Spheroidal Spectacles
AND BYE GLASSES
ARE the best for the preservation of the sight, and took the medal at the Centennial Exhibition.
The lenses are made of the best material, uniform in density, and of high refractive power, their perfect light and spheroidal shape adapt them to ease and improve the sight of the wearer. The eye being the most delicate organ, great care should be exercised in selecting spectacles; it is not enough that the glass be of the right focus, but the lenses must be perfectly centered and in many cases perfect relief is only given by having each eye fitted separately. To effect this the lenses are made interchangeable, and having an Optometer to measure the sight, a perfect fit is guaranteed.
Call and examine before purchasing any other kind.

IVANHOE.
(BY SIR WALTER SCOTT, BART.)
CHAPTER V.

It is impossible for language to describe the bitter scowl of rage which rendered yet darker the swarthy countenance of the Templar. In the extremity of his resentment and confusion his quivering fingers gripped toward the handle of his sword, and perhaps only withdrew, from the consciousness that no act of violence could be safely executed in that place and presence. Cedric, whose feelings were always of a right onward and simple kind, and were seldom occupied by more than one object at once, omitted, in the joyous glee with which he heard of the glory of his countrymen, to remark the angry confusion of his guest. "I would give thee this golden bracelet, Pilgrim," he said, "couldst thou tell me the names of those knights who upheld so gallantly the renown of merry England."

"That will I do blithely," replied the Pilgrim, "and without grudging; my oath, for a time, prohibits me from touching gold."
"I will wear the bracelet for you, if you will, friend Palmer," said Wamba.
"The first in honor as in arms, in renown as in place," said the Pilgrim, "was the brave Richard, King of England."
"I forgive him," said Cedric; "I forgive him his descent from the tyrant Duke William."
"The Earl of Leicester was the second," continued the Pilgrim; "Sir Thomas Mutton of Gilsland was the third."
"Of Saxon descent, he at least," said Cedric, with exultation.
"Sir Fouke Doolly, the fourth," proceeded the Pilgrim.
"Saxon also, at least by the mother's side," continued Cedric, who listened with the utmost eagerness, and forgot, in part at least, his hatred to the Normans, in the common triumph of the king of England and his islanders.
"And who was the fifth?" he demanded.
"The fifth was Sir Edward Turneham."
"Genuine Saxon, by the soul of Henzist!" shouted Cedric—"And the sixth?" he continued with eagerness—"how name you the sixth?"
"The sixth," said the Palmer, after a pause, in which he seemed to recollect himself, "was a young knight of lesser renown and lower rank, assumed into that honorable company, less to aid their enterprise than to make up their number—his name dwells not in my memory."
"Sir Palmer," said Sir Brian de Bois Guilbert scornfully, "this assumed forgetfulness, after so much has been remembered, comes too late to serve your purpose. I will myself tell the name of the knight before whose lance fortune and my horse's fault occasioned my falling—it was the Knight of Ivanhoe; nor was there one of the six that, for his years had more renown in arms. Yet this will I say, and loudly—that were he in England, and dark repeat, in this week's tournament, the challenge of St. John-de-Acre, I mounted and armed as I now am, would give him every advantage of weapons, and abide the result."
"Your challenge would be soon answered," replied the Palmer, "were your antagonist near you. As the matter is, disturb not the peaceful hall with vaunts of the issue of a conflict, which you well know cannot take place. If Ivanhoe ever returns from Palestine, I will be his surety that he meets you."
"A good security!" said the Knight Templar; "and what do you proffer as a pledge?"
"This reliquary," said the Palmer, taking a small ivory box from his bosom, and crossing himself, "containing a portion of the true cross brought from the Monastery of Mount Carmel."
The Prior of Jorvaux crossed himself and adored a pater noster, in which all devoutly joined, excepting
