

All Qualified Voters Should Exercise Franchise In Election

It Is a Patriotic Duty Of All Citizens To Vote Not Only In Federal But In All Provincial Elections

Within the next three months Canadians will go to the polls in one of the most important federal general elections in the history of this Dominion. Remember this: Only the votes actually recorded can be counted; and only those Canadians whose names are on the Voter's List will be allowed to record their votes.

First of all, make sure you are on the Voter's List. Then make sure that you get to the polls, mark your ballot accurately, deposit it according to the simple rules laid down.

Revision of the Voters' List will continue until June 29. After that nothing can be done to save your franchise. If you are not already on the list, spare no time or effort to correct the omission. Act now. In a few days it will be too late.

And, once you have made sure of your franchise—use it. There are certain individuals among the electorate who are either indifferent, or just plain lazy, about going to the polls. They excuse their inertia by shallow opinions, based upon loose thinking to the effect that politics is rotten, anyway, that there is no difference between the parties, that one vote more or less doesn't matter; all of them poor pretexts for a lack of patriotic citizenship.

Parliament is the dynamo that generates the power that runs the country. The men the voters send to Parliament are the men upon whom the future of Canada, for good or evil, depends. Especially in difficult times such as the depression period from which we are now happily emerging the quality of the men who sit in the House of Commons at Ottawa is a matter of vital importance to every Canadian.

Study the record of the Government. Examine the platform and the proposals of the Opposition. Then act as your conscience and your judgment direct your mind.

But be sure to vote. To refrain from voting in this 1935 election comes pretty close to being rank disloyalty to your country, is in plain fact, treachery to yourself.

Fine Record of The Government Is Campaign Base

The political campaign in New Brunswick is swinging into its last week. Both sides are active and the people of the province are being given the ideas of all candidates. The candidates for the Government party are being given attentive hearings and meetings are well attended. In many places the halls have not been large enough to accommodate those wishing to hear the Government speakers.

The Government party is basing its appeal chiefly on the fine record of the Government during the last two years, when there has been a vast improvement in many lines of industry, which have been assisted by Government action. Fair wages have been provided for those working in the woods and those engaged on highways and bridges. In the case of those working in the woods the minimum wage was fixed at $32 for skilled workers.

SOME INSTRUCTIONS FOR THOSE VOTING

Some of the instructions issued for those voting on June 27, should be known to all voters. Any person is entitled to vote whose name is on the voters' list in the hands of the officer presiding at the poll in which the voter is entitled to vote. Any person whose name was on the voters' list for the previous year, but has been omitted from the current year's list, if he obtain from the County Secretary a certificate that he is entitled to vote, which certificate must be presented to the presiding officer when he applies for his envelope in the polling booth.

Where a female voter has been married, and she is on the voters' list in her maiden name, the fact that her married name has not been placed on the voters' list shall not disqualify her from voting.

While the polling is going on, not more than one voter at a time shall be allowed to enter the room where the voting is taking place. On entering the voter will state his name to the presiding officer, and the poll clerk will then ascertain whether such person's name is on the list and therefore entitled to vote, or if not on the list, that he has a certificate furnished him by the returning officer. When the identity of the party and his or her right to vote is established, the presiding officer will give the voter an envelope, on the back of which such officer has placed his initials in black ink in the presence of the voter. The voter must then go behind the screen, and place a ballot in the envelope which the presiding officer gave him, and then bring it back to such officer, who when he has ascertained that it is the same envelope that he gave the voter, he shall then in the presence of the voter, place such envelope containing the ballot in the ballot box. The voter must in every case, go behind the screened compartment before placing his ballot in the envelope, otherwise the presiding officer cannot receive it.

The voter on receiving his envelope shall vote without undue delay, and shall leave the polling station as soon as the envelope containing his ballot has been deposited in the ballot box.

In counting the votes the presiding officer shall reject all ballot papers—when more than one is found in an envelope; any which are in envelopes not supplied by him, or when votes are given to more candidates than are to be elected; any ballot upon which there is any mark by which the voter could be identified; provided, however, that no ballot paper shall be rejected on account of the name of any candidate being struck off or written thereon.

Voters should cast their ballots as early as possible and every qualified person should vote.

MINUTE MARVELS

A slide of microscopic size on which was inscribed the Lord's Prayer, occupying the four-thousandth part of a square inch, with the Creed in an equally small space, was sold the other day in London.

In the Bodleian Library at Oxford there is the smallest book in existence, the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam. It measures no more than three-quarters of an inch in height and three-sixteenths of an inch in width. It contains 34 pages, and the size of the text on each page is 3-32 inches in height and 5-32 inches in width. It weighs a grain and a half, and is bound in crimson morocco. The setting up of the type was so delicate a matter that it had to be done at night when road traffic and office machinery had ceased.

Before this miniature marvel a Dutch book claimed precedence. It was printed in 1674, entitled "The Court of Flowers." It contains 49 pages printed from movable type, and is one-fourth the size of an English postage stamp.

Returns to Throne

Four and a half years after her seizure of Manchuria and a little more than a year since HENRY PU YI (above) was proclaimed Emperor of Manchoukuo, Japan appears ready to put the former "boy emperor" of China back on the dragon throne in Peiping.
