Local Matters.

Odd Fellow's Fair.

The climax of preparations was reached on Wednesday afternoon: the Bazaar opened—The band passed through the street enveloped in a cloud of dust playing its music, and hundreds of little boys both barefoot and shod ran whooping after the cavalcade. And as they passed, the organ-grinder forgot to "turn,"and those two pesky Italians allowed the harp—"that once through Tara,s Hall—&c," and that doleful violin to breathe. Small dogs barked furiously, instigated to deeds of violence, but too often, by small boys. At the Palace those interested in the laudable object of the Bazaar were deeply engaged at their various occupations. Women superintended the weighty operations, and little girls from ten to fourteen sold the flowers.

The building, as was to have been expected, was decorated according to advanced notions of art. There was no combination that the three primaries of red, yellow and blue did not enter into: making the coup d'œil you may be sure quite charming. Bannerets of evergreens and evergreen festoons, and white and pink and red and yellow roses pinned here, and hanging there; and old flags and new flags, of various countries hung languidly above the art creation, and buz of human voices below. The artist was strongly to the front,—and it was little short of enrapturing to see the style of the chromos hung about the walls, and the pose of the figures represented upon the canvas. The writer strode up to one picture—it represented, he believes, a drummer sitting on the side of an old boat aften ten o'clock, on a beautiful summer evening. Beside him sat a little bit of a girl, dignified as a queen, proud of her connexions and scorning mesalliances. The "summer" was telling her, so it was said, that he would have to go to jail to-morrow, if he did not pay his five dollars" and she, dignified as a Queen said, "Have you?—would they call me up as a witness: I would be delighted to go." Of course this is an improvement on her English. This chromo disgusted me; and as I have reserved a fuller description of it for another day, I leave it for the present.

And then another where youth had turned into old age, and the bright side of the world had rolled by forever. There was naught but heavy, dun clouds and dark shadows. The maiden wore the typical wreath of withered roses, for

> "She hath no loyal knight and true."
>
> * * * * * * * *
>
> Or when the moon was overhead,
> Came two young lovers lately wed:
> "I am so sick of shadows," said
> That picture hanging there.

Another picture showed the winter of discontent, and another an Alpine night, where slumbered eternal snows, and another, to get Tennyson to help us, showed

> "A gaudy summer morn,
> Where, with puffed cheek, the belted hunter blew
> His wreathed bugle horn."

The writer did not go very near the chromos, because he remembed reading that Mark Twain said, "Chromos are not supposed to be smelt of."

The next object of attraction to be met was the work table upon which delicate art lay in heaps, and around which and about which beauty had gathered en bloc. The ladies in charge of this department were—Mrs Turner, Mrs C. A. Sampson, Mrs H. Vavasour, Mrs W. P. Flewelling, Mrs G Fred Coy, Mrs H. C. Creed, Mrs W. Vanwart, Mrs L. Clarke, Miss Quinn, Miss Vavasour and Miss Hatt.

At safe distance from this table was the doll department representing all kinds of dolls, from the nude negro to the highly flounced Caucasian. The young ladies who presided over these articles of domestic manufacture, were Miss Rideout, Miss Millar and Miss Guiou. There was an ice cream table also in the building, and the young ladies who dispensed this cooling beverage were the Misses Agnew, Guiou, and Yardy. A few steps away from the ice cream stand was the throne; where the acme of skill and art were astoundingly evident. On either side of the throne were soda water fountains that flowed and fizzed unceasingly. These stands were no doubt the most profitable in the building and were manipulated by Mr J F Richards, Mr W A Quinn, Mr H Burden and others. But there is a word yet about the Throne. On the front of it was the flower arbor, arranged in Chinese fashion, but fairly smothered in roses, ilies, geraniums, fuschias, heliotrope, etc. lMrs Lugrin, Miss Woods and the Misses Lugrins with evident ease to themselves, and satisfaction to the multitude presided here.

In the neighborhood of the above was the refreshment table, from which the hungry could satisfy themselves, or the delicate be induced to "pick." The viands included a number of oranges, and several dozens of apples; a lot of pies, cakes, tarts, fruit, confectionaries, etc. Attached to this was a tea table bountifully set, "the both," as our informant told us, "presided over by Mr I. E. Smith and Mrs G. H. Simmons, Mrs H. Clarke, Mrs D. Currier, Mrs W. Guiou, Mrs J. H. Millar, Mrs J. Thomas, Mrs R. Atherton, Mrs J. S. Withrow, Mrs W. Hawthorne, Miss Blain, Miss S. Estey and Miss K. Baker.

There was also a magic lake, up and down and through and round which went a little boat, unceasing as Venderdeckin's doomed ship in the waters of Cape Horn. A lot of little girls sold button holes, etc., and stopped every stranger that came in.

The Reform Club Band gave out the music on the afternoon and evening of Wednesday. The leading members of the order were untiring in their exertions to make the affair a success—in spite of fate. Mr Robert Atherton was noticeable among the busy ones.

THURSDAY.

On Thursday which happened to be Dominion Day to all but some of the shopkeepers and the proprietors of the Supeme Court, the bazaar opened with great eclat. Towards dusk, hundreds went out to the Palace, following the band. Some of these belonged to town, some to St John and some to parts adjacent to our city. Several were intoxicated and several were pretty full, and hundreds were in "good sailing trim," as they say over in our country. Several made speeches on the Ten Gallon Act on the front street, and an hilarious assemblage applauded said speakers. One gentleman remarked to the writer on his high perch, after an inebriate had concluded a lengthy speech: "This is the practical working of the Act." And so it was, and so it will be while ever such an aborion disgraces the statutes: while ever men try to mould their fellowmen's moral nature by legal forces; while ever the shebeen flourishes instead of the respectable licensed house,—and that will be so long as liquor is manufactured or purchasable. Stolen fruit is always sweetest, and under the yile law the fanatics have given us,he who cared little for liquor when he could get it without pains, now does not hesitate to get it wherever he can, and whenever he can. He can get it in cellars, in barns, in garrets, in beer shops; he can get it during the day when the policeman sleeps and the pimp is not abroad; he can get it at night when the policeman is somewhere else, and the pimp is exhausted after his honorable days work. Pardon the digression, but there is just as much liquor drank here now, as at any time since we came to Fredericton, but all sold, or most of it is sold unlawfully, and the revenues are cheated. Nothing is gained but the gratification of the fanatics, whose honest feelings in the matter at first have changed into an attitude of hateful persecution and espionage; where the personal feeling not against the traffic, but against those whom they fancy they have triumphed over alone prevails. It is just like factions set in motion by love for principles taught them. After a time the principles are forgotten and the question is, Who is to be the best in this? There is not a dozen fanatics to-day in the city whom you could get to say the law oughtn't to be on the books, even though you proved to them that under it more liquor was sold than ever before, and that drunkenness and misery were more prevalent. It is not for the law or its results they care, therefore, but for the satisfaction of having beaten the other side. And how could better be expected of some of the vile persons who preach temperance and only that; who keep one commandment just as a kind of moral stock-in-trade, and break the other nine—who would murder you and enter your house by the windows at night and pillage it, but would scorn to pick your pockets. There are, as Bishop Medley said a day or two ago in St John, persons who are living in unconcealed adultery here who have preached the moral of temperance to virtuous, honorable people from our platforms, and denounced good, honest men engaged in a then lawful traffic. Those whited sepulchres it is who disgust us chiefly with the doctrine howled from the platform; those whited sepulchres who walk the streets as shining lights, but who are foul within their hearts as they are immoral within other doors than their own—and often their own, too. But let that all go—time has to annihilate the law, and that will be when fanaticism or froth will be running in some other channel; crying out for women's rights or the suppression of eel or chub or trout catching; or some other immoral pursuit.

It is Thursday we are speaking of. That night they sold their fancy articles up to nine o'clock, when every one was turned out and compelled to buy tickets to come in to the hop. At ten the signal was given, and the 71st band struck up its sweet, good music, and away went the happy couples—and the graceful maiden and the little indiscriminate flirt—to the coaxing tune. A large number danced till the gray streaks had nigh begun to light the east, but the greater part came home between twelve and one. It was announced the following day that the fair had not closed, but would be opened on the morrow for pleasure and profit; that much had remained unsold and many had not danced. Accordingly last evening the palace again opened, brilliantly lit, and occupied with buyers and sellers. The admission was only ten cents, all it should have been at first; inasmuch as the object is not so much to make money at the door as it is to entrap parties into buying. The dance was continued last night till past twelve when the bazaar closed sine die.

We do not know how much was taken in, but we should suppose not a fabulous sum. We had great hopes for the bazaar, and predicted great success for it: but this was under a state of affairs which was not a feature to the end. Bazaars at any rate have seen their day—unless some influential church takes hold of them, or the people be 'made of money.' The Odd Fellows' bazaar, however, was a success, quite commensurate with the ability, intelligence and energy displayed in its entire management. It would please us to be able to say its success was ten times as great.

Returned.

Mr Robert Orr, C Robinson and Mr Mansard arrived to-day from the South West. They had some birch cases full of trout averaging at least a pound and a half each, and a dozen or so of beautiful salmon. Mr Robinson's shoulder at the expense of all the paraffine and other ardents in the camp is well; Mr Orr is badly tanned and midget-bitten, but Mr Mansard comes out unscathed. They had what they call a "boss time," a statement we will not question.

Mr Simpson of the B. N. A. Bank has returned, and Mr Wallace has gone to St John. Mr Simpson had a good cruise and caught a horse load or so of trout and salmon between Little Falls and Riviere du Loup. He does not say if he caught any while on board the steamer down to St John. He is richly tanned and fairly mosquito-bitten. Mr Wallace, after having left golden impressions and divers wet eyes here, has resumed banking in St John. Mr Wallace is calculated to be a general favorite wherever he goes.

Personal.

The Surveyor General left for Newcastle to-day, after having made his tour of the Free Grants Settlements. The Provincial Secretary arrived to-day, and with the Attorney General will conduct the affairs of State till next Council Meeting.

Two of the draftsmen of the Crown Land Office, to-wit, E. Smith and T Loggie have gone to camp at Woodstock. The time is pretty near at hand when clerks in the public offices will either have to stay at their business, or seek some other occupation.

Mr Risteen of the News was in town yesterday, vastly improved.

Military vs. Potato Bug.

A small contingent of recently recruited volunteers left here yesterday for Woodstock. This mockery is about at an end now; and people asked yesterday if the few red-coats were going on a campaign against the potato beetle in Carleton County.

STAR BRIEFS.

—The Regular Monthly Meeting of the City Council will be held on Tuesday evening next.

—On the morning of Dominion Day two picked elevens played a game of cricket on the Officer's Square, under the Captainship of Mr D Hazen and Mr. Chas Richards respectively. The result was:—Hazen 58, Richards 51.

—F. J. McCausland and J. F. McManus, Esqrs., have been elected delegates to attend the approaching session of the Grand Lodge of the I. O. G. T., to be held at Woodstock on the 13th inst.

ST JOHN NOTES.

The Catholic T. A. Union Convention.—The assembling of the delegates to the ninth annual Convention of the Catholic T. A. Union at Moncton tomorrow will no doubt cause an extra stir up in that interesting locality. When the train arrives there, the people will no doubt turn out in knots to see what manner of men these temperance delegates are. The Editor of the Times will surely step down to observe if there are any in the collection who are as handsome as he is. But to the point. Many young men of excellent abilities and old heads will be found in the convention hall later on, discussing matters for the promotion of the aims of the Union for the current year. Let us hope that success will crown their efforts and that new life will be infused into the Union which, it is much to be regretted, is numerically weaker than in the past. The names of those who will, it is said, be nominated for the office of president for next term are, our esteemed young friend, Mr McDade of the News, Mr Gleeson and Frank J. McPeake of your city. Either of the three mentioned would, if elected, adorn the position. The delegates from the city and vicinity are packing their trunks, not forgetting to bring along their white coolers, because they anticipate hot weather in Moncton.

Game Fowl.—Mr Hugh Campbell, the accomplished baritone vocalist, is very fond of game fowls of every description. On the premises which he now occupies, back of Fort Howe, may be found several breeding coups, containing game chicks of almost every variety. In these he takes great interest and thinks there is a bonanza in raising game. He claims to have the purest lot in the city. Anybody who desires such stock can be accommodated by Mr C. at fair prices.

Newcastle Notes.

Beautiful weather at present.

Call still runs a boat to Chatham on Sunday.

The proprietor of the "Slaughter House" is on a fishing bender.

The "Mallard" has been floated and is now undergoing extensive repairs.

The stranded bark "Thule" is advertized for sale as she now lies at Douglastown.

The merchants agreed to close their places of business so as to enable their employes to attend the firemen's picnic.

Bob Call and Whitney are awful mad at your correspondent. Well, let them, I'll Call on the Governer and get a few more local hits.

Fishermen say that the salmon were never sa scarce as they are this season. The Governor lost a day last week, but didn't bring home a scale.

Watt's new vessel "Richard Hutchison" will be fully rigged to-morrow and will sail on Friday. It seems as if Charley is tempting Providence.

Coroner Smith held an inquest on the body of a sailor who was found drowned last week. He makes a good looking presiding officer, yet he doesn't mind the Bible.

Early on Sunday morning it was discovered that the tug-boat "Gladiator" lying at her wharf in Chatham was on fire. By the aid of the steam fire engine it was extinguished, though damage was done.

On Saturday evening last a go-as-you-please game of fisticuffs was indulged in by two of the "bummers" on the front street. Policeman Cassidy was busily engaged repairing an old clock at Tom McGraur's. Consequently no arrests were made.

McEvoy is arranging his fishing tackle for the coming contest with the Marquis. Whatever the result may be, Mac says that he and Mike will soon issue a challenge that they can kill more fish with rod and fly in any stream in Quebec or New Brunswick, than any two men in America. Go for them, Mac!

June 22th, 1880.

St Jean Baptiste Day at Quebec.

At the dinner, Hon. Mr Landry, of New Brunswick, responded to the sentiment, "Our brothers, the Acadians." At the Convention in Laval University the same gentleman also spoke, the Chronicle thus reporting him:

"Mr Chapuveau then introduced a French Acadian, Hon Pierre Landry, Commissioner of Public Works of New Brunswick, who spoke at some length, and thanking those present in the name of the Acadians of the Maritime Provinces, continued in the following manner: The results, he said, of the present demonstration must be especially beneficial to Acadians generally. Up to the present time they had a population of French origin important on account of its traditions, its past labors and trials; strong on account of its numbers: its faithful adherence to its manners and customs, to its language, and the religion of its forefathers; but weakened by the separation of certain portions of its members and by the want of intercourses. By history alone did they know one another, but that mere fact did not unite them. From to-day however this separation must disappear and they shall recognize one another for what they are; brothers, whose interests are the same; whose aspirations and destinies are identical. It is pleasing, he said, to note that henceforth the obstacles which had so long prevented the social and political intercourse between the different French groups in the Dominion, shall disappear in the general rejoicing. Hitherto, without extraneous aid, the Acadians have preserved their language with a fidelity that neither adversity of circumstances nor the contact of races speaking a different tongue have been able to overcome. The past circumstances of the Acadians deprived them of means of educating their children, and in consequence they were at the disadvantage of having to compete with others who possessed that education of which they were deprived. Indomitable perseverance and frugality triumphed at length, but then it was found that persons capable of teaching the mother tongue were not available. Under these circumstances it would not have been surprising had the people lost their identity. Such, however, was not the case. A population of over 100,000 still speak the French language in Acadia. The establishment of Saint Joseph's College at Memramcook became for the people the dawn of a better day. Previous to the period alluded to the political influence of the Acadians was little or none; since then it has made wonderful progress. Mr Landry concluded a well prepared and eloquent address by assuring his audience that only a better knowledge of one another on the part of French Canadians is wanted to ensue a mutual support of each other's requirements, and he withdrew amid loud applause.

A vote of thanks was unanimously accorded him on motion of the President.

The Origin of "Dark Horse."

The origin of the term "Dark Horse" is explained in in a matter-of fact way by the Cincinnati Enquirer. Once upon a time there lived down in Tennessee an old chap named Samuel Flynn, who traded in horses and always contrived to have a speedy nag of his own, which he used for racing purposes whenever he could pick up a good "soft match" during his travels. The best of his flyers was a coal black stallion named Dusky Pete, almost a thoroughbred, and able to go in the best of company. Flynn was accustomed to saddle Pete when approaching a town and ride him into it to give the impression that he was merely "a likely hoss and not a flyer." One day he came to a town where a country race meeting was being held, and he entered Pete among the contestants. The people of the town, not knowing anything of his antecedents, and not being impressed by his appearance, backed two or three local horses against him heavily. Flynn moved quietly among the crowd and took all the bets that were offered against his nag. Just as the "flyers" were being saddled for the race, old Judge McMinamee, who was turf oracle of that part of the State, arrived on the course and was made one of the judges. As he took his seat on the stand he was told how the betting ran, and of the folly of the owner of the strange entry in backing his "plug" so heavily. Running his eye over the track, the Judge instantly recognized Pete, and he said: "Gentlemen, there's a dark horse in this race that will make some of you smell —— before supper." The Judge was right. Pete, the "dark horse," lay back until the three quarter pole was reached, when he went to the front with a rush and won the purse and Flynn's bets with the greatest ease.

Telegraphic News.

Bradlaugh's Triumph.

London, July 2.—In the House of Commons, A. M. Sullivan moved an amendment making the resolution moved by Gladstone prospective instead of retrospective. It was rejected, 234 to 236. The resolution agreed to by the Government and moved by Gladstone admitting all elected members to affirm who may claim to do so, instead of taking the oath, was then adopted without division, and on a subsequent motion by Gladstone that resolution be a standing order was also agreed to without a divison.

The Times says Bradlaugh will present himself at the table of the House to-day to make affirmation.

LATEST.

London, July 2.—In the Commons this afternoon, Bradlaugh made affirmation. He signed the roll amidst silence and took his seat.

Telegraphic Notes.

The Turkish Minister has presented to the Italian Premier a note protesting against the decisions of the Berlin Conference.

Accounts received from various districts of Ireland show that the famine fever is widely increasing.

A treaty has been concluded between Russia and Japan for coal and other stores.

The rinderpest is raging in forty-three districts on the shores of the Black Sea, and has appeared in the Zoological Gardens at Oddessa.

A great fire is raging in Reazan, Russia; sixty houses have been destroyed, and the flames are spreading rapidly.

The Standard states that the Home Rulers have instructed Parnell to press for the second reading of his Irish Relief Bill, unless the Chief Secretary for Ireland undertakes to give a large grant of money in addition to sums voted in Government Relief Bills to be administered through the machinery of the Poor Law.

London, July 2.—After the Bradlaugh affair was settled in the Commons last night, the debate on Parnell's Irish relief Bill was resumed. Hon. E. Forster, Chief Secretary for Ireland, announced he could not accept the measures. Parnell moved that further debate on the bill be fixed for Saturday, but Forster objected and Parnell's motion was negatived.

Constantinople, July 2.—It is reported orders have been given for the mobilization of the second army corps. It is believed here that the Porte has determined to resist the decision of the Powers.

THE FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE OF THE NURSERY.

The following is an extract from a letter written to the German Reformed Messenger, at Chamberburgh, Penn:

A BENEFACTRESS.

Just open the door for her, and Mrs Winslow will prove the American Florence Nightingale of the Nursery. Of this we are so sure, that we will teach our Susie to say, "A blessing on Mrs Winslow" for helping her to survive the griping, colicking and teething siege. MRS WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP relieves the child from pain, and cures dysentery and diarrhœa. It softens the gums, reduces inflammation, cures wind colic, and carries the child safely through the teething siege. It performs precisely what it professes to perform, every part of it—nothing less. We have never seen Mrs Winslow—know her only through the preparation of her "Soothing Syrup for children teething." If we had the power we would make her, as she is, a physical saviour to the whole infant race.
