Mr. Peasley and His Vivid Impressions of Foreign Parts.

Naples—and Mr. Peasley is still with us. We waited for him in London until he recovered his lost trunk, and he was so grateful that he decided to go along with us.

He said that he was foot-loose and without any definite plans and it always made him feel more at home to travel with people who were just as green and as much scared as he was.

A week ago we were in London—sloshing about in the damp and dismal mixture of mud and snow which lined the dark thoroughfares.

This morning we are basking in the crystal sunlight of Naples—the blue bay, with the crescent outline on one for the last fifteen years, and in this small volume he sets down brief memories of anything thrilling that has happened to him during the day or some detailed information regarding the nights that strike him as being truly wondrous.

Mr. Peasley has a taste style. Sometimes he uses abbreviations. His English is not of the most scholarly brand. As he is merely writing for himself it makes no difference.

The Peasley notebook, after twenty days in Europe, is full of meaty information, and contains many a flash of life in the Old World. By permission we are reproducing it here with the author's consent that his composition ered court of the Savoy Hotel is paved with blocks of soft rubber three feet square. Constant procession of cabs in and out of the court and rubber deadens sound. Good idea—should be used in all the streets of New York. New cab horse comes along—never has tackled rubber pavement—is clattering noisily over the asphalt pavement—suddenly hits the soft rubber and begins to bounce up and down like a tennis ball. Strange look comes into horse's eye and he crouches like a rabbit, looks over his shoulder at the driver and seems to be asking, "What am I up against?" Mean trick to play on a green horse. Should be a warning sign displayed.

"Famine in Trousers.—One type of English chappie, too old for bread and jam not quite old enough for music halls, wears extraordinary trousers—legs very narrow and tucked above the tops of shoes (I mean boots)—causes them to look thin and birdlike.

English Drama.—Saw new problem play last evening—new play, but same old bunch of trouble. Each principal character failed to marry the person of the opposite sex with whom he or she was really in love. Marriages did not interfere with love affairs, but helped to complicate the plot. Discovered why we can never have a great native drama in the States—we have no open fireplaces in which to destroy the incriminating papers. Impossible to destroy papers at a steam radiator.

In musical comedies, pantomimes and at music halls many sarcastic references to L. C. C. meaning London County Council. Council is plighting open new streets, tearing down old buildings, putting up new buildings and spending money like a sailor on a holiday. Their extravagance has given great offense to the law-abiding and other heavy rate payers, while the very poor people, who are getting parks, sunshine and shower baths free of charge, bless the L. C. C. The dress coat crown in the theatres seem to have it in for the L. C. C., but they are very strong for Mr. Chamberlain, not withstanding defeat. Mr. Chamberlain seems to be a great deal like Mr. Bryan—that is, nearly every one admires him, and not enough people vote for him. In spite of protest from property holders, L. C. C. is going bravely ahead with gigantic task of modernizing and beautifying London. Asked an Englishman why there was so much criticism of L. C. C. He said if you touch a Britisher in the region of his pocketbook he lets out a holler that can be heard in Labrador. Didn't see those words, but that's what he meant.

"Snowstorm.—Last night a few snowflakes drifted into Piccadilly Circus; hardly enough to cover the ground this morning, but every one is talking about the 'snowstorm.' London is away ahead of us on this, but their snowstorms are very amateurish.

"Coals.—Buying my coal by the quarter—forty cents a quart. If I fed the fire the way I do at home, would spend $100 a day. The official who brings fuel to my room in a small tin measure insists upon calling it 'coals,' but I didn't think there was enough of it to justify use of plural.

"Coming Across.—The turbine boat from Dover to Calais ran like a scared deer and rolled like an intoxicated duck. Held to rail all the way across, looking fixly at swimming horizon and wondering why I had left home—bleak, snowy landscape all the way and watch the indicator and know how his bill is running up. The indicator is set at seventy-five centimes at the start. In other words, you owe fifty cents before you get away. Then it clicks up ten centimes at a time, and when you reach your destination there is no chance for an argument regarding the total. What they need now in Paris is a mechanism to prevent the driver from taking you by the round-about way.

"Just for Fun.—Strange epidemic of killing in Paris. Two or three murders every night, not for revenge or in furtherance of robbery, but merely to gratify a morbid desire to take life. Among certain reckless classes of toughs, or 'Hooligans,' it is said to be quite the fashion for ambitious characters to go out at night and kill a few belated pedestrians merely in a spirit of bravado and to build up a reputation among their associates. Seems unfair to the pedestrians. At one of the theatres where a 'revue,' a hodge-podge 'take-off' of many topics of current interest, was being represented the new type of playfulness was represented as waiting at a corner and shooting up, one after another, some twenty-five citizens who chanced to stray along. This performance was almost as good as the Buffalo Bill show and gave much delight to the audience.

"Costly Slumber.—From Paris to Marseilles is about as far as from Chicago to Pittsburgh. Sleeping fans are about $10; total fare by night train about $30. Two cents a pound for baggage in excess of a measly fifty-six pounds. No wonder people travel by day in the refrigerator cars and try to keep warm by crawling under hunter and eating cakes. Not as demoralizing as the abstinence habit, but more insidious.

"American Music.—After a 'coon' song has earned a pension in the United States it comes over to Paris and is grabbed up as a startling novelty. All the 'revues' studded with songs popular at home about two years ago—Frenchmen believe that all Americans devote themselves, day in and day out, to accumulating vast wealth, and singing coon songs.

"Oysters.—Went to famous fish and oyster restaurant for dinner. The Gallic oyster wears a deep blush of shame and tastes like the day after taking calomel. Thought that horse-radish might improve, modify or altogether kill the taste, so I tried to order some. Knew that 'horse' was 'cheval' and 'red' was 'rouge,' but could not think of the French for 'ish,' so I had to do without. Somewhat discouraged about my French. Almost as bad as former American Consul, who, after eight years in Paris, had to send for an interpreter to find out what 'our' meant. Have got 'merc' down pat, but still pronounce it 'mercy.'

MARSEILLES.

"More Snow.—The further south we go the colder the weather, and the deeper the snow. Getting my fur ready for Cairo. Ten hours on the train from Paris to Marseilles, wrapped in a blanket and counting the pimples on a foreign commercial traveller who sat opposite. No two counts agreed. Had looked forward during a long month to this ride through sunny France. Had dreamed of green landscapes that lay smiling in the genial warmth, the

"The Ship's Barber.—Coming across from Marseilles in the djamper (German for boat) the weather, moderated so that I needed only one overcoat. Got acquainted with barber. Often have some trouble in making up with a captain, but can usually hit it off with the barberhood. Barber is a bureau of information, headquarters for scandal and knows what the run is going to be. The barber on the djamper no good. Shy on conversation, but he is an arithmetic. Charged me two francs for a shave, and when I suggested that he was rather high, he said he was compelled to take five francs and thirty centimes for the extra for being so particular. Barber told him I did not want any extra of vanilla, but he said there was no way of getting it back into the bottle. Besides, he had the money, so we compromised by permitting him to keep it. Said he loved to go to America. I told him there would probably be an opening in America for any one so energetic and muscular, and I promised to give him a letter to Armour & Co.

"Fires.—Fireworks.—A full hundred miles out at sea we made out an irregular oval of fire suspended in the sky—the two streams of lava, now trickling down Vesuvius. Finest landmark and sailing target a sailor could ask for. When we were forty miles away we wanted the captain to slow up for fear he would run into the mountain and injure it. Next morning in harbor we discovered that we were still ten miles away from it.

"The New Naples.—In ten years Naples has done a lot of sprucing up. Streets are cleaner, new and pretentious buildings have multiplied, smells have been eliminated. Guides, beggars and cabmen not so pestiferous as of yore, but still bad enough to deserve electrocution, provided some more lingering form of death could not be substituted. Cabmen seemed downcast. Municipality recently forbade any extra charge for cab service in a 'fiesta' or holiday. In Italy 30 days, but every 30 cents can be rung in under the head of 'fiestas.' Every American who landed in Naples found himself right in the midst of a 'fiesta' and had to pay two fares, or as much as thirty cents in gold, to ride around in one of the open hacks. Thirty cents would seem a reasonable charge, but not after you have seen the hack. The smaller or horse in Naples has the heaviest harness. Evidently a desire to have almost the same total weight in each case.

"Emigrants.—Alongside of our ship lay a German steamer about to sail for America. The tender made trips to and from the dock, and every time she came out she was filled to the last inch with Italian emigrants. We saw hundreds of them disappear into the ship, so many it seemed that they must have been packed in below by hydraulic pressure, otherwise they wouldn't have been room for them. All headed for the land of the free to build roads. Englishman wanted to know why there was such heavy emigrant traffic at this particular season. Told him they were hurrying over to vote at the April election in Chicago. He believed it. Come to think of it, I believe it myself."

This is Mr. Peasley's note book up to the present moment, just as we are departing for Alexandria. He admits that he may have overlooked a few minor points of interest, but he more than made up by neglecting to mention Napoleon's tomb or the Moulin Rouge. Since arriving in Naples this morning Mr. Peasley has arranged with the tourist agency to change his ticket, and he will accompany us to Egypt.

INTERESTING ACTION IN CHARLOTTETOWN COURTS

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., April 6.—Some weeks ago L. P. Tanton applied to the court of chancery for an injunction to restrain the city from selling his lands for nonpayment of taxes on the ground that certain sums were illegally voted by several councillors who he claimed were disqualified by reason of being peers to the city. It was also alleged that one of the assessors was disqualified, hence he said the civic assessment was all wrong, and practically civic chaos prevailed.

Yesterday the master of the rolls in chancery gave judgment against Tanton. The case created great interest.

The Tryon Woolen mills of Tryon were today sold to Major Schurman of Kensington for $2,000. A joint stock company will be formed to resume business which has been practically closed for some time.

Opposition Found Fault in House Friday.

Island Service May Have Ice-breaker

Montcalm Next Winter—Several Amendments Introduced.

OTTAWA, April 6.—The opposition made the fall of the West Block today a subject of criticism today, an unexpected large number of builders discovered themselves and gave the house their opinions on the way the contractor did his work and the way the government inspected. Looked after him. From the tumbled tower, criticism extended to all the public work done by the present government and eventually to a general indictment of the government in all departments. The passing of the motion to go into supply closed the episode.

The minister of justice introduced an amendment to the senate and house act. It is to provide indemnity for a member of parliament who is in Ottawa, but too ill to attend sittings. This provision was inadvertently omitted from the act passed last session.

Mr. J. Hughes of Prince Edward Island, asked if the ice-breaker now in a British shipyard, was to go on the Northumberland Strait, if the Montcalm was to be taken from the Saint Lawrence for the island winter service. The minister of marine replied that the island would get either the new boat or the Montcalm. It had not been decided which. The Montcalm was more powerful than the Stanley by 1,000 tons, and the Stanley by 800 tons. It had done splendid work in the ice at Cape Rouge, and in the St. Lawrence Gulf on the trip to Seven Islands. The officers of the marine department stated the Montcalm should be able to perform the island service.

The minister of labor told the house he had received a telegram from Winnipeg to send a man to enforce the alien labor act. This was in connection with the street car strike. He replied that he was competent to enforce the alien labor act with the consent of the provincial minister of justice.

Honorable minister of justice introduced an amendment to the supreme and exchequer court acts. When the supreme court was asked to express an opinion on the proposed Lord's Day legislation some of the judges doubted their jurisdiction, claiming they were a court of review only—competent to deal with appeals from other cases. They were not authorized to give opinions on abstract questions. Mr. Fitzpatrick said his bill would remove that doubt.

TORONTO, April 6.—The York Loan conspiracy developments are growing worse. The crown attorney characterizes it as a huge steal. President Phillips shows the strain of the long investigation. His hair has turned from black to gray.

TORONTO, April 6.—Indian reserves comprising 50,000 acres of good agricultural lands in the Rainy River district have been thrown open for settlement.

side, the white walls of the morning city on the other, Vesuvius looming in the distance behind a hazy curtain and tourists crowding the landscape in the immediate foreground.

Three big steamers are lying at anchor within the breakwater—one from Genoa, one from Marseilles and one from New York—and all heavily laden with Americans, some sixty of whom will be our fellow passengers to Alexandria. The hotels are overflowing with Yankee pilgrims, and every Neapolitan who has imitation coral and celluloid tortoise shell for sale is wearing an expectant smile.

The jack rabbit horses attached to the ramshackle little victorias lean wearily in their shafts, for these are busy days. The harvest days are at hand. The Americans have come. An English woman who had seen the horde in the streets here remarked to a friend this morning, "It must be awfully lonesome in America just at present. And she meant it, too."

It has been a fairly busy week for Mr. Peasley. Mr. Peasley is addicted to the habit of taking notes. Every night at the hotel he takes out a small leather bound book, presented to him by an insurance company in America in appreciation of the fact that he has paid the company all his ready money

The name of Don Quixote spelled despair to the Spaniards. Time after time their best-laid schemes, owned that he was an appreciative enemy. "I want to say more than for the existence of the world, in one of his have taken his own life."
