An Episode of the Berlin Treaty.

The Naplo, in an article upon the political career of Andrassy, narrates the following episode of the Treaty of Berlin: "In one of the conferences held privately, Count Andrassy requested the occupation of Bosnia. Bismarck opposed this on principle, saying to Andrassy that he should have occupied the province a year before; therefore occupation now would mean nothing, Lord Beaconsfield agreed with Bismarck. Andrassy's friends told him that the occupation could not be a snbject of consideration in the Congress, which had only to do with the revision of the Treaty of San Stefano and to assure peace between the belligerents. But since Andrassy considered the Congress of importance only in so far as the priviledge of occupation was concerned, he lost his patience, and declared that he would leave Berlin instantly unless his demand was complied vith. Lord Salisbury afterwards acknowledged to Sir Drummond Wolf that he had consented to propose the Austrian occupation of Bosnia, upon the pressing demand of Bismarck, who declared that otherwise he would be compelled to propose it himself. Salisbury did not wish to deny Bismarck this favor, but, together with the Ottoman blenipotentiaries, demanded the preliminary conclusion of an Austro-Turkish convention. But in this he was defeated by a majority.
