

PORTS CORNER.

FROM THE LADIES' LITERARY CABINET.
The lovers of sentiment cannot but feel tenderly affected on perusing the following lines. They were dictated to an Amantiss by a Lady, on her death bed, and addressed to her Husband who was at a distance from her.

"Thou who dost all my worldly thoughts employ,
Thou pleasant source of all my earthly joy;
Thou tend'rest husband, and thou dearest friend,
To thee, this last, this final adieu, I send.
At length all-conquering Death asserts his right,
And will forever veil me from thy sight.
He robs me to him, with a cheerful grace,
And not one terror clouds his awful face.
He promises a lasting rest from pain,
And shows that all life's fleeting joys are vain;
Th' eternal scenes of Heaven are in my view,
And tell me that no other joys are true:
But love! fond love! would I could resist his pow'r,
And faint awhile to defer the parting hour.
He brings thy sleeping image to my sight,
And stirs my passage to the realms of light.
But say, thou dearest, thou unweary'd friend!
Say, shouldst thou grieve to see my sorrows end?
Thou knowest a painful pilgrimage I've past,
And wouldst thou mourn that rest is come at last?
Rather rejoice to see me shake off life,
And die as I have liv'd thy faithful Wife."
