EDUCATE THE PEOPLE!

Scenes in the Streets of the Eternal City.

To the Editor of the Telegraph and Journal.

In following the discussions of the common school question of this Province, as it comes before our eyes in the columns of your able paper, and as one reads it in its many different phases in other papers of New Brunswick and Canada, which seem to be controlled and edited by men rather opposed to free and general education, and to keep the working classes, in what little education they do seem willing to allow them, down to the old standard;] when one can read in the first page of an old geography, issued under the Catholic church in Europe, these

WISE WORDS:

"The earth is round like a ball, and men look like flies upon the suface of an orange upon it;" then a note: "Too much knowledge is evil to the poor man; your priest is your wisest teacher," etc., I have been led to draw some comparisons between people of equal mind and interest, and the causes of an ignorance so much more apparent in one nation than in another—as between Italy and the United States, for instance. Here are two people of equal natural abilities—France and England. What degraded ignorance in the last war was shown by French peasantry, who had lived for generations under Catholic control. In looking back to journal notes taken while in 1858, especially while in Rome during Holy Week, I find that even then my attention was called to the quick and active minds of the peasantry, as in contrast with their absurd ignorance of anything like writing, geography or arithmetic, showing how rich was the soil to produce, but the hand that could sow the seed of knowledge was withheld.

TRAVELLING THROUGH ITALY

EFFIGIES AND CROSSES

were placed at the corners of many a cross-road or path where a school house might well have stood. Would you learn where Italians were educated. Look then to the highest spot in almost any little village, and you will see the gloomy wall of a convent, where within are taught those who are allowed to learn, that which shall bind the student still closer in the misty shadows of past ignorance. Should one show a mind more apt than others, then is his learning, forced by vows, to be turned to the increase of superstitions among his fellow countrymen.

But, in fact, the people of Italy began to fret under the yoke of priest-craft and consequent ignorance, even before 1858, and the cry of freedom raised by Garibaldi, soon after roused a nation, and planted that seed (a thirst for knowledge) which as it grew with wonderful rapidity, undermined the power of the priest, as it always will; and to-day, in the midst of the crash of the falling arches of bigotry, with a people's ignorance for their keystone, comes a general cry from the people, "How shall we poor get knowledge?"

I will quote from my journal, which is dated 1858:

ROME—HOLY WEEK.

Have stood for two hours in the ranks, two deep, ranged along the aisles of this wonderful Cathedral, St. Peter's. The body of the building is crowded with the elite and nobility from all parts of the world. The Pope is about to be borne out on his throne to bless the people. A long line of French soldiers stand before us on each side the aisles with drawn swords. The Swiss guards kept especially and always about the person of his Holiness, as though God was not always willing to protect his Vicegerent on earth, were placed further up the aisle, near the Pope, and also about the entrance of the Cathedral, prepared to overcome any overt act of the people. Even then I felt that the throne of the Pope was rocking, and soon I could see that when French bayonets held at charge by men kept as ignorant as was the Roman people themselves, should be withdrawn,

WOE TO THE RULER

both temporal and spiritual, who rules through the abject ignorance of his people. Such were my thoughts, when every whisper was hushed and the grand procession began to move down from about the altar through this main aisle where I stood, and toward the grand portals looking out upon the beautiful circular plazza, surrounded by its lofty columns, in the centre of which stood the hyroglyphic covered shaft of Egyptian phorphyry, called Cleopatra's Needle. I watch for the coming of

HIS HOLINESS.

He must pass very near me. I had already seen him many times, and been presented to him, a pleasant looking, stout old man, with a very kindly expression in his eyes, and showing hands as beatuiful as any lady's.

The great officials of the church pass first, in gaudy regalia, bearing on velvet pillows the jewel covered crowns or mitres, showing the grades of power through which the Pope has ascended to his present supremacy.

CARDINAL ANTONELLI

showed [in his dark, handsome face,—ance the most exquisite deceit, cunning and more real power than the Pope's. Jesuit as he was, he held the reins of the temporal power of the Church, and his eyes, full of cunning and ambition, showed that he well understood the foibles that actuated the lives of men and princes.

The Pope appears borne aloft, not on angels wings, but on four stout shoulders; he sits upon the famous ivory throne, formed like a high-backed, square armed chair of carved ivory, cushioned with crimson velvet. He holds an olive branch in his hand, and, constantly dipping it in holy water, sprinkles mine and the faces of the people. I forgot to bow down in obeisance, when I felt my head pushed down by the powerful hand of some enthusiastic Catholic, while another, perhaps his brother, standing near, says to him: "Mind your own affairs; he is a foreigner, by chance an American, who lives where they bow only to whom they choose. He is free; we will be by-and-bye." I watch this man with curiosity. If one of those French soldiers had heard him, he would have been at liberty to put his sword through his body, and he evidently knew it, for his companion looked frightened and slunk away. This one staid by me. He had a fine, open countenance, large, bright eyes, broad shoulders, limbs fit for a model. He was dressed like the common hack drivers about the Holy City, and, in fact, is one, as he tells me. I determine to employ him, and learn from him something of the state of things among the

and why a people so bright should be so ignorant. I began to speak of this to him. He said, "Hush, Signor; if you are heard both you and I will get into trouble. If you go to Tripoli with me to-morrow we will talk." The Italians are natural politicians, and I knew he would talk when he had a listener. They understand their own needs pretty well now. I follow, or rather go, with the crowd to the entrance, and then from the steps of St. Peter's look over a vast concourse, thousands and thousands of people waiting to receive the blessing of the Pope. There were, it was said, sixty thousand people packed in that Plazzo, all supposed to be Catholics; but the upturned faces of this crowd did not bear the deep, solemn and uncomplaining expression of former times; there was a spirit of discontent shown in the features before me, and a general shrugging of shoulders, which produced a slight wave of disturbance through the vast assemblage—a low murmer of discontent, which, like

"A fitful, red glare, a low, rumbling jar,
"Proclaims the storm demon yet raging afar"— signs which were evidently noticed by eyes far more anxious over the political future than mine.

The ceremony was over. There was much that I have not mentioned here, but enough has been noted to show the effect upon the people of the country, and of these am I speaking more particularly. My acquaintance, the hack-driver, who was one of the people, as he stood near me again, explained more in the following answers to my questions: "How do all these grand shows impress you my friend?" "Oh, Signor," he said with an impressive shrug, "me used to look forward to their ceremonies as the beginning of a new year of grand luck, all our SINS PARDONED GRATIS.

But as luck did not always come, we began to learn that show was given us in place of learning; that beautiful displays and fire works, and all that sort of things, was to blind our eyes to our real interests, and when we found that the Sunday following, after mass, our last "scudi" was demanded of us to help pay for all this, although the call was made under some pretended charity or other, we began to consider over it. And now, Signor, you will see," saying this he slipped away and left me to my own conclusions. Time soon after developed what he meant as I mentioned in the first part of this article.

The people all over Italy are

REMARKABLY QUICK TO LEARN

and inclined to analyze, I might say to philosophize in an epicurean sort of way. But for this reason has it been the necessary policy of the Romish Church, to keep them uneducated. To those who can read, and this rare knowledge is generally the result of some indulgent but still discreet village priest, nearly all books are proscribed; the Bible first of all. The Catholics here will deny this, saying that it is our translation only that is prescribed, but the fact was then that all the bibles were quietly kept out of the reach of any of the peasantry who could read. And it is well known that the prayer books were written in Latin, on the strength I suppose of old Pope Gregory's reasons, which he gave when asked why he caused prayers to be read to the people in a language they could not understand.

"Why," said he, "we don't want the people to understand, but to believe in us. If they understood, our power over them would be gone." We see and understand this style of argument to-day, and you and your readers can see in this struggle over the managem ent and arrangement of the how absolutely necessary it is for the priests of the Romish Church, in order to rule over their people, as of yore, to keep them ignorant, or control their education, as far as the present grand march of intellect in the civilized world will allow them to do so, and in this effort, fast becoming a vain one, are they found fighting against general education. They say, with some show of truth, that knowledge makes the poor man mad, but this should be said, with more truth, that it is half knowledge, or rather the want of complete knowledge of things, that makes men mad. But it is certainly ignorance that allows good, steady, hard working Catholics to be stirred up in revolt, and even to the shedding of blood, fighting against the very interest which should be and is indeed their own. Pray pardon this long article, Mr. Editor, and if you think it worthy a place in your paper, print it.

COMMON SCHOOLS OF THIS PROVINCE

Yours, &c., P.

Ayer's

Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Among the great discoveries of modern science, few are of more real value to mankind than this effectual remedy for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs. A vast trial of its virtues, throughout this and other countries, has shown that it does surely and effectually control them. The testimony of our best citizens, of all classes, establishes the fact, that CHERRY PECTORAL will and does relieve and cure the afflicting disorders of the Throat and Lungs beyond any other medicine. The most dangerous affections of the Pulmonary Organs yield to its power; and cases of Consumption, cured by this preparation, are publicly known, so remarkable as hardly to be believed, were they not proven beyond dispute. As a remedy it is adequate, on which the public may rely for full protection. By curing Coughs, the forerunners of more serious disease, it saves unnumbered lives, and an amount of suffering not to be computed. It challenges trial, and convinces the most sceptical. Every family should keep it on hand as a protection against the early and unperceived attack of Pulmonary Affections, which are easily met at first, but which become incurable, and too often fatal, if neglected. Tender lungs need this defence; and it is unwise to be without it. As a safeguard to children, amid the distressing diseases which beset the Throat and Chest of childhood, CHERRY PECTORAL is invaluable; for, by its timely use, multitudes are rescued from premature graves, and saved to the love and affection centred on them. It acts speedily and surely against ordinary colds, securing sound and health-restoring sleep. No one will suffer troublesome Influenza and painful Bronchitis, when they know how easily they can be cured.

Originally the product of long, laborious, and successful chemical investigation, no cost or toil is spared in making every bottle in the utmost possible perfection. It may be confidently relied upon as possessing all the virtues it has ever exhibited, and capable of producing cures as memorable as the greatest it has ever effected.
