SCOTT ACT IN DIGBY.

(Courier.)
During the past three years—1900, 1901 and 1902—sixty-four Scott Act cases have been tried at Digby. One case each year has been dismissed for want of evidence, the remaining 61 have been won by the town. This appears like a good record, but we are afraid that there has been but little reduction in the sale of liquor within the town limits during the past three years. However, the revenue obtained from these cases has helped to keep taxes reduced.

sage was sent to Dr. Berryman, and a coach went out and brought the woman to the hospital.

ARRESTED IN HALIFAX.

MONCTON, N. B., Jan. 11.—Two young men named Albert Ralfe, of Bridgetown, and Fred Laine, of St. John, were under arrest here, charged with robbing Geo. McKnight, of Oxford, of his money.

The Ralfe claim to have been released of his money a couple of weeks ago at a Moncton hotel. He was in the company of several young men and although in custody went through his pockets.

Wm. Cushing, arrested a week ago on the same charge, was discharged, as the charges against him were without foundation. Ralfe and Laine deny complicity in the alleged robbery. They will likely have a preliminary examination tomorrow.

LOST SIGHT OF.

A Most Important Aid to Education.

An important point often overlooked by parents in bringing up children is the use of proper food as an aid to education.

Children make wonderful progress when scientifically fed.

A little woman in East Brentwood, H. S. says of her six-year-old daughter, "My little girl is never really tired and lunches and hearty evening meals and improper food soon began to work her down."

Then came a period of self-boarding while away at college, and it is now easy to see where, in the haste to acquire knowledge, the true knowledge of proper and nourishing food was neglected. The result, as may be imagined, was indigestion, dyspepsia and constipation. That followed a weary time of dieting and, one after another, physicians were consulted, till hope of permanent cure was abandoned. Then, two years after leaving school, I entered a new home as a bride, and having grown wiser through experience, I resolved to live food in accordance with hygienic principles. This was also necessary, as I could not eat anything at all right.

We commenced to use Grape-Nuts and soon became convinced that it was the most nutritious food we could obtain. I noticed an immediate improvement in my health, my indigestion became less marked and eventually left me for good.

It is now two years that we have cat-ten Grape-Nuts regularly, and I was never as well in my life as now. I have gained ten pounds in weight and can eat without causing the slightest distress, the richest kind of food as well as anyone, the dyspepsia is entirely gone and constipation never troubles me.

This may not interest others, but it is of great interest to us, for it is our firm belief that my present good health is due solely to the constant use of Grape-Nuts and we feel that we have a great reason to be thankful to the maker of such a perfect and delicious food. Some given by Postum Co.,

VERDICT TODAY.

Goodspeed Case Goes to the Jury This Morning.

Prisoner Has Good Chance of Acquittal—He Broke Down and Wept When Chief Justice Believed His Evidence and Gave Him Good Advice.

(From Tuesday's Daily Sun.)
Whether or not Fred W. Goodspeed was an accessory after the fact to the murder of Willie Doherty will be decided today. Yesterday afternoon the defense closed its case, and an attack of the court at 11 o'clock this morning Mr. Morrill will go to the jury. Under the legal definition of the term "accessory" the crown case against the prisoner has been difficult of establishment and should be acquitted today to great surprise will be felt by those who had followed the evidence. Should this be the case the crown will proceed against him on the burglary charge some time before the close of this circuit.

All day yesterday was taken up with the examination of witnesses for the defense, the chief of whom was the prisoner himself. He was on the stand altogether about three and a half hours and his evidence, straightforward and devoid of any artifice, told the whole truth, even though it might lead against him, made a strong impression on both judge and jury. His one plea for his every action he made was murder and his arrest was his overmastering fear of Higgins, whom he had seen commit murder and who had repeatedly threatened to kill him also.
He told. Other witnesses tended to show that contrary to statements made by the police, Goodspeed had not been directly questioned by the police while apart from Higgins in the police station the night the body was found.
A woman who had known the prisoner in Salem was among those testifying and she gave the boy a strong recommendation.

At the opening of the Goodspeed case in the circuit court yesterday morning Scott E. Morrill called the attention of the court to the fact that for Goodspeed to be held as an accessory after the fact, the crown should have proved the conviction of the principal, whereas the crown had failed to do so.

The chief justice, in his opinion, proceeded he wished the fact of Higgins' conviction to be established.

The chief justice then allowed the crown to re-open its case to prove the conviction of the principal, and the crown called the clerk of the court John Willet who produced his records showing that Higgins had been tried for the murder of William Doherty and duly convicted.

Proceeding, Mr. Morrill said that the evidence now in did not prove that the prisoner was an accessory to the murder of William Doherty. Under the law as it had been explained, the prisoner was one who received, comforted and assisted a criminal in order to enable him to escape, while having knowledge of the crime.

So in order to prove the charge against the prisoner the crown must prove:

First.—That a crime had been committed. That had been done.

Second.—That the person had knowledge of the crime. This also had been proven.

Third.—That he harbored and assisted the prisoner with the idea of preventing him from being brought to justice; that he had actively assisted the offender personally. This Mr.
Morrill claimed the crown had not done.

The fact of the fact of the crime did not constitute Goodspeed an accessory and what he said about the prisoner to outside persons could not be construed as evidence of the crime.

In his opinion the crown had not made out a case and he asked for the dismissal of the prisoner.

(The chief justice said that the jury matters for discussion by the jury.) He thought that the crown had brought forward enough evidence to warrant the case going to the jury whom he would fully instruct regarding the law in the case.

In addressing the jury, Mr. Morrill pointed out to them the youth of the prisoner and the fact that a boy at fourteen years could not be judged by the same standard as a grown man.
It was for the jury to try and interpret what actuated the boy in his concealment of the crime as long as he did during his life and he had terrible work. He had shown no desire to make anything. He would do his best to put every action of the boy before them that they might judge with a full knowledge and as fairly as they could.

He was one of their own boys.
Goodspeed's life both in St. John and Salem, Mass., would be placed before them. They would hear the conversations which took place between him and Higgins in the light of the evidence of the fear that was put upon him he asked them to consider whether or not he was an accessory to the murder.

As his first witness he called Fred Goodspeed.

"I'll be dead in the fourteenth of next April," said the boy. "I have lived in St. John for four years on Princess, Brunswick and Mecklenburg streets. We came from Springfield, N. S. I was born there. I had known William Doherty and Frank Higgins about two years. I House and Higgins when I worked in White's candy factory. I know where the tanyard is, but before I went to Salem I wasn't used to going there. I went to Salem with Johnny Decker of Marsh Bridge. We went by boat and stayed in Boston a week. Then I walked to Salem—ten miles—looking for work. It was about the eighth or ninth of October when I got there at seven o'clock at night. I met some boys and asked them 'something to eat.' I hadn't had anything to eat since the morning of the day before.
They took me to a man—lawyer—who gave me my supper and the next day I got work in a cotton mill. I met Johnson was the overseer. I was there up to July. I got $3.50 to start with and later $3.75. I paid two dollars a week for board and the balance I put in the Salem five cent savings bank.
His bank book was here produced in evidence.

Under Mr. Morrill's quiet questioning, the witness told of working alone in a candy factory. It was Mrs.
Brooks, with whom he stayed, who kept his bank book. He left Salem on July 4th for Boston and came to St.
John on the boat. He left his money in Salem where it still was. The statements made during the previous trial that he had got into trouble in Salem was not true.

"I had not been home but a short time," he said, "when Higgins and Doherty came around looking for me.
Before I went away to Salem I knew a boy named Holm. He asked me to help him rob Kennedy's. He offered me two dollars for a plan of the store and said he would give me half if I would go in with him. Higgins was not with us."

Continuing Goodspeed told again of meeting Higgins and Doherty in the graveyard on Friday, August 1st, in that time King and Kelly were there, beginning with Frank Higgins' request to him and Doherty to go out to the park and get a feed of berries. The prisoner repeated as he had three times the fearful story of that journey through the park and the deed that was done there.

Contrary to Higgins' story he described that there had been no stop in the journey through the park. He had sat down nowhere, and that the revolver previous to the firing had not been taken out of Higgins' pocket.
Asked regarding the talk between Higgins and Doherty before the shooting, he said they were discussing some business that Higgins had been in, and mentioned that in Barker's place on Brunswick street and in White's candy factory.

Describing the details of the murder, witness told of Higgins' threat to kill him unless he had a hand in the deed.
In answer to the chief justice he said he had been told by Higgins that the murderer was to be killed. Higgins had asked him to help him kill Doherty, and he had refused. The prisoner told of the murder and the throwing of the revolver into the creek was described as previously.
At this time also he said Higgins threatened to kill him if he did not help him kill Doherty. Sunday afternoon he went to the tanyard and gave him some candy. Sunday afternoon he saw Higgins in the tanyard, and gave him other boys some candy. He remembered seeing Willie Doherty's father on Monday. Frank Higgins and Harry Kelly were there. Doherty was talking about Willie, and Higgins told him what to say in case the boy was asked. The chief justice asked him if he had seen Higgins on the day of the murder, and he answered that he had seen him on the day of the murder, with whom he broke into Phillips and Foley's. Alexander had the key, and Higgins called up and Goodspeed gave him some candy. Sunday afternoon
