C. E. SULIS'

Spanish Lustral,

OR GREAT HAIR RESTORER,

Not to be equalled in the whole World as a

Hair Dressing Preparation.

IT is warranted to prevent the Hair from falling, and to promote a rapid growth on Bald Heads.

The Proprietor's fame and his discoveries have gone abroad, and to-day he is, in his line, the largest Manufacturer in British North America. Youth and Old Age are alike benefitted by the use of C. E. SULIS' Spanish Lustral, or Great Hair Restorer and Hair Dressing Preparation. They act directly on the Roots of the Hair, causing a luxuriant growth and great beauty. Dandruff removed at once and for ever prevented. The most delightful fragrance is imparted to the Hair. If you wish to restore your Hair as in youth, and retain it through life, call at once and without delay, at C. E. SULIS' Establishment, No. 3, Regent Street, near Queen Street.

P. S.—Put up and sold by C. E. Sulis' Hair Dresser, Fredericton, N. B.

☞ None genuine without his Signature.

PUBLIC SALE.

TO be sold at PUBLIC AUCTION, on MONDAY, the 18th day of June next, at twelve o'clock, noon, at the Weigh Scales, in front of the County Court House, in the City of Fredericton, in the County of York, under the direction and with the approbation of the undersigned, pursuant to a Decree of the Supreme Court in Equity, in a certain cause wherein Abraham Wood, Jr., Gehardus Clowes Carman, Sr., Eliza Valeria Carman, and Gehardus Clowes Carman, Jr., are plaintiffs; and Odber M. Carman, Richard Carman, Samuel J. Carman, George F. Estey, Joseph P. Kierstead and Wm. Jaffrey, are defendants.—

The following lands and premises, situate in the Parish of St. Mary's, in the County of York, bounded on the front by the river St. John, on the rear by ungranted lands, on the lower side by the Sunbury County line, and on the upper side by lands owned by James S. Wisely and John C. Wisely, in three separate lots or portions.

1st. The first lot or portion to consist of the lands, rights and privileges, known as the Mill property, described and distiuguished as follows:—A piece of land containing about one acre and a half, on which the Mill now stands, fronting on the river St. John, and bounded on the upper side by land owned by James S. Wisely and John C. Wisely, and extending from thence along the bank of the river about thirty rods, and back towards the highway road a sufficient number of rods, more or less, so as to include the said one acre and half, together with a right of way not exceeding one rod in width to and from the said piece of land, along the lower line of the said James S. Wisley and John C. Wisely's land, to the highway road leading through the Parish of Maugerville; and also the right and privilege reserved by the said Odber M. Carman and Samuel J. Carman, of ratting and securing logs on the shore front, of the land conveyed by them to the said James S. Wisely and John C. Wisely; also a piece of land on the North side of the said highway, near the said Mill, measuring in front on the said highway, about eighteen rods and extending back therefrom a sufficient distance to include two acres.

2nd The second piece or portion to consist of the lot or portion of land lying between Richard and Odber Carman's front line and the River St. John.

3rd The third lot or portion to consist of the lot or portion lying between Richard and Odber Carman's front line, and the rear of the said third portion, together with all the buildings thereon and appurtenances to the same belonging.

☞ For terms and further particulars, apply to the undersigned.

Dated this 12th day March, A. D. 1866.

GOOD NEWS
TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

The Latest and most Valuable Discovery of the age!

Windows Cleaned without Soap or Water, Time or Labor, by using the Instantaneous Window Polish.

THE attention of the public is invited to this new and valuable preparation for cleaning all kinds of glass, whether in Windows or in the form of ware. Its action upon that material is astonishing, and seems more like the working of magic than reality. It does away with soap suds or hot water, thus avoiding the slops upon the floor or adjoining paint, and the disagreeable sensation of the water running down on the arms, under the sleeves, and wetting them to the shoulders. It leaves no lint upon the glass, and gives it a more transparent and clearer appearance than can be got with ten times the amount of labor and time in washing.

For polishing Mirrors or any kind of Silver, Brass, or Tin ware, it has no equal, imparting to the metals, almost instantly, and with but very little rubbing, a peculiar brilliant and beautiful lustre. For sale by

ORATION,

DELIVERED AT THE ENCŒNIA,

IN THE

UNIVERSITY OF NEW BRUNSWICK,

June 28th, 1866,

BY J. MARSHALL d'AVRAY,

Professor of Modern Science and Literature.

"Difficile est proprie communia dicere."

Nearly two thousand years have elapsed since Horace wrote these words, and many and various have been the readings they have received. They are as true to-day as they were then, and so great is the difficulty which I now experience in penning the fortieth oration in praise of the Founders and Benefactors of this University, that "Difficile est proprie communia dicere" may, I think, be freely and correctly translated "How difficult it is to say anything new or interesting on a subject that has so frequently been handled so eloquently and so well by my predecessors." But the duty which this day devolves upon me has been expressly assigned by the statutes of the University, and no excuse can be found for its omission; all that I have to do therefore is to crave your indulgence at the outset, and to discharge my task to the best of my ability.

Some years ago, on a similar occasion, I had to express my deep regret that the apathy and indifference of those whose duty it was to foster and encourage Collegiate education in this Province, had so long exerted a baneful influence on the minds of parents, and deterred them from permitting their sons to avail themselves of its advantages. I said, "The University of King's College is a necessity—an institution, the existence of which is indispensable to the character of the Province, and clearly due to the rights and interests of those who are wisely aware that they but half do their duty to their children, whatever amount of wealth they may accumulate for them, if they deny them a superior education. The most unblushing apostle of ignorance that ever illustrated bad theory by worse practice, will not presume to state openly that because he has secured wealth and social position in spite of his defective education, he would have the young intellect of New Brunswick untrained and untaught; he will not venture to say this directly, but how many act as though they entertained these sentiments and utterly neglect the opportunities afforded them of securing the blessings within their reach? Let me hope that all the influence of an intelligent and patriotic Government will henceforth be exerted in behalf of this College, so as to induce the many instead of the few to profit by its resources. In order to effect this, the first step must be to disabuse the public mind on many points upon which it has been sedulously misinformed, to instruct it on those of which it is ignorant, and to re-assure it on such as it has a right to demand as guarantees for the proper training and instruction of the students."

All this has been effected. The apathy and indifference of which I complained have been succeeded by the most encouraging support; men of wide and noble views have taken active part in advocating the claims of this University upon the favorable consideration of the public—its real merits have been proclaimed, the educational advantages it possesses clearly set forth, and the result has been in every way most satisfactory. Men's minds have been disabused, and they are now become deeply impressed with the true value of the instruction it affords, and are anxious to secure it for their children. Awakening to a sense of their own deficiencies, they no longer neglect the means within their power of guarding their offspring against the evils which spring from them; they feel that education, in its highest and best sense, can be acquired only by their own individual exertions, that it is their proper duty, their individual right so to obtain it, and that though a Government may bring power to bear upon the work, and may do so with the precision and unity of a single mind, yet if it cannot secure the co-operation of the people themselves, all its power will be weakness, and all its unity of purpose utterly unavailing. "No great moral or economical change in the state of a country," says Dr Chalmers, "is the achievement of a single arm,—it is the achievement of many, and though a single man walking in the loftiness of his heart, might like to engross all the fame of it, it will remain an impotent speculation unless thousands come forward to share amongst them all the fatigue of it. It was by successive strokes of the pick-axe and the chisel that the Pyramids of Egypt were reared; and great must be the company of the workmen and limited the task which each must perform, ere there will be made to ascend the edifice of a nation's work and a nation's true greatness." But while so much has been done thus to promote the cause of education without these walls, let it not be thought that the solemn duty which this institution owes to the public has for a moment been lost sight of. The authorities have felt that education, to operate beneficially, had to take a more practical direction than it had hitherto done; that the education required by the people of this Province is that which will give them a full command of every faculty both of mind and body, which will call into play their habits of observation and reflection, which will make thinking and reasoning beings of mere creatures of impulse, prejudice, and passion; which, in a moral sense, will give them objects of pursuit, and habits of conduct, favorable to their own happiness and to that of the community of which they form part; which, by multiplying the means of rational and intellectual enjoyment, will diminish the temptation of vice; which, in the social relations of life, and as connected with objects of legislation, will teach them the identity of the individual with the general interest, while in the physical sciences it will make them masters of the secrets of nature, and give them powers which even now tend to elevate the moderns to a higher rank than that of the demi-gods of antiquity. That all this, and more, should be embraced in that scheme of education which it would be glorious for them to devise, which it would be so beneficial for the people to receive, and they have labored assiduously for the attainment of an object thus comprehensive in its character, and leading to results the practical benefit of which it is almost impossible for even the imagination to exaggerate. That this is no mere Utopian dream has been proved by the success which has attended their efforts since the re-organization of the University. The number of students has increased, and will, I am confident, continue to increase, because as every graduate who leaves these walls must, even though unconsciously, benefit the circle in which he moves, so will he both by precept and example aid powerfully and continually in inspiring others with that sense of the value, and that desire for the distinction of a College education, which alone are required to render the University as numerically prosperous as even the most sanguine of its patrons can desire.

And on this point I can confidently appeal to the past to justify the hopes which I entertain for the future. The graduates of the University of New Brunswick are no unworthy sons of their Alma Mater; they feel how great is the debt of gratitude they owe her, and they nobly strive to discharge it in after life. Every profession now numbers in its ranks—and in no ignoble station in those ranks—young men who have received that education within these walls which has enabled them not only to compete, but to compete successfully, with the scholars of some of the Universities at home, to enter the lists with numerous competitors, and to bear off the palm, magna cum laude? and who can for a moment doubt that those who have so distinguished themselves, who have by their attainments and by their conduct obtained from the University of Edinburgh an official recognition of the status of graduates of the University of New Brunswick, so that they will henceforth be allowed to enter the Medical Halls in Edinburgh without being subject to any preliminary examination; who, I say, can for an instant doubt that every one of these will, in his sphere, serve not only as a standard of Language, Morals, and Manners, but as a pattern and inciter to liberal studies.

And here I will pause for a moment, and for the benefit of those who may want information on the subject, I will briefly describe the course of study which has led to such flattering results. In the first place, addressing a few words to parents, and to those who have the training of the boy before he enters upon the broader field of instruction which here lies open before him. To educate, according to my interpretation of the term, signifies to fit a man for the right performance of his duties in life; to lead him from his primitive state of utter ignorance to a knowledge of such things as it may be necessary for him to be acquainted with in that station into which he is born, or out of which, by the exercise of uncommon natural abilities, of extraordinary energy and perseverance, he hopes to rise. And here, it must be understood, that education commences in the cradle, and that the impressions made upon the virgin tablets of the mind, be they good or be they evil, even at the earliest age, are often ineffaceable; and next, that education in the domestic circle, which is too often considered as no part of education at all, is in fact of the utmost importance to the future prosperity of the boy if properly conducted,
