

Violations Of The Sunday Closing Law Are Discussed

Amherst Council Criticizes Government For Slowness in Prosecuting.

Slowness of the Attorney-General's Department in permitting prosecution of Amherst stores that were evading the Sunday closing law, was openly criticized by Councillors E. T. Hunter and James Hogan at Amherst last week at the regular meeting of the town council after recorder A. G. MacKenzie had explained that it was necessary to secure permission from the department before prosecutions could be started.

Councillor MacDonald took some exception to the attitude of the council in enforcing this law as he felt that there was no more harm in selling bread, milk and groceries than in selling five gallons of gasoline on Sunday.

In postponing another meeting from Monday to Thursday night, Mayor C. H. Read brought criticism from Councillors J. M. Hogan and R. M. MacLean, two members of the Relief Committee who hold their weekly meetings on Thursday night. The councillors were of the opinion that Mayor Read should have consulted Council before setting the date of the meeting that he postponed on account of illness.

Mayor Read delivered an exhaustive report upon the Mayor's conference which he attended in Montreal. He referred to conditions in other towns and cities throughout and stated that it was generally felt that the Federal Government should assume the burden and responsibility of taking care of the relief burden.
