Disappointments.

"This world is all a fleeting show,
For man's illusion given."

Life seems to be made up of a constant stream of disappointments, only a short respite being afforded by the idea of a general election, which seemed to be inevitable. In some constituencies this seemed so certain that extensive preparations were made in anticipation of that exciting event. Now, we have to put up with the chagrin of a severe disappointment, and hope for better things in the future. The government seem to belong to the "die-hards," and will not give up the ghost as long as they can retain power. Perhaps they have a few more of their favourites to pension off; and a few more to pop into their places. We have long been of opinion that parliamentary men in official positions, have a following of satellites, or parasites, who have to be 'pitchforked' into some office, where the emoluments are far in excess of the brain power required to carry out the duties of the position. We hope soon to have a change, and to see the "Official Broom" sweep away a lot of these sinecures; and let the revenue be economised, so that the tariff may be lowered to the manifest advantage of the people.

pointment. We had been wagging our ears over a promised local law case, over a sum of borrowed money; and we confidently expected to listen to some very brilliant orations from H. Stockford, B.F. and other talented luminaries of the law. However, we were dished out of that little excitement by the parties settling out of court, the defendant declining to show fight.

Marriage in High Life.

We hear that a wedding in high life is soon to take place at Highlands. They say: that Robinson Crusoe, is about to despoil "Maggie Murphy's home" by taking the poor widow's solitary ewe lamb away to his desert island; no, not that, but to "Fresh fields and pastures new."

The Russians say: "Before going to war, say a prayer; before going to sea, say two prayers; before marrying, say three prayers."

A Splendid Cure for Influenza.

In Truth some years ago this prescription for the cure and prevention of Influenza appeared. Such wit and wisdom one would not willingly let die.

RETROSPECT of the MONTH.

The past month has not been fruitful in great events, nothing of an exciting nature has occurred to disturb the even tenor of our ways. The month which came in very mild and lamb-like, in the latter half, made up for all the mildness of its first few days; and strong polar gales have taught us to realise what March winds really are. The snow has begun to slowly disappear, the crows,—first harbingers of spring in this country—have returned to their customary summer haunts, and other small birds "Of the wandering wing" have appeared on the scene. The buds on the early leafing trees have begun to burst their capsules, and signs of spring are showing around on all sides. We have heard of (but not seen) young lambs, and hope to be able in our next, to chronicle the arrival of a genial and early spring.

In the Land o' the Leal they have had an irreparable loss, in the death of that cordial old gentleman, Professor John Stuart Blackie, in his eighty-fifth year, he will be long remembered by all Gaelic scholars and his loss has created a void that will be difficult to fill. Punch has a kindly memento of him as follows:

How much of night with thee's departed!
Philosopher—yet full of fun,
Great humourist—yet human hearted;
A Caledonian—yet not dour,
A scholar—yet not dry-as-dusty;
A pictist—yet never sour!
O, stout and tender, true and trusty
Octogenarian optimist.
The world for thee seemed aye more sunny!
We loved the better for each twist
Which streaked a soul as sweet as honey.
We shall not see thy like again!
We've fallen on times most queer & quacky,
And oft shall miss the healthy brain
And manly heart of brave old Blackie!
