was maimed for life on the eve of their wedding.

Immediately there flashed into her mind the question thousands have asked: "What should I do?"

"There is but one thing to do—marry just the same," flatly announces Mary Josephine Carroll. "There is no time for philosophizing or questioning. There is time only for definite action."

"The woman must become the man-of-the-house."

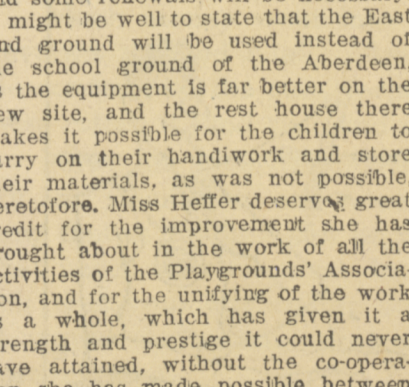

"She must remind herself that had this happened after marriage it would not have separated them; rather it would have drawn them more closely together."

"She must become the helpmeet. Had nothing happened she would have expected her husband to support her and care for her throughout life under all circumstances."

"She must get out to work and provide for both. Such accidents of fate cannot and should not affect love."

"She must tell herself that had the situation been reversed he would have married her."

Miss Carroll was engaged to marry Michael C. Browne. He was a conductor. But a few days before the date set for the wedding Browne suffered loss of both legs in an accident.
